FACES ANOTHER DISASTER

Soggy South Dakota cleans up, awaits tourists

Editor's note: South Dakota Gov. Richard Kneip, fearing economic catastrophe for his already disaster-ridden state, flew news writers into Rapid City last week not only to survey the damage caused by the June 9 flood, but to bear witness that the state has recovered and is ready for tourists. The tourist industry is second only to agriculture, and officials feel that should tourism lag — as it has since the flood — the state could face economic ruin.

RAPID CITY, S.D.—Four boys sat silently on what was once the foundation of a house, watching as a giant clamshell dug into debris piled up against a shattered bridge across Rapid Creek.

The mechanical fist clenched around ribbons of lumber, muddy, dripping clothing and parts of cars and trailers, all meshed together, lifting the debris into dump trucks which are depositing similar loads at a rate of 250 an hour in this city's rapidly filling dumpsites.

Suddenly, as one, the boys stood up.

The giant arm had closed around the splintered siding of one of the 800 homes destroyed in the nation's worst flood in 35 years. But it had also closed around the mud-caked body of a six-year-old boy.

To the four boys it was a sight they would never forget.

The body that dangled from the crane was their pal—the boy with whom they had played only a few weeks earlier.

The gushing floodwaters which had poured down from the Black Hills, swelling stream beds and gathering momentum as it rushed towards this city of 43,000, had spared the four brothers, but had made their friend the 230th victim.

But the tragedy that hit Rapid City didn't start with the finding of the young boy's body, and it will not end there.

It started when 14 inches of rain fell in three hours. It started with the scream of the first victim—swept away by a five-foot wall of water as he lay in a sleeping bag at the foot of Mt. Rushmore.

It continued and grew as it rampaged downstream, tossing cars and housetrailers into the branches of giant Pine trees, pushing huge houses before it like a giant hand playing with toys.

As it took housetrailers and campers and homes, it took people.

The list of dead grows daily.

There was eight-year-old Ronald Ozuna of Belle Fourche, his brother, Arnold, 7, and his kid-brother Stanley, 5. All died together.

Alberta Starr drowned with her two children, Louis, 9, and Annette, 2. She was buried with Annette in her arms.

The Sampsill family of Jackson Park now consists of Ralph Sampsill Jr. He was the only one left alive. The waters took his mother, Marine, 35, his father, Ralph, 37, and his two brothers, Bill, 11, and Michael, 8.

Seven-year-old Shannon Taylor, her brother, William, 6, and another brother, Allen, 3, were buried last week by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Taylor.

Sharon Ferber, 31, died with her two children, Leon, 6, and Noel, 3.

The Rawlans family of Dows, Iowa, was found drowned. Ages and next of kin are unknown. There are four names on the coroner's roster—Arlene, Brenda, Lori and Julie. Nine-year-old Tracy Winsel and her two-year-old sister, Lisa, were swept away from their home by the rush of water. Their bodies were found several days later, but their mother, Rachael, is still missing.

But the list of dead isn't only the names of the young.

Gertrude and Rufus Coldwell were each 74.

Nixon, voicing doubts, signs 20% SS hike

Cites danger of $3.7 billion deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon signed on Saturday a 20 per cent boost in Social Security benefits to start in September. But he called the measure fiscally irresponsible and said it will cause a $3.7-billion deficit that must be offset by cuts in other programs.

The Social Security measure, the biggest money increase in the program's history, was tied to a bill extending the nation's $450-billion debt ceiling through Oct. 31 of this year.

This linkage, sponsored by Democrats in Congress but voted for by most Republicans, made it impossible for Nixon to veto the Social Security boost without killing the increase in the debt ceiling. Had the ceiling not been increased it would have automatically dropped to $400 billion, thus crippling the government fiscally.

Among his serious objections, Nixon said in a White House statement shortly before departing for a two-week stay in California, is that this set the stage for what could be "a frantic, election-eve scramble to attach a whole collection of seemingly attractive, politically popular but fiscally irresponsible riders" to the next debt-ceiling bill.

HE SAID he is placing Congress on notice now that if this occurs and offsetting cuts in other programs cannot be made, "then I will not hesitate to exercise my right and responsibility to veto."

Congress rushed through the measure Friday just before recessing until July 17 and made it possible for the Social Security payments to be reflected in checks received Oct. 3—a month before the election.

The Social Security provisions also provide for future automatic increases linked to cost-of-living rises. And it includes prompt tax refunds for those who suffered from the Hurricane Agnes and South Dakota flood disasters. Nixon hailed both of these features.

He said the automatic cost-of-living increase "constitutes a major breakthrough for older Americans" by providing a hedge against inflation, which he says he has long urged.

Nixon signed a batch of more than 16 bills before his departure.

He approved bills to:

—Provide up to 13 extra weeks of unemployment compensation for workers who have exhausted their benefits. It particularly affects states where unemployment remains high. The extension remains until Dec. 31, 1972.

—Provide an additional $200 million for disaster relief which will principally aid areas of five Eastern states hit by Agnes—New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and Florida.

Funds will be available also to help in continuing recovery efforts from the San Fernando earthquake in California and flash floods in Rapid City, S.D., and Buffalo Creek, W. Va.

Nixon had sought to head off the 20 per cent Social Security rider, attached under the sponsorship of Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho. Republicans wanted to cut the increase to 10 per cent and accused Democrats of playing politics. But it passed by 82-4 in the Senate and 302-35 in the House.

Nixon said that the measure was not fully funded and imposes considerable additional tax burdens on all wage-earners. But he said he had given his approval because of "my deep concern for the well-being of our older Americans. They both need and deserve a significant

Saigon skyjacker foiled, shot by U.S. serviceman

SAIGON (Sunday) (UPI) — A man tentatively identified as a Japanese apparently tried to hijack a Pan American 747 jumbo jet to Hanoi today but was shot and wounded by a U.S. serviceman passenger as the plane was landing at Saigon, eyewitnesses said.

All passengers left the plane safely by way of emergency escape slides when the plane made its scheduled landing in Saigon's Tan Son Nhut Airbase, but some suffered skin burns on their knees and elbows.

The foiled hijacker was given medical attention on the airport's sun-bathed runway.

Pan Am Flight 841 was on a regular flight from San Francisco via Honolulu and Guam to Saigon. The Sunday flight does not stop at Manila.

Spokesman for Pan American refused any immediate statement and forbade flying personnel or other employes to make statements. However, initial eyewitness reports provided a rough description of what happened.

One eyewitness said that as the plane was approaching Saigon, a man of Japanese appearance told the stewardesses he had a bomb or grenade and would blow up the plane unless it were diverted to Hanoi.

The hijacker remained in the passenger cabin and had the stewardesses passing notes to the pilot's cabin.

He became increasingly agitated as the plane approached Saigon, eyewitnesses said. At that point about five passengers jumped him and one of them shot him.

First reports said five shots were fired by a man in American military uniform and four of them hit the hijacker in the back.

The plane arrived more than 2½ hours late.

A little over a year ago a plane was hijacked from Manila to the Asian mainland. The Philippines Airline plane was hijacked from Manila to Hong Kong and thence to Canton, China.

The hijacker in that case said they wanted to go to Peking. But Chinese authorities took them off the plane at Canton and had it flown back intact to Manila.

Navy shells N. Viet junks; Quang Tri drive halted

SAIGON, Sunday (UPI) — U.S. Navy destroyers have shelled Communist junks and sampans unloading a foreign freighter one mile off the North Vietnamese coast, destroying three of the boats and damaging another, the U.S. Command said today.

Spokesmen declined to identify the nationality of the ocean-going freighter, which was unloading on the shore [illegible] ase it was unable to enter any [illegible] n major North Vietnamese [illegible] mined by U.S. planes earlier. The freighter was not fired upon.

The guided missile destroyer Berkeley and the destroyers Gurke and Everett F. Larson took part in the shelling which occurred Thursday. It was the first time the command has admitted firing on Communist boats unloading supplies.

On the battle fronts torrential rains bogged down a giant South Vietnamese push to recapture Quang Tri City from the North Vietnamese Saturday, and Viet Cong guerrillas closed in on a provincial capital only a three-hour drive from Saigon.

UPI correspondent Barney Seibert, reporting from the northern front, said the tropical rain brought South Vietnam's 20,000-man Quang Tri campaign virtually to a halt.

Tanks and trucks sank into the mud. Government marines and paratroopers engaged in the four-day-old drive tried to keep dry under tents made of ponchos.

Seibert said North Vietnamese artillery, however, laid down heavy barrages against Highway 1 from the My Chanh River northern defense line to Quang Tri City, 12 miles to the north.

President signs huge shipbuilding contract

Todd awarded pact to build four tankers

By LOU GODFREY
Staff Writer

President Nixon announced Saturday the signing of $660 million in contracts for federally subsidized construction of 16 new merchant marine vessels, including a $79.4-million contract with Todd Shipyards Corp. of San Pedro for four 35,000-ton tankers.

The contracts, signed Friday, are expected to create 36,000 new jobs in the nation's shipyards and related industries and 800 jobs on the ships over the next three years.

The President said the contracts help him meet his goal "to restore United States to the rank of a first class maritime power."

The government will provide $284 million for the construction projects, representing a subsidy of 43 per cent. The latest contracts bring to $1.1 billion the total shipbuilding contracts signed since Nixon began a revitalization of the merchant fleet in 1970.

THE FOUR tankers to be built by Todd Shipyards are for Sea Service Tankers Inc. of New York City.

Other contracts went to:

National Steel and Shipbuilding Co., San Diego, for three 87,000-ton oil tankers, costing $83.6 million, for the Aeron Marine Shipping Co. of Lake Success, Long Island, N.Y.

Bethlehem Steel Corp.'s Sparrows Point, Md., yard, three 265,000-ton tankers, costing $210.2 million, for MFC-Boston Tankers, Inc., a Massachusetts company.

Seatrain Shipbuilding Corp., Brooklyr., N.Y., three 225,000-ton tankers priced at $171.9 million, for Seatrain Lines Inc. of Weehawken, N.J.

Bath Iron Works Corp. of Bath, Maine, three 18,900-ton, roll-on, roll-off, freighters, which carry truck trailers and other wheeled cargo, costing $114.1 million, for States Steamship Co. of San Francisco.

Nixon met in his office with shipbuilding and shipowner representatives, union and government officials to hail the contracts which are the largest peacetime shipbuilding awards since a government subsidy program was started in 1936.

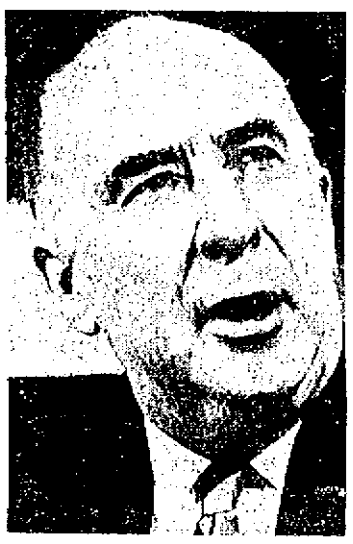

The five contracts were signed just before a Friday midnight deadline that would have reduced the government subsidy rate from 43 to 41 per cent.

Asked why the government had not waited until the lower rates went into effect, Commerce Secretary Peter G. Peterson said it was "quite possible that without the added incentive some of these ships would not have been built."

Arizona prion riot quelled in an hour

FLORENCE, Ariz. (AP) — A riot reportedly broke out late Saturday night in a cell block at the Arizona State Prison, but officials said that it was quelled within an hour.

The riot occurred within about two months of a sit-down strike at the prison in support of 13 grievances. The strike lasted for 16 days.

JOHN MITCHELL

CLARK MacGREGOR

Mitchell resigns post as Nixon campaign head

By ROBERT B. SEMPLE JR.
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — John Mitchell, one of the capital's most powerful men during the last three years, resigned Saturday as President Nixon's campaign manager following what amounted to an ultimatum from his wife that he choose either her or politics.

In a letter to the President dated Friday, Mitchell said he had "eagerly" anticipated devoting "all my time and energy" to Nixon's re-election effort, but had found that "I can no longer do so and still meet the one obligation which must come first: The happiness and welfare of my wife and daughter."

IN REPLY, Nixon said he appreciated the "compelling reasons" for Mitchell's decision and then moved swiftly to find a successor.

Early Saturday afternoon, the Committee to Re-elect the President announced that Clark MacGregor would become the new campaign director and that Mitchell would serve the committee in an advisory capacity.

MacGregor currently is the President's chief adviser on congressional relations. He served 10 years in the House of Representatives as a Congressman from Minnesota before failing in a try for the Senate in 1970.

In recent days, Mitchell's outspoken and often controversial wife, Martha, has resurfaced in a series of extraordinary newspaper interviews in which she has set forth her conviction, in no uncertain terms, that her husband must leave politics.

AT LEAST two of these interviews were based on telephone calls which Mrs. Mitchell placed to Helen Thomas, a reporter for United Press International, from various parts of the county. Thursday, June 22, she called Miss Thomas from California with her first threat to leave her husband, and described herself as a "political prisoner."

Last Sunday, in a call from the Westchester Country Club in Rye, N.Y., Mrs. Mitchell told Miss Thomas she loved her husband "very much" but reaffirmed her decision to leave him unless he abandoned politics and "all those dirty things that go on" in the political world.

Reached by telephone the same day, Mitchell said his wife's decision was "news to me," but he left on Monday for Rye after a conference with the President. He and Mrs. Mitchell remained at the club for three days in seclusion. Mitchell then returned to Washington and disclosed his decision to the President at the White House Friday.

THE PUBLISHED reports of Mrs. Mitchell's telephone calls caused comment in the White House and elsewhere in official Washington, and even momentary embarrassment among some Republicans, but investigation Saturday turned up no evidence that any pressure had been applied on Mitchell to resign.

Civil rights path wrong?

Combined News Services

In a pensive, hopeful but not too optimistic mood, Roy Wilkins, executive director of the nation's largest civil rights organization, sat in his office this week and expressed his doubts that the civil rights movement took the most productive direction possible 10 years ago.

"I'm convinced," Wilkins said, "that if we had spent as much time in the past 10 years, '62 to '72, knuckling down and learning things that no man could take away from us, that we would have been farther ahead now than we are. The atmosphere would be changing."

Wilkins, whose National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, begins its 63rd annual convention in Detroit Monday, said:

"I'm not wishing for peace and happiness and love and all like that," but better academic, intellectual and technical preparation would have enabled black people to take advantage of "the opportunities that are now open to us."

What the rights movement accomplished, he said, was that black people got "respect, in some places it would get a fear of you, it would force people to respect you as a human being entitled to all the rights and privileges of other human beings.

"But it didn't get you a job . . . that's all I'm saying."

Now only two months away from his 71st birthday, Wilkins also said, wistfully, that despite Negroes' gains, "I don't know about human frailties, about whether human beings are going to get rid of but so much prejudice, but so much racial feeling."

Aristocratic

Exiled Prince Alexander of Yugoslavia married Brazilian Princess Dona Maria da Orleans Braganza at a village near Sevilla, Spain, Saturday night.

More than 500 aristocrats from Europe were jostled by hundreds of townspeople at the Serbian Orthodox ceremony.

Guests included Britain's Princess Anne; exiled King Constantine of Greece and his wife, Queen Anne Marie; exiled King Umberto of Italy; and Spain's future king, Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon and his wife, Princess Sofie.

The groom is the son of the last king of Yugoslavia and the godson of Queen Elizabeth II of Britain. The bride is the great-granddaughter of the last emperor of Brazil.

Protocol slip

Angie Biddle Duke, former chief of protocol during the Kennedy administration, was arrested in New York early Saturday on charges of drunken driving.

Police said Duke was arrested after his car struck two parked cars. One car was demolished and his auto and the other were badly damaged.

Duke, 56, who gave his occupation as retired diplomat, was submitted to a breathalyzer test and the reading showed .17. A reading of .10 is considered drunkenness.

Fischer's move

American chess champion Bobby Fischer failed Saturday night to board the last regularly scheduled flight from New York to Iceland which would get him there in time for the start of the world championship matches with Russia's Boris Spassky.

There were reports Fischer had asked for a two-day postponement in the start of the tournament, and Dr. Max Euwe, president of the International Chess Federation, said in opening ceremonies in Iceland that a postponement would be granted. Others said Fischer would be disqualified if he did not appear.

Fischer was reportedly holding out for more money.

Overzealous

An appeals court at Patras, Greece, sentenced Dimitrios Kolouris, 34, a photographer, to 70 days imprisonment Saturday for endangering the security of airplanes while trying to get pictures of Mrs. Aristotle Onassis.

A lower court on Kefkas Island had sentenced him to six months on the same charge.

U.N. delegates often abuse privileges of parking, booze

New York Times Service

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — The United States, sounding like a host with difficult guests, has begun to complain openly that some diplomats use too much tax-free liquor and tobacco, neglect to pay their bills and park their cars where they shouldn't.

Christopher H. Phillips, Deputy U.S. representative of the United Nations, was moved to mention a few "flagrant cases" recently here after having listened for weeks to delegates airing their complaints about working and living conditions in New York City. The complaints were renewed recently at a meeting of the Committee on Host Country Relations, with some delegates demanding increased security for their missions.

Reminding committee members that New York City and Washington provided many services to the U.N diplomatic community of 27,000 Phillips mentioned the abuses attributed to the diplomats.

One diplomat, during a three-month period, has sought tax exemptions for 2,500 bottles of liquor, Phillips said. He pointed out that the U.S. delegation, which has one of the largest staffs here used only 800 bottles for an entire year.

Experienced party-givers here estimate that a typical official party for 1,000 guests used no more than 20 to 25 cases of liquor, or a total of 240 to 300 bottles, and few delegations entertain often on such a scale.

IN THE course of a two-hour diplomatic reception, it was reported, the 30 guests may take four drinks each, but the average delegate stops at two and many abstain completely — at least in public.

U.S. authorities said there was no evidence to show that any of the tax-free liquor was being sold for profit. A case of 12 bottles of tax and duty-free liquor cost about $22, compared with $88 when tax and duty are added.

However, it was noted that delegations frequently gave liquor as gifts and that an openhanded diplomat could bestow any number of cases on friends.

The most resented abuse of privileges by diplomats, said Phillips, involved parking. On two evenings in May, New York City police reported that 25 parked automobiles with diplomatic license plates were blocking fire hydrants.

Some delegates also are recurrently deliquent in paying electric, rent and telephone bills, Phillips reported. Although he did not identify the erring delegates, American officials said that it was not uncommon for certain representatives here to run up phone bills of several thousand dollars during a single month, with hour-long calls abroad.

PATTI WILLIAMS, RIGHT, AND CATHY HILTON POLISH UP OLD CAR CALLED MAX

22 DAYS, 3,500 MILES

Pair plan trip in Model A

By DENISE KUSEL
Staff Writer

Summer is the time for adventure.

And two 20-year-old Long Beach girls are about to embark on an adventure with a capital "A."

That's "A" as in Model A.

And adventure as in a 22-day round trip to Canada — via Seattle and a stopover at the National Model A Club meet July 13 — in a 1929 roadster named Max.

Cathy Hilton and Patti Williams, both graduates of Wilson High School and both currently in their sophomore year in college Cathy is attending U.S.C Patti is a student at Long Beach City College. They plan to embark on their 3,500 mile trek on July 8.

"We're planning to leave about 3 a.m.," Cathy said. "It's something we've been wanting to do for almost two years."

The roadster belongs to Cathy's father, who according to Cathy, "didn't really take the whole trip idea seriously until he saw the maps and heard us making reservations."

Jack Hilton bought the black and blue Model A for $65, restored it, and now 15 years and 27 trophies later, it's worth about $5,000.

Undaunted by the fact the car only goes 45 m.p.h., doesn't have windows, and has only one windshield wiper (which operates manually), the girls — armed wtih a tool box, yellow rain slickers, two duffle bags, and the ability to change a tire, hope to make it to Seattle in four days. The rest of the time will be spent touring Western Canada and coming home through Idaho where they hope to try their luck at a little fishing.

"I've had daily briefings and mechanical quizzes from my father," Cathy explained. "For example, the other night at dinner, he looked at me across the table and said, 'What's wrong if you're riding along and the car cuts off and dies?' And I answered, 'It's either an electrical problem or the gas line is plugged.' And then he just smiled and went back to eating his stew."

What about mechanical ability?

"Well, we won a tire changing contest at Wilson High School," Patti said. "We were the fastest . . . oh, they didn't see us kick the jack to get it out . . . or use the wrong end of the pliers."

Pliers . . . you know . . . that funny tool you use to open jars with.

Russians are coming—for fish

The Russians are coming, but there won't be any cause for alarm when a Soviet vessel anchors several miles offshore a few weeks from now.

The Soviet fisheries research vessel Ogon is scheduled to arrive in Seattle July 10 to begin a study of fish populations off the coasts of California, Oregon, Washington and British Columbia..

While the ship is in Seattle, U. S. and Soviet scientists will discuss fisheries research matters. The Soviet researchers will be given tags to apply to blackcod, a deep water fish found from the California coast to Asian waters.

U. S. fisheries scientists will be aboard the Ogon when it sails from Seattle. The ship will be permitted to operate inside the 12-mile fishing limit and will carry a "fisheries research sign to make sure it is not identified as a foreign fishing vessel.

Three killed in 3-car collision in Long Beach

Three persons were killed in a three-car traffic accident in North Long Beach early Saturday.

Dead are:

—Daniel W. Robinatt, 34, of 13721 Wake Ave., Santa Ana.

—Ralston A. Talbott, 60, of 927 Paradise Lane, Long Beach.

—An unidenitfied man whom police said was driving a stolen car.

Police said the stolen car was westbound on Artesia Boulevard at high speed when it slammed into Robinatt's car at the Atlantic Avenue intersection at 3:40 a.m.

It then struck a third car, driven by John D. Elkins, 31, of 5227 Premier Ave., Lakewood.

Police said that Talbott was a passenger in Robinatt's auto.

The driver of the stolen car was taken to Dominguez Valley Hospital where he died at 10:30 a.m. Robinatt and Talbott died shortly after the accident.

Car driver held in sailor's death

One sailor was killed and another critically injured early Saturday morning when their bicycle was struck at the intersection of Daisy Avenue and West Ocean Boulevard by an auto which fled the scene.

Dead on arrival at St. Mary's Hospital was Michael Williams, 20, of Covington, Ga., stationed aboard the USS Chandler. His shipmate, Pete C. Eggleston, 19, of Reno, Nev., was listed as in very critical condition at the same hospital.

Held on charges of felony hit and run was Charles Richard Kemper, 29, 613 E. Esther St., Long Beach. Kemper was arrested at his home a short while after the incident, police reported.

Three schools damaged in rash of vandalism

Vandals caused an estimated $10,000 damage to 14 classrooms in Norwalk's Studebaker Elementary School Saturday, sheriff's deputies said.

The damage was discovered at 8 p.m. when a security guard noticed a desk burning in one of the rooms. Small fires had been set throughout the school and the classrooms ransacked, deputies said. 11800 Halcourt Ave.

In unrelated incidents, sheriff's deputies arrested four teenaged boys in connection with vandalism at Northview Junoir High School in Duarte.

Investigators said 200 windows in the school were broken. Vandals also broke 25 windows in automobiles and homes in the area.

An estimated $5,000 to $10,000 damage was caused at the 42nd Street Elementary School in Los Angeles by youngsters who ransacked the cafeteria, classrooms, the teachers' lounge and the main office.

Police said the vandals splattered ink and milk on walls, ruined school records and started a small fire.

Officers arrested two youngsters, 5 and 7 years old. Older youths are being sought in connection with the vandalism.

Southwest Division police said the youths used a key to get into the building.

Pilot asks less media news about hijacking

The president of the Air Line Pilots Association urged the news media Saturday to voluntarily play down stories on successful skyjackings and play up unsuccessful ones.

"I think if the press were to play down skyjackings which are successful and only play up those which are unsuccessful,eventually the depraved mind that undertakes these things would get the idea that no one ever gets away with it," Donald McBain said.

The United Airlines flight captain testified before a State Senate subcommittee on civil disorders holding a hearing in Los Angeles into the problem of airline hijackings.

McBain also said he thought the news media should stop reporting hijackings in progress on a voluntary basis.

He said he was worried because of the high rate of successful skyjacking attempts, and added, "there are still 117 hijackers roaming free in various parts of the earth."

McBain told the hearing that airlines no longer can maintain the responsibility for air security and that if the hijackings are to be stopped, they must be halted on the ground.

DANGER OF FIRES CLOSES FORESTS

The U.S. Forest Service closed about 25 per cent of the Angeles and San Bernardino national forests to recreational use Saturday because of fire danger.

Access to the areas, 250,000 acres in Angeles National Forest and 200,000 acres in San Bernardino National Forest, will be allowed by special permit only, a spokesman said.

The areas closed include watershed covered by grass and bush, he added.

Gas station worker jailed in gun death

A service station attendant was jailed on suspicion of shooting a customer to death in the Lennox district of South Los Angeles, sheriff's deputies said Saturday.

Edwin McCoy, 40, of 16433 Hawthorne Blvd., Hawthorne, was booked on suspicion of murder late Friday after the fatal shooting of Clarence McCarter, 28, of 1914 E. 124th St., Compton.

The shooting followed an argument over auto repairs at a Gulf service station at Century and Normandie boulevards, deputies said.

They said McCarter had been shot once with a .32-caliber automatic.

Court denies petition by Daley challengers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Supreme Court Justice William H. Rehnquist denied Saturday a petition by the successful challengers to Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley's Democratic Convention delegation to throw out a Chicago court action that would prevent the challengers from being seated in Miami Beach.

In turning down the petition, Rehnquist noted that the Supreme Court is in recess until October and therefore would have no chance to review the judgment unless a special session was called.

"I simply do not believe that it is the same type of case which has caused the court to convene in special session on previous occasions," Rehnquist said in his opinion.

The action meant that the challenged delegates will go back to state court and fight the decision at the state level.

Daley had filed suit in Cook County Circuit Court to block the challengers.

A federal district court in Chicago had halted that action, but a three-judge panel of the Court of Appeals held Thursday that the Daley delegation could go ahead with its injunction effort.

The challengers wanted the Supreme Court to overturn the appellate court decision.

MEANWHILE, a bomb threat interrupted a hearing of the Democratic Convention Credentials Committee, forcing members to call an early recess for dinner. The threat turned out to be a prank, police said.

The insurgent Chicago delegation was awarded 59 Cook County convention seats last night by the Credentials Committee, which held that Daley's Democratic organization had violated party reform rules in putting its slate together.

The challengers are expecting Daley to fight the committee ruling on the convention floor, but so far there has been no word from the embattled Chicago mayor.

At the moment the Daley forces are pursuing their fight in the courts. Besides taking on the challengers in the Cook County courts they are expected to go into federal court in Washington Monday with an attack on the party rules covering delegate selection.

DALEY reportedly has scheduled a meeting with top political and legal aides in Chicago Wednesday to lay plans for the convention.

A leader of the insurgent movement, Chicago Alderman William Singer, said at a Washington news conference he expected the challengers to survive all court and convention battles and to be seated at Miami Beach.

Singer said he thinks the Credentials Committee action had stripped Daley of the last vestiges of political power that he once wielded in the Democratic party outside Chicago.

"It was his power to broker conventions with his bloc of uncommitted delegates that made Daley a power in national politics," Singer said. "That is no longer the case."

Singer said the unseating of the Daley delegation also was a shattering blow to the Cook County political organization that Daley had built into one of the most effective in the country.

"His power in Cook County has been eroding tremendously in the last eight months," Singer said. "This carries the erosion further."

SINGER, a supporter of Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota for the Democratic presidential nomination, said he realized the rejection of Daley by the convention would open a deep rift in his party.

"There will be a lot of short-range problems," he said. "But in the long run the people affected by these party reforms, particularly the young people, are going to bring great strength to the Democratic Party."

Meanwhile, the credentials panel proceeded with other cases.

It agreed with a challenge that women were under represented in the Missouri delegation and added 12 women — each with half a vote, taken away from 12 of the male delegates already certified.

The committee also voted 106 to 1 to accept a compromise adding 18 women to the Pennsylvania delegation, each with half a vote taken from a delegate already certified.

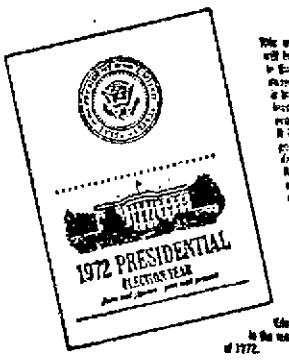

MICHAEL MALIN, a Pennsylvania delegate, said the plan had been approved by Gov. Milton J. Shapp and that McGovern would have the support of five of the additions, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey eight and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie five. They will be chosen by the state Democratic committee.

After two challenges were abandoned, the committee voted to seat the delegation certified for Tennessee. Mrs. Bornelia Bradshaw of Memphis withdrew her challenge to the entire delegation in a speech saying her "black brothera and sisters" had been brainwashed. A challenge to the Eight District delegation was not pressed.

The Tennessee delegation is commited to Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama, winner of the presidential primary.

McGovern warns he'll run as third party candidate

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sen. George McGovern warned in an interview published Saturday that if he is denied the Democratic presidential nomination "by an illegitimate power play" he will run as an independent or support another independent candidate to spoil the chances of the Democratic nominee.

McGovern said in the interview in Life magazine he believed he had earned the nomination and "if a bunch of old established politicians gang up" to take it from him he will "repudiate the whole process."

The South Dakota Senator earlier this week blasted as "an incredible, cynical, rotten political steal" the decision by the Democratic Convention's Credentials Committee taking away 153 of the 271 California delegates he won in the state's winner-take-all primary. The delegates were considered crucial to McGovern's chances for a first ballot nomination.

"I THINK I have come to the point now where I have earned the nomination," he said in the interview. "And if a bunch of old established politicians gang up to prevent me from getting the nomination because I didn't come to them for help — just a negative, spiteful movement that subverts the Democratic process — if I feel that has happened, then I will not let them get away with it.

"There's been so much hard work and emotion poured into the campaign by so many thousands of people — it would be such an infuriating, disillusioning experience for them all — that I would repudiate the whole process," he said.

"I would run as an independent or support somebody else on an independent ticket. So if I'm denied the nomination by an illegitimate power play, that nomination will not be worth anything to the person who gets it."

McGovern said he was convinced in early 1969 when he decided to run that he could win the nomination.

DeBaun raps Deuk on no-fault move

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

G.C. DeBaun, Democratic nominee for State Senate, 37th District, has attacked incumbent George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, for failure to vote in committee on the no-fault insurance bill.

DeBaun told a bipartisan women's group in Whittier that Deukmejian, by abstaining, "kept the bill from going out of the Senate Judiciary Committee and onto the floor, an action just as bad as his 'no' vote on no-fault insurance last year."

He said that Deukmejian is not properly handling other priority issues like property taxes, school financing, unemployment, transportation, environment, municipalities "and lacks interest in equal rights for women."

DeBaun said he is optimistic about defeating Deukmejian in November for the "obvious" reason. He said he drew more popular votes than Deukmejian in the June primary when each candidate was unopposed on his own ballot despite Deukmejian's 10 years of incumbency.

According to DeBaun's reading of results they indicated voters prefer a senator who will truly represent all the people of the district "rather than as a senator who is so oriented in the direction of the legal branch of government." Deukmejian is an attorney.

A "First Hurrah" party will kickoff the campaign of Dennis Murray, Democratic nominee for Congress in the Long Beach area 42nd District at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Collector's, 324 E. First St., Long Beach.

The party, styled after a political convention of the 1880's, will have dancing, cocktails and games and is open to the public at $2.50 a person.

BELLFLOWER DEMOS

Conrad Truhey, Democratic nominee for Congress, 23rd District, will speak at the 7:30 p.m. Thursday meeting of the Bellflower Democratic Club in the board room of the Administration Building, Bellflower School District, 16703 Clark St., Bellflower. President Bob York will preside.

FORGER AT CONVENTION SITE KNOWN

MIAMIA BEACH (UPI) — A professional counterfeiter, determined to duplicate delegate tickets and create havoc at the Democratic National Convention, is under Secret Service surveillance, it was disclosed Saturday.

Richard J. Murphy, the convention manager, told United Press International that "there is already a professional counterfeiter in town.

"The counterfeiter is known to the Secret Service, and intelligence sources have told the service that he has come with the avowed purpose of counterfeiting the tickets."

Rapid City still digging out of flood devastation

Dr. Richard Crowder was 51; his son, Danny, was 16, when they died.

Henry Hausmann was 75. His son, Donald, was 45, and his daughter-in-law Doris, was 40. All died.

The young and the old died. The rich and the poor died. The mindless water, sweeping from the exclusive Dark Canyon area of Rapid City to the shack areas of town where the poor Indians lived, was oblivious to status.

IT SWEPT OFF the family of Wounded Arrow and Long Soldier and it swept away former city judge Raymond Fox, and Dr. Lowell Dieter, a professor at the South Dakota School of Mines.

And it swept away more than 40 others who are still missing, believed to be under piles of debris that line the five-mile-long path taken by the water

The giant cranes lift debris gently onto the dump trucks as they attempt to clear away the last vestiges of the flood. Beneath the debris, they believe, are the bodies of the missing -- and perhaps others caught unexpectedly while camping in the Black Hills of South Dakota.

South Dakota's death toll is rising daily as rescue workers uncover more bodies. The count now stands at 230 dead. One body remains unidentified.

Property loss was estimated $300 million. Eight thousand cars—new and used—were wiped out. Along with 800 homes, some 500 mobile homes were lost.

The rampaging waters cut a swath five blocks wide and five miles long through Rapid City, in many spots leaving nothing above ground but foundations of homes.

BUT THE clean-up is almost as unbelievable as the damage done by water.

Dump trucks run in convoys to the city dump, carrying household belongings, fireplaces, sides of buildings, cribs and asphalt. Automobiles are towed to the city's "graveyard of cars". Although some look comparatively clean—no dents or broken windows—the mechanical parts are irreparable.

"No used car dealer in Rapid City will accept a flooded car as a trade-in," one Rapid City businessman said, "because they will 'blow up' within three weeks. The silt can't be gotten out of the engine and transmission, etc.

"What's happening to them," he admits with a frown, "is that a Los Angeles salvage dealer has agreed to take them all to the west coast. He's going to sell them as used cars. I sure feel sorry for the folks out there. Those cars'll never make it through the month."

TWO OF THE city's new car agencies—one with a big shipment of new cars brought in the day before the flood—were demolished. The buildings were torn off foundations and the cars stacked two and three high.

But the agencies were back in business by the end of the second week.

And thus it is with the entire city.

Although a Salvation Army emergency center—to feed the hungry—is still in operation and cleanup crews work overtime, evidence of the devastation is fast disappearing.

The waters washed much of the ground clean—not only of vegetation but of structures. In two areas—Canyon Lake and a children's park — the devastation can be seen immediately. Crews have been unable to clean the areas because the ground is still too wet and equipment sinks into the soil.

BUT ALTHOUGH the area has seemed to weather one tragedy, another faces the state, according to South Dakota Governor Richard Kneip.

"We had a disaster in loss of life. We've had a disaster in loss of property. We don't need any more disasters, especially economic," he told newsmen surveying the flood damage.

The new disaster his state is facing, the governor said frankly, was indeed economic. Tourists, the state's second largest industry—only next to agriculture—had abandoned the state fearing the flood had wiped out roads as well as tourist facilities.

In the three weeks since the flood, officials say, at least 150,000 tourists have cancelled their plans to visit the state's Bad Lands or Black Hills or view the faces of four presidents on Mt. Rushmore.

However one per cent of the motels in the area have been affected, tourism officials claim, and no campgrounds are involved. Roads torn out by the floding have been repaired. Only a few minor "county" roads are still washed out, they say.

South Dakotans, with the unbelievable grit of the midwesterner, buried their dead, tended their sick, cooked for the hungry, repaired their roads and cleaned up the debris which littered the landscape.

Now they're awaiting their friends—three and a half million tourists that visit the state each year.

If they don't come, the gritty South Dakotans will face another tragedy: economic disaster.

Lab aide held, charged with revenge killing

RICHMOND (UPI) — Charles A. Taylor, 29, has been arrested on charges of killing an ex-convict who had been charged but later acquitted of killing the suspect's mother.

Contra Costa County sheriff's deputies quoted Taylor as saying, "Yes, I killed him because he shot my mother."

Taylor, a laboratory inspector for the Union Oil Co., was accused of shooting Sam Mullins, 38, whose last address was a halfway house for ex-felons in Los Angeles.

Investigators said the slaying took place in a shoe shop while gambling was under way.

A jury in 1964 acquitted Mullins of killing Mrs. Waynetta P. Smith. He was later sent to prison for burglary.

Facts You Should Know About Topaz and Turquoise

by Tony Chaparro

The booklet "Facts You Should Know About Jewelry" by the Better Business Bureau Educational Division has some interesting facts about topaz and turquoise.

Topaz – Usually colorless or very pale in tint, but yellow, from pale to bright sherry tint, also pale blue and pale green, and a rose-pink produced by heating. Takes beautiful polish. The genuine, when rubbed will pick up paper, (as will also genuine amber). Earlier civilizations did not differentiate between transparent yellow stones and called them all topaz. Until recently, Citrine, the yellow variety of quartz (of which the purple variety is amethyst) has been known to most jewelers as topaz, the true topaz being distinguished as Precious Topaz or Brazilian Topaz. Citrine should be described as Topaz Quartz so as to distinguish it from true topaz. The topaz or topaz quarts is the Birthstone for November.

Turquoise – Ranks highest of all opaque of all opaque stones. The finest color is deep blue, but other colors are greenish, azure blue, greenish blue, and bluish green. All turquoise may turn greenish or darker with age. Because it fractures easily, the turquoise should be given care in wearing and should not be allowed to come in contact with soap, grease or other materials which might discolor it. The turquoise (or lapis lazuli) is the Birthstone for December.

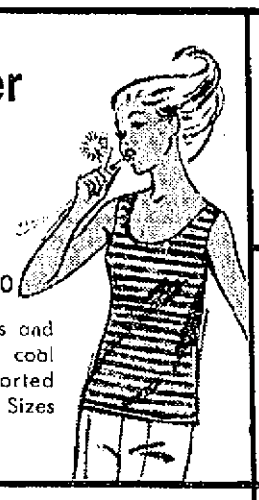

Copies of this booklet may be obtained free of charge at Lawson's Jewelers, 250 Pine Ave., Downtown Long Beach only.

Irish gunmen kill two more

BELFAST (UPI) — Gunmen killed two civilians, wounded four others and shot at British soldiers and each other Saturday in the worst eruption of violence in Northern Ireland since the cease-fire five days ago, police reported.

The truce was further threatened by the erection of barricades in Belfast and 11 other communities by militant Protestants in protest against so-called "no-go" Roman Catholic districts of Londonderry.

THE CATHOLIC barricades have sealed off the Bogside and Creggan districts to British security forces for almost a year. They are manned by members of the militant Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Police reported several gun duels between Protestant and Catholic extremists in Belfast in addition to the other shootings during the night and early morning hours.

A spokesman for the Protestant United Defense Association (UDA) said the obstructions would remain permanently in four areas, but that the others would be torn down at the end of the weekend. He said three of the permanent enclaves would be located in Belfast and the fourth in a provincial town he did not identify.

Police sources blamed most of the shootings on renegade supporters of extremist groups, but said one of the killings bore the earmarks of a formal "execution."

THE SLAYINGS raised the death toll to three since the truce began Monday midnight and 396 since the first shots were fired in the inter-communal strife almost three years ago.

Police found the hooded body of one man dumped in a garden on the edge of a barricaded Protestant area of Belfast. He had been shot in the head — a killing method normally associated with an execution by militants.

Another man was killed by gunfire from a passing car as he stood on the Protestant side of a "peace line" fence dividing the Protestant and Catholic districts.

India-Pakistan summit extended

New York Times Service

SIMLA, India — The stalled summit conference between Pakistan's president, Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, and India's prime minister, Indira Gandhi, was extended an extra day Saturday, with subordinate officials on the two sides still disagreeing on a formula to settle differences between the neighbor countries.

Mrs. Gandhi and Bhutto met for an hour and 40 minutes Saturday in their second formal discussion since the ceremonial opening of the conference four days ago. Each was accompanied by three top foreign affairs aides.

T.N. Kaul, the Indian foreign secretary, told newsmen that the discussions had been "very frank," but gave no further details.

Meanwhile, the subordinate officials of the two delegations met Saturday to consider further draft proposals, at Pakistan's request.

The conference is reported to have snagged on the thorny issue of Kashmir, a 25-year-old territorial dispute that has figured, directly or indirectly, in four wars between the two countries since both were carved out of the former British India in 1947.

4 stolen paintings found in London

ROME (UPI) — Four stolen Italian paintings were returned from London Saturday. But thieves stole two more paintings from a southern town and carted away the ornate doors of a Sicilian palace.

The recovered paintings, worth an estimated $2.6 million, were among 10 works stolen Feb. 26, 1970, from a church in the south Italian town of Taverna.

Scotland Yard detectives working in collaboration with Italian police traced the four paintings to a London attic last Oct. 28 and arrested two Italians.

The six paintings stolen with them were recovered in Italy.

Even as the four paintings arrived in Rome, police in the southern town of Bitonto reported the theft of two 17th century works by painter Carlo Rosa from a small church used only on holidays.

Thieves in Trapani, Sicily, were even more daring. Passersby told police they saw several men unhinge the ornate 15th century doors of the Riccio San Giacchino palace, and load them on a truck.

Russ revalue currency; dollar drops .3 kopeks

Combined News Services

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union readjusted the value of its nonconvertible ruble with six Western currencies Saturday, dropping the value of the pound, the U.S. dollar and the French franc.

The changes were published in the government newspaper Izvestia in normal first-of-the-month listing of currency values.

Currencies which become more valuable in terms of the ruble are the Japanese yen, the Canadian dollar and the Swiss franc.

Because of the change, one U.S. dollar now buys only 82 kopecks instead of the 82.3 that had been in effect since March 1. The British pound now is worth 2.03 rubles instead of 2.15. The rate for 100 French francs went from 16.45 to 16.49 rubles.

In Tokyo, the U.S. dollar dropped to the "floor" level in exchange rates on the money market Saturday, reflecting dealer fears the American currency will continue to be weak.

The dollar sank to 301.07 yen at some points — the lowest level allowed under the Washington currency agreement. It was understood the Bank of Japan, the country's central bank, entered the market to shore up the dollars.

The American currency has been on the down grade in Japan since Britain announced the decision to float the pound sterling last week.

STRATEGIC MAP OF INDOCHINA RESHAPED

Impact of N. Vietnam offensive

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent

SAIGON — The powerful North Vietnamese push into South Vietnam has reshaped the strategic map of Indochina, again shoved the war back among the population, and set the stage for months more of bloody, inconclusive fighting.

MILITARY

The offensive from the North as been stalled far short of its ultimate goal of collapsing the Saigon government. North Vietnam's harbors are mined and its troops are taking crushing poundings from U.S. air strikes. North Vietnam itself is under heavy air attack daily, particularly around the Haiphong and Hanoi areas.

U.S. Air Force commanders say that "smart bombs" — bombs guided to targets by laser beams or television — are systematically destroying North Vietnam's war capabilities while minimizing civilian casualties. While the United States denies it, Hanoi has charged that many of the air attacks are aimed at breaching the system of dikes in the North to flood farmlands and other productive areas. Other than at the still-critical front at Hue, it is unlikely that the North Vietnamese can get major offensive going again.

On the other side, the South has lost important areas won by the allies in five costly years of battle. Hamlets under enemy control are up from seven in March to nearly 1,200 at the end of May. Desertions are at the high level of Tet, 1968. The Saigon forces have lost 12,000 dead, including much smaller unit leadership. But fears earlier in the offensive of a general collapse have not been realized.

ECONOMIC

unemployment is the highest in years, mainly because of the American cutback and the resultant collapse of hundreds of small businesses dependent for their survival on American customers. And South Vietnam's second biggest foreign exchange earner—rubber—looks finished as an export crop because of the destructive fighting around the major rubber towns of Loc Ninh, An Loc and Dau Tieng.

South Vietnam was just beginning to develop an economy that would lessen its near total reliance on grants and other help from the United States when the offensive hit.

The shock wave not only created the worst inflation record; people also stopped spending money, leaving shop shelves filled with goods. Beggars began proliferating on city streets.

And a continuing flood of refugees, estimate at nearly a million, are draining government coffers at the rate of $200,000 a day just to keep them alive.

More serious in the long term is the effect of the renewed war on prospective investors, most of whom have nervously delayed decisions until the situation clears. American planners saw this investment as the only hope to save an economy seriously weakened by the drastically reduced American military presence. Without this foreign investment, the United States will have to carry South Vietnam totally and indefinitely.

POLITICAL

President Nguyen Van Thieu still holds firm power in the South, but his advisers are known to be worried about the impact on the home front of the enormous battle casualties. The Saigon government is also faced with coping with the refugees — already nearly a million in number and still growing.

VIETNAMIZATION

The pulverizing power of U.S. B52 bombers and American Air Force and 7th Fleet aircraft are credited with stabilizing the battlefronts, particularly after the initial government routs of Quang Tri, northern Kontum and Binh Dinh.

Senior Americans praised the South Vietnamese army for holding Kontum and An Loc, but concede that these were defensive actions fully supported by maximum air power, another test of Vietnamization is still to come in grinding fighting necessary to gain back important territory occupied by Communist command forces.

The North Vietnamese came into the South early in April with what they hoped would be enough tanks, troops and heavy artillery to quickly destroy most of the Saigon army, and along with it the central government.

They failed, and a captured document, said to have been issued by COSVN, the enemy headquarters for the southern half of South Vietnam, blames the failure on the Viet Cong for not doing their part, particularly for "scattering their assets instead of massing them," and "excessively slow development of the political offensive."

KEY FIGURES in the secret diplomacy to end the Vietnam war are Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny, left, and U.S. presidential adviser Henry Kissinger. Podgorny has visited Hanoi recently and Kissinger journeyed to Peking. Their activity has increased speculation that the talks in Paris might become more fruitful.

Enemy hurt, but far from crippled

THE VIET CONG have been blamed before. Every major offensive launched by the North Vietnamese since 1965 has failed in its major objective — the overthrow of the Saigon government.

But tied to a defensive war, few South Vietnamese are popping champagne corks to celebrate. The North Vietnamese visit each spring like military typhoons, tearing at the roof, the walls, the heart of South Vietnam.

The house may not collapse at the first typhoon. The constant buffeting, however, might shake its foundations loose. That is why the future power of the North Vietnamese to attack, and the ability of the South Vietnamese to resist, is far more important to the strategists than the outcome of this particular offensive.

The American bombing of the North, in the view of experts in Saigon, must cripple indefinitely the Communist command's ability to launch the kind of conventional invasion that slammed into the Saigon army this year.

But foot soldiers and small arms weapons and ammunition can be expected to flow down the Ho Chi Minh supply trail into South Vittnam even if Hanoi's main provider — the Soviet Union — fails to massively resupply.

SOME of the hopeful here look to the recent whirl of international diplomacy, including the journeys of Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny to Hanoi, and U.S. presidential assistant Henry A. Kissinger to Peking, as a sign that the North Vietnamese might be induced to resume fruitful talks at Paris.

But the most realistic doubt that Hanoi will stop fighting unless it has a real hope of waging a successful political war.

One of the minimum gains the enemy has made in the offensive might have given it that hope. It was the control of 1,164 hamlets by the end of May, and direct access to 1,200 more. This has given them potential control over a fifth of the population.

Should this control be solidified in the next few months, Hanoi might be ready for the first time since late in 1968 to negotiate a cease-fire.

The best informed Americans now rate hamlets more important to ultimate control than territory or population. "With a cease-fire, population would tend to return to the hamlet from the refuge camps and the cities. This would give control of the returning people to whoever controls the hamlet, one American expert said.

Whatever happens in the political field, the North Vietnamese still pack a powerful punch in the South. The allies are claiming nearly 50,000 enemy troops killed, half of the estimated invasion force.

MANY of the units were written off prematurely, however. The North Vietnamese 5th Division was reported totally destroyed in the early weeks of the siege of An Loc. It turned up in mid-June attacking major outposts at the edge of the Plain of Reeds south of Saigon. So, too, is Hanoi's 7th Division remarkably resurrected from an early death, and still blocks Highway 13 in two places.

While unable, except at Hue, to mount the massive battles that characterized April and May, the North Vietnamese have pushed into the populated areas of the central coast and the Mekong Delta. They seem able at will to ravage hamlets and remote villages, choking the roads with refugees and enticing the government into violent counterattacks that lay waste farms and homes.

The one positive legacy American combat troops left to South Vietnam was a population comparatively free of North Vietnamese threat. The American shield shoved the major enemy units back across the border into Cambodia and Laos.

In three short months this legacy has been lost for good, in some eyes here. Hanoi's forces have not only swept into northern Kontum, Binh Dinh and Quang Tri. They are back in the old base areas north of Saigon at War Zone C and War Zone D, in the Plain of Reeds and the Seven Mountains to the south, and in greater force than ever in the U Minh Forest at the southernmost tip of the country.

From these regions the Communist command maintains the ability to nibble away at South Vietnam for the indefinite future.

"SURE HE has been seriously hurt," said one senior American. "In every spring offensive he has been hurt. By our standards he is always in fair to poor shape. But we know he'll be back next spring in force for sure."

How well can the Saigon forces fight back?

Whatever they do, it will have to come soon, most observers agree. The longer the Communist side occupies Saigon Government areas, the more entrenched it will become.

"Unless they take Quang Tri Province by September, then forget it," commented one senior observer. "The rains come in so fierce then it will wash them out."

Quang Tri is reportedly top priority for President Thieu. Then in order of priority comes the three lost districts of northern Bin Dinh, retaking the lost division headquarters in the Dak To valley, the re-pacification of Chuong Thien in the Mekong Delta, and finally, reoccupation of the lost rubber district of Loc Ninh.

"But all this is a pretty tall order," commented

Papers tell how British bugged Kosygin

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

LODON (AP) — In the early hours of Monday, Feb. 13, 1967, Alexei N. Kosygin telephoned Leonid I. Brezhnev in Moscow from the elegant luxury of a London hotel suite.

The Soviet premier apparently did not know that every word he uttered to the Communist party chief was being listened to by his British hosts.

Disclosure of one of the most sensational British intelligence operations of modern times came from Washington with publication of the latest volumes of the Pentagon papers.

Behind a facade of calm unconcern, British authorities are angry with their American friends.

Embarrassed, too, that their bugging of a Soviet leader has exposed them to Moscow attack.

And they also are remembering bitterly how lapses in their own security system were assailed by Americans who, for whatever reasons, have no been instrumental in compromising British intelligence operations.

"Every head of government who visits London," one high source remarked, "will assume that he is being bugged."

It is of course, possible that most important statesmen assume their conservations and activities are monitored anyway. But British authorities see a distinction between an assumption and something that has been confirmed, howeveri nadvertently.

Kosygin was a guest of the British government from Feb. 6 to 13, 1967, when Laborite Harold Wilson was prime minister. Their week-long exchanges covered many matters but the main focus was on a search for a basis of ending the Vietnam war.

As Wilson told the story in his memoirs, peace was "in his grasp." But the response of then President Lyndon B. Johnson's administration to his initiative proved disastrous.

As the authors of the Pentagon papers told the story, the late President Ho Chi Minh seemed to display as little interest as Johnson in negotiations. But in general outline, the Pentagon papers broadly supported Wilson's detailed narrative.

Kosygin, to the evident surprise of Washington at the time, had agreed to send certain proposals handed him by Wilson on to Hanoi. These proposals promised a break-through to peace talks.

The Pentagon papers, in a crucial passage, commented: "On Feb. 13, he —Kosygin—was overheard by telephone intercept to tell Brezhnev of "a great possibility of achieving the aim, if the Vietnamese will understand the present situation that we have passed to them; then they will have to decide. All they need to do is to give a confidential declaration."

The Kosygin phone call was made to supplement —and elaborate on—a revised statement of the U.S. position on a bomb halt. This had been delivered to him by Wilson in an unscheduled postmidnight call at his hotel. Wilson himself had only just received it on the hotline from the White House.

Against this background several questions arise.

How could so experienced a man as Kosygin allow himself to be bugged?

Who carried out the operation?

Had it been going on for long?

Political and other British authorities involved in the episode and in the talks at the time, answering a reporter's questions, have come up with some of the answers.

The informants, who insisted on anonymity, reported:

—Kosygin, who had his own security men with him, could not have known he was being overheard. His telephone was not tapped. The British assume his men would have "swept" his suite for listening devices. Almost certainly the intercept was through the medium of an electronic gadget located in a building near Claridges Hotel and beamed into Kosygin's study.

—These gadgets are sensitive enough to pick up conversations half a mile away, through windows. They were worked by intelligence specialists, specially assigned to monitor Kosygin when he was here. A transcript of Kosygin's remarks to Brezhnev that cold winter's night was on Wilson's desk at 10 Downing Street next day.

—Kosygin was monitored throughout his week-long stay in this country, though obviously only in certain places. Much of his time was devoted to ceremonial occasions or to official talks with Wilson. About the only time he was totally "safe" from electronic eaves droppers was when he was inside the Soviet Embassy where certain rooms were known to be impenetrable.

British worries were related to the use of various secret messages that had passed between London and Washington about Vietnam.

The British government expressed concern to the United States in the summer of 1971 when the first batch of Pentagon papers was published.

The new disclosures plainly have deepened the concern, although no government minister or Foreign Office spokesman would comment publicly.

Wilson himself is known to be less than pleased with various interpretations of his motives offered by the authors of the papers. At one point, they suggested that he wanted to make political capital out of his role as a peacemaker.

"The eagerness of the British leaders to participate with maximum personal visibility in bringing peace to Vietnam — in early February alone Wilson proposed traveling personally both to Washington and Hanoi — was sometimes embarrassing to the United States which greatly preferred confidential delaings with a minimum of participants," the papers said.

But someone close to the former British prime minister retorted:

"There can be times when insistence on secrecy can cover a multitude of sins. The presidential expressions of appreciation to Mr. Wilson for his efforts certainly do not support the views expressed in the Pentagon papers.

"Perhaps peace in Vietnam will be achieved only when U.S. policy is subjected to "maximum visibility"."

Defections, casualties hit S. Viets

one high-ranking American. "It will take a mighty effort."

The Saigon army has enough troops to fight back. Its three most seriously damaged divisions — the 3rd, 5th and 22nd — are reportedly back up to strength. "But an army is not made up of just bodies alone. It takes leaders," an American adviser commented. One battalion he advised in the 21st Division had lost six company commanders in a week.

THE MORALE of the Vietnamese soldier is also suspect. With no leave permitted except in emergencies, and with no real hope of getting out of the army except on a stretcher or in a coffin, he might defend himself against attack but cannot necessarily be relied upon to forcefully take the fight to the enemy.

The late John Paul Vann told other U.S. military advisers at Qui Nhon during a visit last July," I have seen that the price of courage in Vietnam is inevitable death. Just don't expect too much of your men."

It was more a desperate defense that saved Kontum City and An Loc rather than aggressive offense. The cost of offensive fighting can be seen any day on Highway 13 north of Saigon where thousands of Saigon troops are attempting to raise the siege of An Loc. One infantry regiment moved forward the length of a football field in a month, and lost more than 1,000 men in casualties.

The impact of these mounting casualties — 12,000 dead in 12 weeks, far more than during the Tet battles of 1968, and an estimated 40,000 wounded — are having an impact on the home front where parents have now been asked to give up their 17-year-old sons to the army. The Saigon market has become a center for discontent, with market women and mothers complaining.

Appraised of the mounting casualties and the huge drain on South Vietnam's young men, a top government official told this reporter, "I am starting to think the unthinkable: a cease-fire. I don't know how long we can maintain these losses."

Since then the casualty toll has decreased with the sterilization of the front lines. But they can be expected to mount dramatically if a counteroffensive gets underway.

Along with casualties has continued the desertion rate, always high and still running at an estimated 10,000 a month.

MUCH MORE serious for Saigon are the defections. No regular army units have been known to go over. But there have been serious defections by scores of regional and popular militia forces in Quang Tri, Binh Dinh, Quang Ngai, Choung Thien, Loc Ninh and Kontum provinces, according to escaped prisoners and intelligence reports.

In dozens of documented cases, these government militia home guard forces simply accepted Communist leadership, not even changing their uniforms but pointing their guns towards government officials or low-flying spotter aircraft.

This has added thousands to the Communist command's ranks, a pattern that could be repeated, strengthening the weakened Viet Cong.

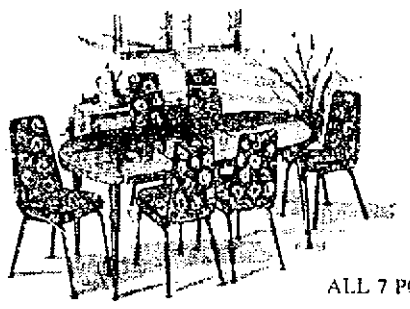

There have also been cases of high-level defections. U.S. intelligence told The Associated Press that the secretary of the provincial council of Binh Long Province, formerly an army captain, changed uniforms when the enemy laid seige to An Loc, and joined the attacking forces carrying an AK47 rifle.

There have been no reports of North Vietnamese unit defections, and prisoners have been comparatively few.

ITT on polygraph?

Were lie detector tests used in the Senate hearings on the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. (ITT) case? If not, why not? H.N., Long Beach.

The lie detector or polygraph was neither used nor suggested in the Senate Judiciary Committee hearings which actually were on the nomination of Richard Kleindienst for U.S. Attorney General, said Wm Griffith, Washington assistant to committee member Sen. John Tunney, D-Calif. "To my knowledge, lie detector tests haven't ever been used in Congressional hearings because of the shaky legal admissibility in courts," Griffith said. However, Kleindienst reportedly said he had "no objections to taking a lie detector test if someone suggests it." One of the principals in these hearings, Brit Hume, assistant to columnist Jack Anderson, "arranged for privately conducted polygraph tests for himself over the Dita Beard memorandum," Griffith said. Publication of the memorandum by Anderson touched off the Senate committee's probe of whether ITT's political contribution helped it obtain a favorable settlement of government antitrust charges against it. The hearings focused on Kleindienst's role — while he was deputy attorney general — in the ITT suit settlement after the conglomerate pledged money to this year's Republican Convention. His appointment was confirmed June 8 and the hearings are closed.

Home is the sailor

The Chapman College World Campus Afloat ship recently returned home. When the ship arrived in San Pedro, there was a huge homemade sign on the side that said: "Praise the Lord, we're home." My son is interested in signing up for the next trip; but my husband thinks the sign indicates some students were unhappy with the voyage. Can ACTION LINE find out the meaning behind the banner? J.A., Huntington Beach.

Judy DeJager of Chino, one of the students who made the banner, told ACTION LINE that the signs' message did not have any negative connotations. She explained that several students on the ship had organized an informal Bible study class and the group worked on the sign as a final project. "We just wanted to make something that would show our religious faith and express our feelings that God had guided us home safe and sound," Miss DeJager said. Chapman College in Orange has sponsored the floating campus program since 1965. Students earn college credit while spending a semester at sea and in foreign ports.

Fee flap

I paid an attorney, Don Eagleton, 10002 E. Flower St., Bellflower, $35 to send 3-day and 30-day notices to quit to some tenants who had not paid their rent. When they didn't leave, he said it would cost $50 more for filing an unlawful detainer action, then $70 more to go to court to evict them. But when I got my itemized statement, it totaled $260 rather than the $155 he had told me it would cost. Do I have any recourse? C.L., Norwalk.

Fee complaints and other grievances against attorneys may be filed with local bar associations; in your case, the Southeast Bar Association, 12720 Norwalk Blvd., Norwalk. An arbitration committee will investigate your allegations. In this case, however, we contacted Eagleton who denied quoting you the $155 figure and said you apparently misunderstood him. He said he is willing to meet with you to discuss the fee and, if you still feel you were misled, may "adjust" it. A spokesman for the Southeast Bar Association told ACTION LINE that normally it costs at least $200 in attorney's fees to evict a tenant.

Don't drink the water

My husband purchased a clay water jug in Baja California. I have heard that it might not be safe to use for food or drink. Can ACTION LINE find out if we could use it at least for drinking water? S.T., Long Beach

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration advises that all Mexican pottery and earthenware be used strictly as ornaments. In checking shipments of imports from Mexico the FDA has found that most Mexican pottery and earthenware, even when glazed, contains dangerous amounts of lead. Pottery containing lead is especially hazardous when it comes in contact with acidic foods such as fruit and vegetable juice.

PUTTING ON THE DOG

Montagnard refugees skewer chunks of dog meat on sticks as others roast their dinner over an open fire. Upland tribesmen were resettled in Kontum City camp following a battle for provincial capital. Dog is eaten routinely by Montagnards.

Nixon has supported colleagues of lesser stature and prominence than Mitchell during periods of personal or official difficulty, and sources close to him insisted that he had left the decision to his former attorney general.

Judging both by his letter to the President and the private testimony of his friends, Mitchell's decision was based largely on a deep conviction that to do otherwise might well risk the future of his marriage and would almost certainly contribute little to the serenity of his wife, a colorful personality in an otherwise somber Republican administration, who harbors strong emotional views on people and issues and has displayed few inhibitions about revealing them.

IN HIS letter to Nixon, Mitchell said of his wife, Martha, and his daughter, Marti, 11, "they have patiently put up with my long absences for some four years and the moment has come when I must devote more time to them."

When the President asked her husband in mid-February to step down from his post at the Justice Department to direct the re-election effort, as he had directed the campaign in 1968, Mrs. Mitchell said in another telephone interview that it was "a very bad move."

She added ."He said the President needed him. The Justice Department needs him more. It just breaks my heart."

There is circumstantial evidence that Mitchell shared some of his wife's views. According to associates, he greatly enjoyed his tenure at the Justice Department.

A law partner of Nixon at a New York firm, he entered politics as a novice in 1968 when Nixon asked for his help. But he felt his training had best equipped him for legal rather than political service, and for that reason, despite some initial reluctance, he not only accepted Nixon's offer to head the Justice Department but also came to enjoy the role.

As attorney general, he was able to lead a fairly orderly bureaucratic and social life, but his problems mounted and his hours grew longer when he accepted the leadership of the re-election committee. The committee had grown large and unwieldly in the absence of any full-time leadership, and Mitchell seemed determined on his arrival to give the re-election effort a sense of coherence and discipline.

BUT THESE efforts often were interrupted by other controversies, which not only lengthened his day and distracted his energies but also affected his wife. One was the lingering investigation into the relationship between the Justice Department and the International Telephone and Telegraph corporation; A more recent furore involved the alleged "bugging" of the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee.

The official announcement from committee headquarters said Mitchell would occupy office space in the Washington branch of his old law firm, now named Mudge, Rose, Guthrie and Alexander, just one floor above the re-election offices on Pennsylvania Avenue.

Devan Shumway, information director of the re-election committee, said that "ultimately, he will return to New York." This has been Mrs. Mitchell's wish ever since her husband assumed his new duties.

IN HIS letter to Mitchell, the President said in part that the former attorney general had made a "most substantial sacrifice, personal and financial," to come to Washington. But he said that in 26 years in political life he "often had noted that the greater share of sacrifice usually is the wife's since she must share not only the disappointments and the brickbats, but must accept the frequent absence of a husband and father. I am well aware that this has been particularly true of the Mitchell family, and I am most appreciative of the sacrifice Martha and you have both made in the service of the nation."

MITCHELL'S successor, MacGregor, is embarking on what most observers here believe to be a difficult task. At this relatively late stage in the campaign, he knows few of the key officials of the re-election committee.

He is not, however, a stranger to politics; known as an affable but highly intense man, the 49-year-old former congressman worked hard and with some evidence of success to repair Nixon's frayed relations with Congress.

MacGregor was known as a moderate during his decade in the House. He also was one of the first members of Congress to urge Nixon to make a political comeback in 1967.

Nixon objects to SS increase

increase in Social Security benefits."

He said the bill's failure to fully finance the increase would add $3.7 billion to more than $3 billion by which Congress has thrown his fiscal 1973 budget into deficit. He called this inflationary.

Nixon said he will call for the off setting cuts in other programs. There was no immediate indication of where the cuts will be proposed.

The 20 per cent boost brings to 45 per cent the increases granted within three years—and since each increase was applied to benefits already raised the over-all cash increase runs to well over 50 per cent.

New tables have yet to be released by the Social Security Administration but some average figures have been made available.

The 15 per cent increase which became effective in January 1970, plus a 10 per cent increase in January 1971, raised from $100 to $129 the pension for an average retired, single worker. The lastest raise will move that to $158.

The two earlier increases raised the average couple's payment from $170 to $223 and this will be $271 after Sept. 1.

These figures are averages and actual benefits run both lower, and considerably higher, than these figures. The actual benefits are based on the number of years worked and on the salary on which the Social Security taxes were paid during those years.

SKIES SHOULD BE CLEAR BY 4th

Early morning drizzles and hazy sunshine are forecast for Long Beach during the weekend but National Weather Service officials promised clear skies in time for the fireworks Tuesday night.

Temperatures will range from lows of 64 to highs of 78 degrees today and Monday.

On the Fourth of July temperatures will rise slightly, the drizzles will end and afternoon and evening skies are expected to be clear.

Monsoon halts S. Viet drive

The Communists apparently were trying to stop government troops from filling the hundreds of shell holes in the highway, the only paved road in the area, Seibert said.

South Vietnamese paratroopers had advanced Friday to the outskirts of Quang Tri, the only one of the 44 provincial capitals captured by the Communists during their three-month-old offensive.

North Vietnam claimed Communist gunners Saturday shot down two U.S. F4 jets over the province of Hab Bac.

In a statement released by the Hanoi Peace Delegation, the North Vietnamese news agency VNA said the pilots were either killed or captured.

The total number of American planes downed over North Vietnam since the beginning of the war in now 3,710, the VNA said.

Vet disability payments increased by 10 per cent

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon Saturday signed legislation to increase by 10 per cent the Veterans Administration compensation for men with service-connected disabilities.

The measure gives the same rates to men disabled in wartime and in peacetime, effective July 1, 1973. For 40 years the rates had been different. The present gap is 80 per cent of the wartime rate for peacetime veterans.

Also in the bill is a new clothing allowance of $150 a year for veterans who must wear prosthetic or orthopedic devices which tend to wear out or tear normal clothes.

The rate for a 100-per-cent disabled veteran will be increased from $504 a month to $554 under the bill.

Other bills signed by the President:

— A bill extending the Defense Production Act until June 30, 1974 and permitting contracts for the purchase of metals, minerals and other materials for government use or resale.

— A measure authorizing the Rural Telephone Bank to borrow money from the Secretary of the Treasury and to back up its obligations with a government guarantee. The bank, created in 1971, originally had authority only to borrow from the private market.

— A bill allowing the Agriculture Department to issue Cotton Crop Reports at the same time it issues its general crop reports. Cotton reports had been issued separately because cotton was widely traded throughout the world. Since cotton trading has now decreased substantially, the issuance dates do not have a significant effect on trading.

— A measure extending until September 1, 1974, the interstate compact to conserve oil and gas. Twenty-nine states are members of this compact, which was formed in the early 1930s to help end wasteful practices in all producing states.

— A measure authorizing the Commerce Department to allow U.S. flag passenger ships which sail under an operating differential subsidy contract to cruise off their essential trade routes for the entire year.

— A measure extending the term of the National Commission on Consumer Finance to Dec. 31, 1972, and increasing from $1.5 million to $2 million the amount authorized for the commission.

— A measure changing the name of the Custis-Lee Mansion in Arlington National Cemetery to "Arlington House, the Robert E. Lee memorial." The mansion was known as Arlington House when Lee occupied it.

— A bill authorizing the Interior Department to participate in the planning and design of a memorial to the late President Franklin Delano Roosevelt and to authorize necessary funds for the memorial.

— A measure allowing the commissioner of the District of Columbia to enter into agreements with Maryland and Virginia on dump truck fees and on enforcement of traffic laws, including parking violations.

— A bill to extend for another year the ceiling on interest rates on federally insured mortgages, permitting the Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration to continue 7-per cent interest rates.

Man robs, kidnaps two, rapes woman

An assailant kidnapped a security guard and a woman computer programmer at a Long Beach computer company, locked the guard in a car trunk and raped the woman, police said Saturday.

Detectives said they were looking for a janitor who worked for the company.

The incident began Friday about 8:30 p.m. when the assailant picked up the security guard's gun from under a counter while the guard was in a bathroom at Southern California outboard, on U. S. Army property at 165 N. Pico Ave. in the Port of Long Beach.

SECRET WITNESS

2 more eligible for rewards

Secret Witness informants "Clancy" and "Margie" are eligible for rewards and are asked to contact the Independent-Press-Telegram Secret Witness desk at 436-2526.

"Clancy's" tip resulted in the arrest Thursday in Gardena of Jesse Paul Fortado, 24, an escapee from a state prison camp. The fugitive was booked in Long Beach Friday on suspicion of robbery and is being questioned about possible complicity in the $5,500 kidnap-holdup of a Southern California Edison Co. bank messenger last Oct. 18.

"Margie" told Secret Witness June 20 where Compton murder suspect Benny Ellis Coleman, 32, could be found. Coleman was captured the same night in Milpitas, Calif., a suburb of San Jose, and has been arraigned in Compton Municipal Court on a murder charge in the shooting of 60-year-old Titus McDaniel, of 939 W. 131st St., on March 15, 1971.

As part of these newspapers' Secret Witness program, summaries of all cases in which rewards are offered will be printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Thursday and Sunday. The summaries follow.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the men who fatally beat, tortured and burned disabled World War II veteran Clarence Huizar, 53, of 1386 Peterson Ave., after breaking into his home at about 10:30 p.m. on Sunday, March 19. Huizer died of his injuries 25 days later, on April 13. The men are described as Negroes in their mid-20s, one 6 ft. tall, weighing about 180 pounds, with a medium-length Afro hair-do, and the other 5 feet 4 inches, weighing about 150 pounds. In connection with the case, Long Beach police are seeking, for questioning only, Sandra Sue Razor, 22, a white woman 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighing 140 pounds, with blonde hair and blue eyes. Police said Miss Razor, a known narcotics addict who has been convicted of prostitution, is believed to be in the Long Beach-Los Angeles area. Robbery was the motive for the beating and torture of Huizar.

—A $2,000 reward is in effect for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who bludgeoned to death Lino Campos, 40, and his son, Gavino, 18, both of Baja California last Feb. 10. Their bodies were found near the trailer in which they slept each time they made a trip to the A and J Wrecking Yard, 22632 S. Alameda St., Carson.

— A $2,000 reward is in force for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Mrs. Marguerite June Makeig, 50, shot in the head and killed when she returned to her home, 10608 Felson St., Bellflower, on the afternoon of Aug. 11, 1971. Mrs. Makeig had been shopping. When she walked into her living room, someone armed with a small-caliber handgun fired once, the bullet striking her in the head. The slaying apparently was motiveless.

— Two thousand dollars is being offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the men who killed Elliot C. Lawson, 38, during a holdup at the Atlantic Inn, 1854 Atlantic Ave., at about 1:10 a.m. on July 16, 1971. The killer is described as a Negro, about 25 years old, 5-feet-7, 130 pounds, with a two-inch Afro hair-do. The man has a slender face, large eyes, a slender nose, and a smooth, medium complexion. He has a deep voice, is straight in posture and is well-groomed.

—A $2,000 reward is in effect for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person who killed Horace William Clark, 19, a Marine corporal stationed at Camp Pendleton, who was stabbed to death in Wilmington last Christmas Day. Clark left the base alone at about 8 a.m. to have Christmas dinner with friends in Wilmington, but never arrived. His body was found the next morning beside a dirt road leading to a junkyard at 831 Sampson Ave.

—A $2,000 reward is in effect for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of cab driver Michael A. Miller, 27, of Downey, who worked the night shift for the Southeast Taxi Co., Compton. Miller was found dead at about 11:20 June 8. He had been shot twice in the back of the head in the 200 block of East Reeve Street. Robbery apparently was not the motive for the slaying.

—A $2,000 reward is in force for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Independent-Press-Telegram pressman Frank M. Schiavone, 41, and his wife, Shirley, 44, who were shot from ambush May 9 upon returning to their home in Westminster after an evening out. Westminster police are seeking to question a man believed to have been the last person to have seen the Schiavones alive. The man was with them in Woody's Bar, Springdale Avenue and Garden Grove Boulevard, Westminster, shortly before they were murdered. He is described as a white man in his mid-20s to early 30s, from 5-feet-10 to 6-feet-1 in height, with wavy, dark brown hair, a medium-dark, olive complexion and a pock-marked square face with high cheekbones.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killers of Long Beach auto wholesaler Robert Wilson Cogley, 44, shot to death in the parking lot of the Highway Center Liquor Store, Pacific Coast Highway and California Avenue, at 1:40 a.m. last Aug. 12. Cogley's killers are described as Negroes between 16 and 19 years old, and from 5-feet-7 to 5-feet-10 in height.

— $2,000 reward for information leading to arrest and conviction of the killer of cab driver Donald Eugene Beard, 44, shot to death Dec. 24 in the 1200 block of Loma Vista Drive at about 4:20 a.m. Prior to his death, Beard told police a car containing five Negro men pulled up to the curb and that the man sitting on the front passenger's seat asked him how to get to Willow Street, aimed a pistol and fired.

2 Norwalk men held in stab death

Two Norwalk brothers were arrested on suspicion of fatally stabbing a Hawaiian Gardens man at a party early Saturday.

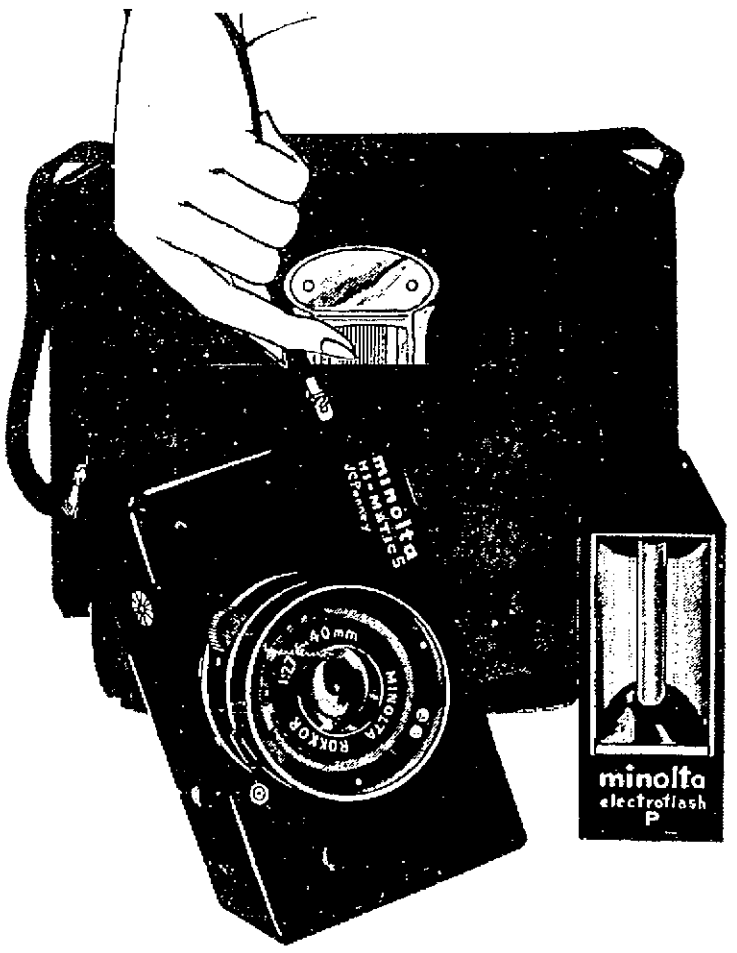

The victim, Tommy E. Trevino, 25, of 11638 E. 206th St., died from injuries received in a fight at a party at his home, deputies said.

Deputies arrested Juan M. Villalobos, 24, and Roberto C. Villalobos, 21, both of 12157 Cheshire St., Norwalk, on suspicion of murder.

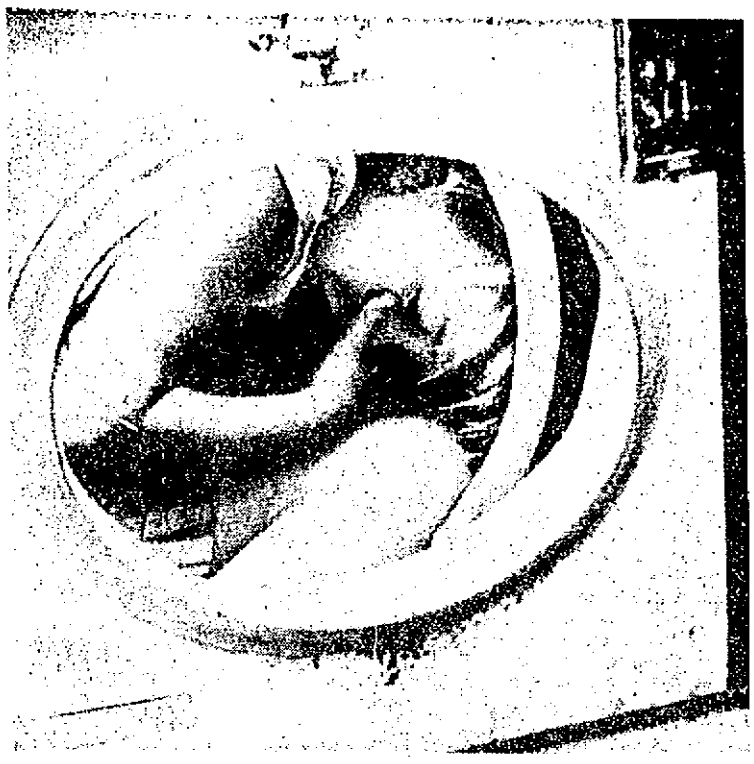

Angel Villalobos, 34, of the same address, and the juvenile, also were taken into custody after a fight with deputies.

GET ME OUT!

Sandy Taylor, 5, found a discarded washing machine on the sidewalk near her Shelton, Conn., home and got curious, so she crawled in. The trick was to get her out, however, and it took some crying and help from neighbors, who ripped off the front of the machine and freed her after half an hour.

MARILYN REHBERGER AND ABANDONED TOT

MARY NEISWENDER
Staff Writer

A seven-year-old boy and his younger brother — both ragged and hungry — were found foraging in garbage cans in central Los Angeles at midnight. Their parents not only didn't feed or clothe them, but didn't know or care that they were grubbing in alleys to survive.

In Culver City, an aircraft worker shot and killed his wife and his oldest child, then turned the gun on himself. Huddled in the corner crying when police arrived were the survivors of the tragedy — a four-old-year-old girl and her two-year-old brother.

An Irish setter began to whine as he nosed around a paper sack which had been dumped under some bushes near a Venice garage. Inside the sack, alive and crying, was a four-hour-old infant.

THE HUNGRY BOYS, the frightened orphans and the naked baby are all innocent victims of circumstances.

But there are others:

There are victims of unfit homes, beatings, abuse, neglect or abandonment.

There are teenagers who run away from intolerable home conditions.

There are children whose parents are injured in traffic accidents or become ill and are hospitalized.

And the children all need one thing: immediate care.

And that's why the Good Neighbor Foster Care Program was established in Los Angeles County.

"The purpose of the program is to provide immediate foster home care for abandoned, neglected and abused children and to insure placement with private families when institutional care is not necessary," Miss Marilyn Rehberger, Childrens' Services Supervisor for the County's Department of Public Social Services, explains.

The program is aimed, she says, at receiving the children at the point of a family crisis.

"The Good Neighbor Foster Parents open their homes on a 24-hour basis. They are the first people to help the child through the crisis and begin readjustment."

IN OTHER COUNTIES, where the program is not available, she explains, the children who face problems at night — not during the usual 8 to 5 working day — are placed in juvenile homes, which, in itself, is a traumatic experience. In Los Angeles County, the home-situation is available at all hours.

The situation, says the social worker, isn't limited to one or two children every other week. Approximately 200 children per month are placed in the county's Good Neighbor Foster Homes, and are kept there until the home situation is straightened out or other permanent arrangements are made.

And the need for more foster homes is growing.

Shortage of rainfall expected to parch Southland in July

By HARRY TESSEL
Staff Writer

July will be mostly hot and dry.

However, the Southland, parched by less than half the usual amount of rainfall this year, still faces another rainless month.

The National Weather Service terse forecast:

"Above normal temperatures and below normal rainfall . . ."

But Southland water experts say that though there will be a shortage of rain there will be no shortage of water.

The hot, dry weather's greater danger lies in the expected brush fires in mountain and foothill areas.

Temperature highs in the upper 90s have been recorded in Long Beach for July months in the past 20 years, with extreme lows in the 50s. A record high of 100 was set July 26, 1943, and a low of 48 was reported on July 13, 1924. The wettest day of the month was July 13, 1953, when .02 inches of rain fell.

The 1971 Long Beach high for July was 98, with a low of 58 and a trace of rain. The July, 1970, high also was 98, with a low of 59, and another trace of rain.

Mean high temperature reading in Long Beach for July months during the past 10 years have averaged about 72 degrees.

(The mean readings have been recorded by the Long Beach Gas Dept. to plan for gas expansion during varying temperatures. Vern Simpson, department senior draftsman, explains that the mean is achieved by totaling the month's highs and dividing that by the number of days in the month.)

The lack of rainfall has created a drought in some Western states that has cut into the water supplies of a few cities. Some, like Santa Fe, N.M., face harsh rationing perhaps by next month. Smaller communities may have to have drinking water hauled in by truck.

The water shortage also is blamed on the fact that snow packs in mountain areas have ranged downward from 45 per cent of normal.

At a time when there should be plenty of water and range feed for cattle, the supply is critically low.

But there will be sufficient quantities of water in Long Beach. Forty per cent of the Long Beach supply is pumped from underground wells in the area. The rest is Colorado River water purchased from the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California.

"We have been given no indication that water to us from the MWD will be curtailed," said Blaine Vernon, administrative aide, Long Beach Water Dept.

The MWD's first Southland distribution of water from Northern California began in April. MWD general manager Frank M. Clinton said it came barely in time to stave off shortages.

"If not for this new supply," Clinton said, "we would have been very hard pressed to provide sufficient water, at least, for agricultural use in this district this year, principally in Orange, Riverside and San Diego Counties."

Fred Roland, information officer of the California Dept. of Water Resources, said the surplus Northern California water being distributed now makes available about 650,000 gallons a day of Colorado River water to relieve irrigation water shortages in the three counties.

And he pointed out that as the year goes on, the MWD will deliver additional supplies of this Northern California water to the South Bay area of Los Angeles County, as well as to such cities as San Fernando, Beverly Hills, Burbank and Santa Monica.

SMOKEY BEAR HATS

New peak set for state police

By ROBERT E. SWEET

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A fashion revolution is sweeping the ranks of the California State Police.

By popular demand, State Police Chief Guy R. Oates has ruled patrolmen can wear a "Montana peak" hat — also known as a "Smoky Bear" hat — instead of the required cap, which some officers call a "bus driver's cap."

Since his order, Oates said at least 60 of 235 state police in California have purchased the round-rimmed, dimpled hats and about another 50 peace officers have ordered them.

Oates said more than 50 per cent of the state police force had asked him to make the "Montana Peak" the "basic headgear" for the agency. Instead, he took the advice of an advisory committee that the hats be optional until he could determine whether the fashion craze was more than just a fad.

"WE'VE HAD a lot of favorable comments about the new hats," Oates said. "I'm curious how it will go. It's a distinctive piece of gear, but it may prove inconvenient to many of the men."

Lt. Virgil Moslander of Sacramento is credited with being the "father" of the "Montana Peak" rage. He said he was impressed with the appearance of the hats when he was a child in Indiana, where state troopers wore them.

When the California State Police agency was restructured in 1968, he began pushing for a new hat to match the agency's new image. The division is charged with protecting people and property in state buildings and facilities.

About a year ago Oakes permitted security police assigned to the State Water Project to wear the broad-brimmed hats because they were extra protection from the sun's rays.

The hats became very popular among the water project police and Oates decided it was time to try them throughout the agency.

The new hats cost between $11 and $18, depending on the material. The cap, which all state policemen still must buy, costs about $13.

THE HAT GAINED national attention when it became the symbol of Teddy Roosevelt's "Rough Riders" during the Spanish-American war and has been used during both world wars. It's also worn by about a dozen police outfits throughout the nation, although it's unique to the state police in California.

Chuck Gibson, a state peace officer assigned to the Capitol, said he was willing to pay extra for the hat "because I look sharper — it simply adds to our appearance."

Esque Frost, assigned to another capital office, said the "Montana Peak" was a "hat that you have to measure up to."

He said liking the hat "is just a matter of cultivating the eye." Frost said it is "distinctive, something the men can be proud of and wear well."

But all the state police are not sold on it. "It reminds me of the military," shrugged Donald Anderson of the capitol squad, who also said he didn't like the cap much either.

One peace officer who wished to remain anonymous was so enthusiastic about the new apparel he remarked: "You'll never pry it off my head."

COULD MEAN FORTUNE FOR 2 SCIENTISTS

New sewage purification plan a breakthrough

By KENNETH J. BRADICK

TIBURON, Calif. (UPI) — Two scientists say they have found a way to purify sewage so the water is fit to drink and the waste can be used to grow high protein food. It could put them on their way to a fortune.

The project of recycling what the two call a "valuable resource" began a couple of years ago and has its results in a new sewage treatment plant for this San Francisco Bay community of 10,000 people.

The breakthrough treatment method has sparked interest in several small cities of the nation, though its developers say it is just as practical and cheap for a major metropolis or even an office building with 5,000 workers.

BRITON John R. Hulls and his father-in-law, Keith A. Cooke, developed the method by using genetically - altered algea, a low form of plant life.

The bearded, long-haired Hulls, 24, is reluctant to talk about specifics because 40 patents are pending and he and Cooke want to make a profit.

The system works by growing algae at extremely high density in a controlled environment. The algae eat the nutrients in the sewage and at the same time release oxygen.

It is done by cascading sewage water through tiers of small tanks seeded with one-celled algae. This allows the algae to grow and multiply on the sewage diet and then the algae and water are separated in a centrifuge.

ELECTRONIC monitors keep a constant check on the quantity of oxygen, phosphates, nitrates and other effluent in the water. Analyses over several weeks have shown water quality after treatment is well within federal state certification standards.

Chlorine is added to the water after treatment to make sure it is fit for drinking. The algae can be harvested and sold for use as animal feed, fertilizer or protein and fats for adding to foods for human consumption.

Hulls said the method can be added to existing treatment facilities with no major modifications to the original plant. For a city of 10,000 persons, the treatment gear can fit in a building of about 2,200 square feet, much less than required for other existing systems.

SANITARY engineering "has been in the dark ages, Hulls said. "Everyone wants to forget when they flush the toilet. But it should not be forgotten because it's a valuable resource."

The Tiburon plant will be able to handle 800,000 gallons a day on a regular basis, with peaks of 2.2 million gallons during heavy rainstorms.

Householders will pay about $15 more per year to meet the cost. The algae produced can be sold for about $160-$180 a ton.

Hulls says he is also looking for a way to market the large quantities of oxygen produced by the system.

Saigon sentences newsmen

SAIGON, NYTS — The Vietnamese government announced Saturday that 42 sentences had been meted out since June 22, including both fines and prison terms, against Vietnamese newspapermen.

The Saigon Court of First Instance tried 57 cases brought against newspapermen by the government, and in all but 15 cases, the defendants were convicted.

Sentences included prison terms up to one month, and heavy fines.

In no case did the government publicly disclose what the alleged offenses had been apart from charging violations of the press code.

While suppression of writers, publishers and publications regarded by the government as offensive has been characteristic of the Thieu regime for years, the frequency and harshness of government prosecutions of the press have increased sharply in recent weeks.

$1.4 million spent by Prop. 9 opponents

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Californians Against the Pollution Initiative, the group that campaigned against Prop. 9 on the June 6 ballot, reported it spent $1.4 million to defeat the measure.

LIBBED

KELSO, Wash. (UPI) — Not only did Greg Allen fail to get the disc jockey job he was seeking last week, but the defeat was like salt in the wound — his ex-wife was hired.

Allen sought a job with KLYK-FM and said he thought he had a good chance of landing it until his ex-wife, Jan Wiley, 19, told him about her new job — the one he had applied for.

Allen and his former wife went to school together and both trained for radio work.

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The new station wagon of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Briles of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, was stolen after they arrived here for the convention of the National Association of Retail Grocers of the United States.

As the couple prepared to return home, they heard the results of the door prize drawing of the convention. The winners: Mr. and Mrs. Briles. The prize: a new station wagon.

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — A judge known never to have driven a car was asked how he coped with auto accident cases in court. "It's really no handicap," he replied. "I also try rape cases."

GATORAID

OCILLA, Ga. (UPI) — Two Ocilla men had a one gator-powered boat for a while.

It happened while Ronald O'Quinn and Howard Jordan fished from a boat in a private pond and came across a 5-foot alligator.

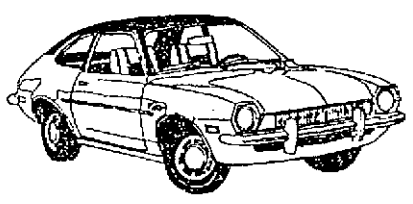

They left the reptile alone and continued fishing, but a few minute later Jordan hooked something big. It was the 'gator.

The alligator pulled the boat across the lake before freeing himself from the hook.

Jordan said the 'gator was "the big one that got away — that I didn't mind."

Middies get their sea legs

By BUCK LANIER
Military Editor

How do you tell the difference between an Annapolis midshipman and a middie from a college naval ROTC unit?

After some thought, a sailor on the Long Beach destroyer USS Chandler decided that "an Annapolis middie would not coach third base barefooted."

This was an observation at a ship's softball game but it could be a criterion of sorts.

COMMANDING officers will agree generally that the ROTC officers are a little more flexible, relaxed, adapted socially and not as awed by rank. However, the COs say, the Annapolis and college ensigns conform to one standard after about three months.

There is general agreement, too, that the Annapolis men go a little bit more by the book and also don't ask as many questions.

To get its potential officers ready for active duty, the Navy schedules summer midshipmen cruises. Middies from Annapolis and many ROTC units from all over the U.S. are all over and about Long Beach and San Diego ships.

A group on the nuclear frigate USS Bainbridge got its sea legs in a hurry, for following a "mixer" eight days ago, the ship left for Hawaii and assorted exercises en route and around the islands. They'll return Aug. 5.

The 23 aboard the USS Henderson won't get that much sea time, although they will be going out periodically as the Henderson gets the kinks out after a long yard period.

HEADING that contingent are two first classmen to be, Tom Nolte, University of Missouri, from Van Nuys; and Paul Gift, University of Louisville, Carmel.

As the group's senior men, they meet with the Henderson's skipper, Cmdr. Robert E. Karas. The captain is an ROTC graduate from Marquette University and takes a keen interest in the group's activities.

"The cruises serve a fine purpose, the least of which is to keep the just- commissioned ensigns from not looking quite as green as they really are. The first classmen work alongside the junior officers and eat in the wardroom while the others are assigned to petty officers.

"This gives these future officers a first-hand experience of how life is for the sailors. It is a great equalizer and cannot help but make the men better officers when they come on active duty," Cmdr. Karas said.

Three middies working with the sailors are Jim White, from Baton Rouge, La.'s Southern University, from Mobile, Ala.; Denis V. Army, Holy Cross in Boston, from Worcester, Mass.; and Michael Glagola, University of California, from Napa.

How about current campus attitudes about ROTC?

Glagola: "The radicals at Berkeley are more concerned with the ROTC as a group and there is little, if any individual harrassment. It doesn't bother me because Cal is a No. 1 school. You have to learn early that things always do not run smooth."

He is majoring in math and computer sciences and figures to put this to good use as a submarine officer.

Army: "There are lots of radicals at Holy Cross and their periodic protests don't bother me and many others who have definite goals set for their lives. Anyone can learn to put up with distractions."

Army, whose name draws some kidding from the Henderson's sailors, is an English major and wants to become a line officer.

White: "This past year was the first one for the

The fighting Wasp ends heroic duty

QUONSET POINT, R.I. (UPI) — The aircraft carrier Wasp, heavily damaged by a Japanese attack during the invasion of Iwo Jima in World War II, was decommissioned Saturday after a 30-year career.

The 808-foot carrier, ninth U.S. Navy ship to bear the name, was stricken from the Navy list because of the high cost of repairs. The ship was placed on reduced operating status earlier this year.

The Wasp was launched Aug. 13, 1943, and sent to the Pacific theater of operations. In March, 1945, while the ship was supporting the Iwo invasion, a Japanese plane dropped a 500-pound bomb into its hangar deck, killing 102 sailors and injuring 269.

Despite the heavy toll, fires were put out and repairs under way in less than an hour and the Wasp was again launching aircraft.

The ship was refitted in 1945, and 10 years later participated in the Chinese Nationalist evacuation of the Tachen Islands.

In the 1950s and 1960s, the Wasp joined NATO exercises in the Mediterranean, assisted U.S. forces off Lebanon in 1958, supported the U.N. airlift to the Congo, and participated in the "quarantine" of Cuba during the 1962 missile crisis.

unit at Southern and we were accepted OK. I've wanted to be a Marine for a long time and although some of my friends cannot understand this, I can't understand some of their view- points, either."

His major is political science and he plans to be a flying Marine.

Nolte: "Missouri is basically an agricultural school so it leans on the conservative side. I applied for USC first but when I missed there I was happy to get the opening at Mizzou."

He wants naval aviation and is majoring in industrial management.

Gift: "Louisville is right in the middle of the 'Bible Belt' and really the wailing about ROTC is at a minimum. I finished high school at Culver Military Academy in Indiana and decided that four years in a coed school would give me the balance I needed. ROTC will pave the way for my becoming a flier. I've given up an earlier ambition to play football for the Navy."

His major is business administration.

All five middies said their families were for their decisions to go the ROTC route and all show backgrounds in competitive athletics— from Gift's football at Culver to Army's soccer.

White, Army and Glagola are working, living and eating with the sailors and said they were enjoying it.

Nolte and Gift will stand junior officer watches and literally stay in the thick of the Henderson's operations during their time aboard.

Both agree assignment to a destroyer helps to get right into the middle of things they need to know about the operational Navy.

The middies will average about $350 a man for the six-week training plus travel money to their home unit.

"I'm glad it's to the home unit and not home," Nolte said. "There's a big difference between the money to Van Nuys and Columbia, Mo."

Aging causes studied

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — Backed by a $1 million grant and the drive to unlock one of nature's best-kept secrets, a State University at Buffalo biologist has begun a five-year study aimed at learning the causes of aging and, perhaps how to control that process.

Dr. Morton Rothstein, a Vancouver, B.C., native on the faculty here since 1965, readily admits his research will be no easy task but, nearing age 50 himself, he confesses that if there is a "cure," he's ready for it.

"There have been numerous theories about the aging process down through the years," he explained. "Practically as quickly as one comes up with one theory, it is contradicted by another.

"But regardless of the why or how, we all age and there must be a reason for it," he said.

ROTHSTEIN, a professor of biology, said his study would involve the use of nematodes — very small worms which keep the same cells from birth to death. Instead of cell multiplication, he said the nematodes grow by enlarging their cells.

"What we are working with is an organism whose cells we can observe at both young and old stages and we are observing the same cells," he said.

Rothstein said the nematodes, whose life span is only 30 to 40 days, are grown in test tubes and isolated, then separated into "young" and "old" organisms.

"By having control over the nutrients, temperature and other necessary growth requirements," he said, "the effect of these considerations on the total life span can be observed."

HE SAID biologists already know that, physiologically, wrinkled skin is caused by "oxidation, or a binding together of skin tissue," but that the cause of oxidation must be studied on a molecular level.

"Aging is a result of a changing in the operation of the cells," Rothstein said. "Every function performed in the body depends on enzymes which are produced and which act as catalysts for every chemical reaction in the body. . . .

"I believe that in the process of aging, something happens in the cells that causes an organism to produce ineffective enzymes."

The research is being conducted under a $1 million grant from the National Institute of Child Care and Human Development. It is one of the largest grants ever awarded a Buffalo professor, the university said.

Rothstein, who received his Ph.D. from the University of Illinois, has been studying the biochemistry of nematodes for 10 years and has published a number of technical reports.

"It may never be possible to stop the aging process altogether," he said, "but such research might one day enable scientists to at least contribute to a healthy life that is otherwise jeopardized by old age."

Injunction bars selling of skins

NEW YORK (UPI) — A judge has granted a temporary injuction barring a fur store from selling leopard-skin and other furs of endangered species.

The order was directed against Rosalie Furs, Inc., of New Rochelle, N.Y. and suburban Long Island. New York has a two-year old law barring sale of the skins of leopards, cheetahs, jaguars, ocelots and margays.

Parochial school aid Nixon aim

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

The Catholic drive for public aid to parochial schools has taken a terrible beating in the courts lately. But it's doing well politically — which may be more important in the long run.

In just a little over a year, federal courts have handed down nine adverse rulings on plans for channeling tax money to the support of church-related schools. Three of these rulings were by the Supreme Court.

The rulings knocked out plans which had been developed in several states to provide parochial schools with public funds on the theory the state was merely "purchasing educational services" rather than supporting religious institutions.

ALSO INVALIDATED by the courts was a different approach under which states reimbursed parents for tuition paid to private schools, and an arrangement under which teachers hired and paid by the public school system were "loaned" to parochial schools to teach specific secular subjects, such as math and foreign languages.

Advocates of aid to parochial schools have by no means given up, however. They now are pinning their hopes on a proposal made by President Nixon's panel on nonpublic education. It calls for federal income tax credits to cover half of the tuition paid to private schools up to a total credit of $400 per student.

Bills embodying this proposal already have been introduced in the House and Senate by Republicans who usually speak for the White House.

IN A SPEECH before Catholic educators in April, President Nixon said flatly his administration "must and will find ways" to provide public aid to parochial schools. Nixon acknowledged, however, that there are constitutional "difficulties."

Sen. Robert Taft Jr., R-Ohio, feels that these "difficulties" are so great no scheme of aid, including tax credits, can get by the courts. So he has proposed amending the Constitution to legalize tax aid for private schools.

About 5.4 million children — over 10 per cent of the total school enrollment — are now being educated in privately-financed schools, most of which are operated by the Catholic church. But sharply rising costs and growing parental resistance to tuition increases has placed many private schools in extreme financial difficulty. A recent government study indicated enrollment in nonpublic schools is likely to be cut in half by 1980 unless some way is found to ease the financial burden. That means about 2.5 million extra children for public schools to educate at public expense.

U.S. EDUCATION Commissioner Sidney P. Marland Jr. says public schools can absorb these transfers if necessary and it may not be as big a trauma as many had imagined. The reason, Marland says, is that a sharp drop in the birth rate has led to a "leveling off of growth in public school population."

In these remarks, Marland seems to be contradicting his boss, President Nixon. Nixon said in April that closing down parochial schools would swamp public school systems in many big cities and add at least $3 billion a year to public school costs.

Fund crisis threatens free clinic

By JOHN SHEEHAN
Staff Writer

The Long Beach Free Clinic, plagued by a continuous shortage of money, manpower and material, has managed to muddle through one crisis after another because people cared enough to keep it afloat.

Now the people who care about the clinic most of all are themselves the victims of the clinic's latest crisis which, unless resolved soon, may mean a giant step backward for the project.

The clinic, already bleeding because of an acute lack of funds, has not been able to pay its small, professional staff in more than two months. Unless these department heads, supervisors and technicians receive a quick, massive transfusion of cash, many of them may have to find other jobs in order to pay their bills.

"It's not the loss to the clinic that bothers me," said Charles Starr, the clinic's director, "so much as what their loss would mean to the community.

"Our staff is dedicated to making this clinic work," explained the former lab technician, "but many of them just can't afford not to get paid."

STARR, CLINIC DIRECTOR since February, said that two staff members have already been threatened with repossession of their cars because the payments haven't been made. "And one finance company has garnisheed a staff member's wages for a television set he bought from them," he explained.

"Kind of funny," he mused, "attaching wages that aren't even being paid." But Starr isn't laughing about this latest threat to the Free Clinic's existence. Several staff members have already left and more are threatening to if they aren't paid soon.

Marie Garside, who could go out tomorrow and get top pay as a dental assistant registered in oral radiology, prefers to work in the clinic as director of dental services. But she wonders how much longer she and her husband ca keep going.

"I'd really hate to leave the clinic," said the 25-year-old Mrs. Garside. "I really love it here because we're doing so much, but with my husband out of work and our savings just about eaten up, I wonder how we're going to make it."

Dennis Singer, a reformed addict who has been "clean" for more than a year, runs the clinic's drug abuse and rehabilitation program. For him the bite of not having been paid isn't so painful.

"I'm single," he explained, "so it's not so bad for me, but it's sure hard on some of these others. I don't see how they keep going, except that they believe in the clinic so much."

STARR SEES no relief in sight for his unpaid staff. The money that comes in daily from the clinic's youthful panhandlers doesn't begin to dent the project's operating expenses that must include drugs, antibiotics and the telephone. And the money from the promised and hoped-for grants will be needed for material more than wages.

Still, Starr sees the staff's willingness to stick it out in the face of this latest crisis as nothing short of heroic.

"I think that our financial situation is indicative of the clinic's dedication," he said. "Our people just refuse to give up. But it's tough, awfully tough."

IDA DOESN'T RING POLICE

Don't ask "Ida" for help.

The Long Beach Police Department's new emergency phone number is 435-7431, but the word association gimmick reported Saturday in the Independent, Press-Telegram, "Help Ida," dials out as 435-7432. There is no letter equivalent for the digit "1."

FOCUS ON L.B. HOMICIDE DETECTIVES

These men stalk killers

By STAN LEPPARD
Staff Writer

Murder will out, Shakespeare said. He didn't bother to add that it usually needs some help.

Volunteer help would be easy to come by from every armchair "private eye" schooled in the classics from Sherlock to Nero to Marlowe. They all dream about a deductive coup in which a lone hair on a carpet is parlayed into a psychoanalytic showdown that delivers the murderer into the waiting arms of well-meaning, but bumbling, authorities.

They might use a hair found on the carpet as an item of evidence, but you can bet they are going to have a truckload more ready for the prosecutor.

They might play a little fiddle like Sherlock, they might put down some cold beer like Nero, or they might dally with some classy blondes like Marlowe. But if they do, they do it on what little time off they have. It doesn't solve cases.

Murder cases are solved by a combination of back-breaking legwork and mind-grinding attention to detail that would discourage the hell out of Sherlock, Nero and Marlowe. A little luck doesn't hurt, but around-the-clock routine is what produces the results.

TAKE THE LONG BEACH Police Department's homicide detail, for instance.

The people who solve murders are professionals in murder -- a hard-working, hard-pressured bunch of cops called homicide detectives.

It's an eight-man crew, and seven out of the eight worked a total of 400 hours in overtime during the past month.

Why?

"Because when you get on a case you've got to keep on it; the older it gets the harder it gets," said Sgt. J. J. Hurlbirt, in charge of the detail. "You grab a couple of hours sleep when you can and you get something to eat when you can, and you keep at it until you either grab a suspect or run out of leads."

Sgt. R. W. Abraham, sitting at the next desk and going through a forbidding pile of paperwork, chimed in at this point with a story.

"I ran into Jack's (Hurlbirt's) wife on the street a couple of weeks ago, and she wanted to know how Jack was doing," Abraham said. "I told her he was fine, he had lost a couple of pounds and needed a haircut, but looking and feeling pretty good."

DETECTIVE BOB BELL, overhearing Abraham's comment, chimed in: "I called Abe's house one night not long ago and found out his wife is answering all calls with 'this is the widow Abraham speaking.' "

Others in the office at the time of the interview included Sgt. R. D. Mickelson and Sgt. J. H. Malcolm. Sgt. Ron Skaggs and Detective C. S. Roberson were either out on cases or in court, and Sgt. Doug Bostard was working the nightwatch.

(There's a standard Q. and A. game with Doug for interviewers: "How do I spell your name, Sergeant Bostard?" and Doug answers with a gleam in his eye, 'Very, very carefully . . .' ")

Take eight men, put a few in court, one on the nightwatch. That leaves maybe four, sometimes three, and even two, to handle new complaints coming in.

THE RESULT IS not far short of spectacular. For instance, there were seven murders in Long Beach between June 19 through June 24. Three days later, the LBPD homicide detail had arrested and arraigned suspects in five of the seven murders, plus another suspect for a murder two weeks previously.

"Just how do you go about a murder investigation, Sergeant?" I asked Hurlbirt. "Some of our readers would like to know all the steps that take place between the time that a body is found and a suspect is brought to court."

Hurlbirt, a wiry, personable man of 40 who looks younger despite a bushy mustache and little tension lines around the eyes, leaned back in his chair and considered.

"FIRST, YOU LOOK for clues," he said, grinning. "If you find some dude standing over the body of a shotgun victim, propping one foot on the decedent's chest while he reloads a smoking sawed-off, that's a pretty good clue.

"Or if there is nobody in the room but the corpse, but you find a calling card on the corpse's chest with the handwritten message: 'I told you I would get you, Joe,' then that narrows the field of investigation."

Come on, Jack. Seriously, now.

"You mean you want the procedural handbook from 1-A through 8-F, starting when somebody calls to report a murder or finding a corpse?" Hurlbirt demanded.

I TOLD HIM I didn't, but my boss did. At that time, I mistakenly thought I knew.

"Okay," Hurlbirt said, shrugging. "First, a patrol unit is dispatched to the scene to determine if someone is really dead there..."

The actions of the patrol unit, Hurlbirt pointed out, are of utmost importance and often bears a direct influence on the subsequent investigation.

The patrol officer or officers assume initial command, with a heavy responsibility. They first must determine that the victim is indeed dead, calling for medical assistance if there is any doubt. If there is a suspect on the scene, the patrol officer in charge must arrest said suspect and have him removed to police headquarters immediately.

Next, he must preserve the crime scene. This means barring everyone else from the immediate area—family, bystanders, the press, and even other policemen.

OTHER OFFICERS, stopping by to assist, can contaminate the scene," Hurlbirt pointed out. "They can step on and obliterate the mark of a shoe sole, or trample ashes into a rug. Every person who comes onto the scene, regardless of how careful he is, takes something away or leaves something behind. He affects the scene in some manner, and it could be in a way that hinders subsequent investigation."

If there are witnesses present, it is up to the patrol officer to collect identification and pertinent data from them—and keep them separated, the sergeant said.

Then the patrol officer notifies the watch commander and tells him homicide investigators are needed.

"This is important," Hurlbirt said. "It is very embarrassing to a watch commander if the media, or anyone else, calls him to ask about a murder and he doesn't know what is going on. It tends to irritate and upset him."

WHEN THE homicide investigators arrive, they assume absolute command, look the scene over, call for crime lab personnel and notify the coroner's office.

When the technicians, photographer and criminalists from the Long Beach Police Department's crime laboratory arrive, they have their work cutout, too.

"We had 37 murders in Long Beach in 1971. So far this year we have had 34 murders. And the year's only half gone."

The photographer shoots close-up shots and distant ones, for perspective, from all angles. "There is no such thing as too many pictures," Hurlbirt said.

Technicians look for latent prints on door jambs, furniture, the rear-view mirror (if the death scene is a car), and in one place in a house where prints always are found—the underneath side of the toilet seat. They take plaster casts of tool markings, foot and tire impressions, anything that has left a dent.

The criminalists take blood scrapings, samples of stains and liquids, look for evidence of narcotics, recover any bullets lodged at the scene outside of those possibly in the victim's body—in general, take samples of everything in sight.

HOMICIDE DETECTIVES, meanwhile, are examining in minute detail ("sometimes on hands and knees") everything in the area of the body, in an outward-working spiral. The investigation ultimately goes beyond the immediate scene to surrounding buildings, yards, fields or whatever.

The scene is still preserved—for second, third or fourth visits if necessary—and any "secondary scenes" involving the site of other evidence pertaining to the case are established.

Detectives interview all witnesses as promptly as possible, while their stories are fresh in their minds. They are trained to do so with consideration and politeness. ("You can't afford to offend them, because you need them.")

"People talk with us who wouldn't talk with any other detail of police."

After the detectives have determined all they can from the scene with the corpse still on the premises, they release the body to the coroner for an autopsy.

HOMICIDE investigators must attend and observe the autopsy, conferring with the pathologist while it is under way.

"We can help one another in many ways," Hurlbirt explained. "For instance, if the pathologist is looking for evidences of drugs and we know what kind of drugs he should look for, it expedites his report to a great degree. Or he might trace for us the point of entry and course of a bullet would go, helping us determine the angle of firing and approximate distance—if close—from gun muzzle to target."

In the subsequent search for a suspect, if none is on the scene, investigators call freely on other police agencies for help.

"In this case, we have a definite responsibility to those agencies to inform them thoroughly about what is wanted and notify them of any developments," Hurlbirt said. "If we've put through a surveillance request, we must notify the agency promptly when it is no longer needed.

"For instance, if there's a couple of Los Angeles detectives staked out on a house in their territory for us, and we pick up the suspect here, we've got to tell them immediately," Hurlbirt went on.

"If this is overlooked, and they are still staked out on the house when they happen to read in the newspaper or hear over the radio that we have the suspect in jail at Long Beach, it would tend to irritate them."

Meanwhile, the paper work mounts as all leads are checked. Detectives establish a permanent record of massive amounts of information in the "murder book method," keeping everything under one cover for instant appraisal by administrative superiors or prosecutors later on.

The collection of evidence goes on. "We might bring it in by the truckload, maybe 200 or more items, and only use 15 or so when the evidence goes to the prosecutor," Hurlbirt said.

THE LEG WORK and questioning also goes on.

"Prostitutes, for example; people with a record of offenses other than murder. If we said we were from narco, or from vice, or maybe from robbery, they would clam up. But they'll usually talk with homicide detectives because they know we're trying to solve a murder, and we can't get sidetracked on anything else."

Prostitutes in particular have proved to be a valuable source of information, Hurlbirt said.

"We have had cases in which their information has been instrumental in finding a suspect," he said. "We have found these people, from $100 a night call girls on down, have cooperated freely."

AT THIS POINT, Sgt. Abraham swung around at his desk and fixed Hurlbirt with a baleful eye.

"Please make it clear in the paper that all this free cooperation means for informational purposes only," he snapped. "Kindly define that carefully. Our wives read the paper."

When a suspect is arrested in a murder case, Hurlbirt went on, the homicide detectives' work is not finished.

They must have pre-trial conferences with the prosecutor, re-interview witnesses with the prosecutor, revisit the crime scene with the prosecutor, and be present at counsel table with the prosecutor during the court action —both preliminary hearing and actual trial.

MEANWHILE, WHAT happens to the suspect from the time of his arrest to the date of court appearance?

First, said Hurlbirt, he is given a breathalyzer test

Detoured to Long Beach

THE LACKAWANNA is bankrupt.

This is like saying that Mother is a fink and tomorrow's sunrise has been postponed on account of rain.

Today they call it the Erie-Lackawanna and blame the eastern floods for the undermining of a railroad ranging over 3000 miles of track in Ohio, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana and Illinois.

BEFORE ITS MARRIAGE with the Erie, its maiden name was Delaware, Lackawanna & West, which said it all.

Compared to the great lines of the West—Union Pacific, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Burlington, Rock Island, and the transcontinental lines of Canada — the old D, L & W was a spur.

But to a boy mentally collecting boxcars as they rolled over a prairie crossing, a Lackawanna was the top prize.

Lackawanna—the sound of a gondola echoing over a high trestle, the wandering of a flatcar laden with steel machines, the trundling of an engine downgrade from mountain to valley, the last salute from a caboose disappearing into a tunnel.

In New York State it kept company with the great ones like Baltimore & Ohio, Canadian Pacific, New York Central, and the venturesome Wabash.

And the little ones: Arcade & Attica, Dansville & Mt. Morris, Genesee & Wyoming, Lehigh Valley, Lowville & Beaver River, Marcellus & Otisco, Susquehanna, Unadilla Valley. In Pennsylvania: Castleman River, Bellefonte Central, Bessemer & Lake Erie, Chestnut Ridge, East Broad Top, Monongahela.

IN ITS PETITION for bankruptcy the railroad asked the court to help it reorganize and stay in business.

A way may be found for it to survive, but who knows under what name?

Lackawanna is like the given name of the pyrotechnical member of the Bankhead family.

Tallulah . . . "a name for a waterfall...a name to grace the steaming flanks of a locomotive."

Lackawanna...a name to linger in the legend of the Iron Horse.

IN TIMES OF WAR the soldier finds very little poetry in the railroads he encounters.

He is far from a romantic knight to the solemn men at the Pentagon. He is a pinhead to be moved from Point A to Point B...on to Points C and D...and sometimes clear off the map.

This was brought home to me in the Second War to Save the World for Democracy.

The military used anything that could be rolled on a track to move the men around. I once watched ...hypnotized...while the conductor toured through a passenger car, lighting the gas mantles of the lamps.

Troop trains moved—when they weren't sidetracked to let cattle cars rattle by—on every available stretch of rails.

When our outfit shipped out for overseas, we tooled through as many states as the Pentagon could find.

WE WENT FROM Camp Shenango in western Pennsylvania to Cincinnati, to a point east of Chicago, to Hannibal, Mo., to Kansas City, to Denver, to Salt Lake City, to Riverside.

We borrowed at various times the tracks of the Erie, the New York Central, the Baltimore & Ohio, the Pennsylvania, the Wabash, the Rock Island, the Denver & Rio Grande, and the Union Pacific.

Then they ran out of track.

We rode by truck through Long Beach to Los Angeles Harbor.

After that our troop ship needed only 44 days to get to Bombay.

We took the short route on the edge of the Antarctic Ocean.

Local officials' plaint: 'He loves me, he loves me not'

SACRAMENTO—Pity the poor local elected official. Most of the tools he uses while working on local problems are selected for him at the state and local level, thus denying him, he says, the flexibility needed to combat the problems unique to his community or country.

He has to use those state and federal tools, or programs, because they are tied to the state and federally provided fuel, i.e., money, without which the machinery of local government could not function.

NOT ONLY DOES the local official feel his hands are tied, but he has to bear the brunt of citizens' complaints when the programs fail to work. And when he goes to state and federal officials to say the programs don't work, he is as often as not told that they'd work if there were a greater degree of competence at the local level.

Then why, the local official asks, did you mandate the program to begin with if you didn't think we could administer it properly?

There is seldom an answer, and the official's confusion and frustration increases.

Bob Schmidt

conflicting attitudes local officials face is Gov. Reagan's ambivalence toward him.

WHEN THE GOVERNOR is talking about coastline protection, for instance, he insists that the only authority for planning should be local government, because local government is more familiar with the unique local situation than a regional agency would be, and is also closer, and therefore more responsive, to the wishes and sentiments of local citizens.

But when the governor is talking about tax reform, then, he says, local government is not to be trusted with final authority because as soon as state government makes it possible for property taxes to be reduced, local government will simply raise them again.

For that reason, Reagan requires that expenditure limits be a part of any comprehensive tax package sent him by the legislature.

The governor's skepticism of local government's desire to keep taxes down must seem even more confusing to the official who remembers Reagan's approach to handling a state money surplus a few years ago.

STATE TAXES HAD been raised too much by the governor in 1967, and welfare and Medi-Cal costs had not come anywhere near where he thought they would be, so in 1968 the state treasury was fatter than it figured to be.

The governor proposed to give most of the surplus back to the taxpayers. And to simplify things, he suggested, the state should simply give the money to county supervisors, and the supervisors could then reduce the local property tax assessment by an amount equal to the rebate.

"The supervisors won't pass the tax rebate along," critics said. "They'll just find a way to spend it on local programs."

"Nonsense," Reagan responded. "If you can't trust locally elected officials, whom can you trust?"

The governor has never explained whether his altered assessment of local officials' concern for their constituents' tax burden is due to greater wisdom on his part or to a deteriorating quality of character among those officials.

HIS AMBIVALENCE on the matter, simply stands unexplained, as confusing to voters as it must be to the officials themselves.

When a governor says we have to put controls on local officials because if we don't they'll make a tax relief program meaningless, then a voter might be tempted simply to throw the rascals out at the next election and put people in office the governor can trust.

But then the governor turns around and tells millions of Californians concerned about environmental protection that they should put their ultimate faith and trust in those same local officials.

It is the state and not local government which should protect citizens against tax abuse, he says. But it is local government, and not the state, which should protect citizens against environmental abuse.

For frustrated and harassed local officials who would like to be pulling in the same direction with other levels of government in doing the things government does, a consistency of attitude at those other levels would be helpful.

What Humphrey achieved

In engineering a successful assault on George McGovern's California delegation, Hubert Humphrey made it virtually certain that whoever the next president of the United States is it will not be Hubert Humphrey.

Before the Democrats' Credentials Committee stripped McGovern of 151 of his 271 California delegates, Humphrey had put his own chances of winning the Democratic nomination at no better than one in four. That was wildly optimistic at the time, and it remains so, for it is difficult to conceive of any stop-McGovern movement that could be built around a Humphrey candidacy. George McGovern and his followers are too upset ever to accede gracefully to a rerun of 1968.

Indeed, McGovern said that he could not support Humphrey if the Minnesota senator were the Democratic candidate. McGovern's fervent supporters among young people and intellectuals will almost certainly feel the same way. Many other Democrats and independents will, too, for Humphrey violated a fundamental rule of fair play. The rule is simply that you don't wait to complain about the rules until after you've lost the game.

That's what Humphrey did in California. Before the primary election, he announced that he was counting on having the full 271-vote delegation behind him in Miami Beach. After the election, Humphrey developed the theory that those who voted for the losing candidates should also be represented at the convention.

The Electoral College doesn't work that way. Perhaps it should. But some voters may wonder what would happen if Hubert Humphrey were the Democratic nominee and won in the popular vote but lost in the Electoral College. Would he take the election to the courts and snarl up the country while he tried to achieve his ambition by remaking the rules?

The problem is not a serious one. Hubert Humphrey is, finally, too responsible a man to do that.

Nor is he likely to have the chance.

McGovern has considerable reserve support among delegates pledged to George Wallace and other candidates. He may well be able to muster the votes to take back on the convention floor the California delegates the Humphrey forces deprived him of in committee.

Even if he doesn't, he is so far ahead of the other candidates in delegate strength that he is likely to be the Democratic nominee.

If Humphrey should succeed in blocking McGovern, the McGovern forces will almost certainly succeed in blocking Humphrey and handing the nomination to Edward Kennedy or some other candidate acceptable to the McGovern coalition.

Finally, in the unlikely event Humphrey gets the nomination, he will find that the dissension bred by his own tactics has rendered it worthless.

A reminder to the generous

Long Beach residents are compassionate, generous and terribly forgetful.

Given the first two qualities which everyone knows about, it is necessary to assume the third on the basis of the home folks' performance in the current desperation fund drive of the Red Cross.

The floods in Rapid City, S.D., forced the Red Cross to open a $5 million national fund drive to fill its depleted disaster fund. Then came Hurricane Agnes, the floods in Pennsylvania and the Isleton calamity that forced 1,500 families from their homes in the Sacramento-San Joaquin delta.

Red Cross personnel resources were strained. Staff members were sent to disaster sites all over the country. From Long Beach, Wes England, the director of safety programs, was sent to Harrisburg, Pa., to operate a shelter for flood victims.

Red Cross financial resources were even more seriously strained. The emergency fund drive goal was doubled to $10 million.

The Long Beach goal, originally set at $23,165, was doubled to $46,330.

So far, a little under $1,200 has come in to the Long Beach Red Cross chapter at 319 W. Broadway. Long Beach can do better, and it will. The $46,330 goal should be met by a city that has known disaster itself and that knows what it is to have friends and to be a friend.

Let impartial group probe bugging case

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The potential for damaging political fall-out from the burglary and bugging of national Democratic party headquarters is so great that only forceful action by President Nixon can save the Republican party from serious consequences in the November election.

To date, the most damaging fact is the arrest of the top security man for two Republican party organizations along with four others at gunpoint at Democratic headquarters June 17.

So far, there are only hints of lines of responsibility that point to the White House. However, the hints are strong enough that the President should waste no time in taking a leaf from President Calvin Coolidge's book when he set up a bipartisan special counsel to handle the investigation and prosecution of the infamous Teapot Dome scandals.

IT WAS A precarious step for President Coolidge to take, but it was necessary to avoid political blame in the 1924 election for the crimes of the Harding administration. Eminent men, one a Republican and one a Democrat, were named to head the investigation independent of the Justice Department.

President Nixon could take a long step up the credibility ladder by naming similar men of recognized integrity to investigate the Democratic headquarter's burglary independent of the Justice Department.

Former Senator John J. Williams of Delaware, whose aggressive pursuit of dishonesty and unethical conduct in both parties was the hallmark of his 24 years in the Senate, would be the type of Republican who should be named.

Former Senator Paul Douglas, a liberal Democrat from Illinois, is the type of man who would have the confidence of most liberal Democrats.

THE CREDIBILITY of the Nixon administration was seriously damaged by the ITT affair, even though the investigation ended with Richard Kleindienst confirmed as attorney general.

It may have been a fair settlement of the ITT antitrust cases, but the memo by ITT lobbyist Dita Beard left the worst possible suspicions that the White House was somehow involved. Mrs. Beard's memo linked the settlement of a major ITT antitrust suit to a company contribution to help finance the 1972 GOP National Convention.

The fact that there have been so many questions of credibility raised around Kleindienst's confirmation is one of the reasons the public may have grave doubts about how thoroughly the Justice Department, headed by Kleindienst, will handle the investigation promised on the alleged robbery and bugging caper.

THE ARREST of James McCord Jr., an employe of the main Nixon campaign organization as well as the Republican National Committee, does not improve the public confidence in the probe.

This is particularly sticky because the Committee for the Re-Election of the President is headed by former Attorney General John N. Mitchell, Kleindienst's former boss.

Also, the acting director of the FBI is Patrick Gray, who had served as an assistant attorney general under Mitchell and had been nominated as deputy attorney general by Mitchell and Nixon prior to being named to the FBI post upon J. Edgar Hoover's death.

President Nixon cannot afford to leave unanswered questions in the investigation of the burglary at Democratic headquarters, and it is unlikely that any investigation under the direction of Kleindienst and Patrick Gray will be sufficient to stifle doubts.

THE RESPONSES from Republican spokesmen to date have not been very satisfactory. White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler attempted to brush off the incident as just another "third-rate burglary" and unworthy of White House comment. Mitchell's retort was little better.

Pundit prophets at a loss

Always skeptical of those seers who claim after the fact that they predicted it, I peeked in the file.

There, in August of last year, was Jimmy the Greek Snyder giving odds that Sen. Edmund Muskie would not only win the Democratic nomination but would beat Nixon.

Jack Anderson's column bearing the prediction noted that Jimmy had been signed on for regular predictions because of his "uncanny accuracy" and the fact that "he has never called a presidential election wrong since the Truman-Dewey upset in 1948."

Bob Houser

Then there was an early 1972 poll of 97 editors of the major daily newspapers in the U.S. Muskie was named as the Democratic nominee by 63 per cent, Humphrey by 16 per cent, Kennedy by 7 and Jackson by 3. McGovern was not even mentioned.

A Nebraska editor added a comment: "McGovern is not catching on."

Former Assembly Speaker Jess Unruh, in January, saw Humphrey defeating Muskie in the California primary.

Unruh was correct in putting Humphrey ahead of Muskie but that wasn't what he had in mind.

Jimmy the Greek and the editors still could be right but the odds against them are longer than the ones they saddled McGovern with, e.g. 200 to 1 by Jimmy.

Emboldened by such clinkers from these and other experts and by the imminence of the convention, I too will predict.

Just two things: The Credentials committee prorating of California delegates according to their popular vote—cutting McGovern from all 271 delegates to 118—will be overturned by the convention. Secondly, Sen. Hubert Humphrey will assume a hero's role once this has happened. He will be recognized at a dramatic and strategic point in the session and make the move to assure McGovern's victory.

Chairpersons of the McGovern California delegation Assemblymen Willie Brown, John Burton and Dolores Huerta suggested one reason for optimism at the floor fight. Brown pointed out that even under the Credentials committee ruling 118 McGovern delegates from California may take their seats immediately and without challenge. Thus there are 118 votes to override the committee.

McGovern sources in Washington have done some tentative head counting and calculate it will take 1,435 floor votes to override and that they may have as many as 1,485 for that vote.

State Sen. Joseph M. Kennick, D-Long Beach, one of Humphrey's earliest supporters and a member of the delegation who paid his deposit for the Miami Beach trip, says he will not go. Kennick said he will recommend that his place be taken by Cora Cocks, also a Humphrey delegate and cochairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, 32nd Congressional District.

It will be a real flight of faith for Humphrey delegates—a standby flight. The 104 Humphrey people would have to stand in the wings hoping the convention will sustain the Credentials committee ruling. If they lose they're out and headed back to California sadder and poorer.

Willie Brown made another point in the wake of the 72 to 66 Credentials committee vote against McGovern. He said that at least four delegations under challenge before the committee, including that of Chicago Mayor Richard Daley, sent representatives personally to Senator McGovern to make deals.

If McGovern people would vote in committee to have the challenged delegations seated they would vote McGovern's interests in the California case. Brown said McGovern rejected all those deals. If this fact is disclosed at the convention, he opined, it would be another reason for convention ratification of McGovern's case, "his integrity."

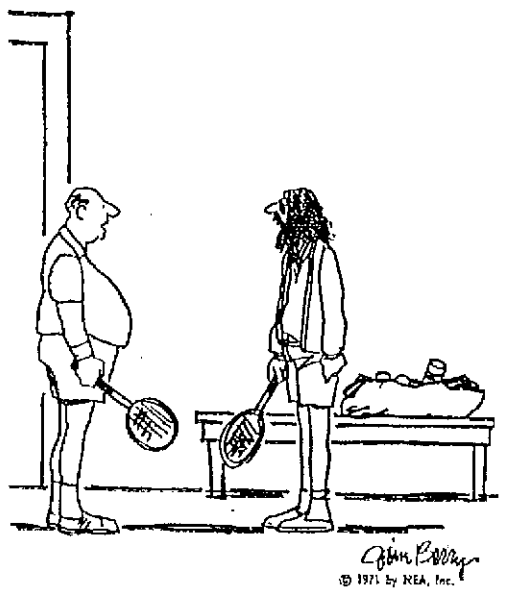

Now, since Mayor Daley's delegation has been ousted by Credentials, anti-McGovern forces see a coalition of Daley, Humphrey, Muskie and Wallace types in an attritional victory over the frontrunner on the convention floor. If they are successful in this search and destroy mission against McGovern their laurel and garland are pyrrhic—or else the signals of the coming new politics are, incredibly, false.

Conservative Republican columnist James Kilpatrick seems to read the signals as real and relevant. He wrote recently:

"With the sole exception of John Kennedy, our presidents of the past generation have projected an image of old politics and old men; Roosevelt, Truman, Eisenhower, Johnson, Nixon. But in this time, seldom perceived, all kinds of new politics have developed: the black vote, the youth vote, women's liberation, the dramatic changes in the nature of our cities."

The tide of the future is "new." It may mean a newer Nixon or an older McGovern. But if there are again two "olds" in the pot many electoral hands may fold before the draw. Then suddenly there will be a new and deft slicker in the game, a Third Party.

Nondirective parenthood

Why do parents sometimes get "written off" by their children? Why do children stop talking to their parents about the things that really bother them?

It is a rare child who says, "My parents have faults but I like them the way they are." Often children say such things as, "It's gotten to the point where I just can't confide in my mother about even the litlest things."

Samuel I. Hayakawa

The reason, says Dr. Thomas Gordon in "Parent Effectiveness Training" (Peter H. Wyden, Inc., $6.95), is that some parents are constantly communicating messages of nonacceptance. "The soil that most parents provide for their children's growth is heavy with evaluation, judgment, criticism, preaching, moralizing, admonishing and commanding."

MOST PARENTS assume that if they accept a child with all his imperfections, he will remain just the way he is. Therefore the best way to aid a child in becoming a better person is to let him know what they don't accept about him.

Yet the central paradox of Dr. Gordon's theories (based largely on theories of Carl Rogers) is that the more a child is accepted just as he is, the more likely he is to change. When a child feels accepted, he feels free to move, to grow, to think about what he is capable of becoming.

But parents communicate nonacceptance by interfering and correcting the child. "Here's what a castle should look like." "Build it farther from the water." To keep hands off when a child is absorbed in his activities is a strong, nonverbal way of saying, "I accept what you are doing." Adults too often won't let children be.

Dr. Gordon distinguishes between two kinds of listening, "active" and "passive," which can signal acceptance to the child. If a child comes home and reports that he was sent to the principal's office, parents tend to say things like, "Well, that should teach you a lesson!"

If a parent is listening passively he might say, "Oh?" and the child might respond, "Yeah. Mr. Franks said I was talking too much. I can't stand that old fossil. His class is so boring you wouldn't believe it."

"Mm-hmmm."

"It makes me mad when I get a lousy teacher." Silence. "I do good with a good teacher but with Mr. Franks, I just don't feel like learning anything." Parent shrugs. "But I won't always get good teachers, so I guess I'd better get used to it."

THIS METHOD of listening permits the child to release his anger and to contemplate consequences of possible courses of action. The parent's passivity and silence facilitate this moment of development.

Active listening, however, is perhaps the most important way of communicating acceptance. This method, like passive listening, requires that the parent suspend his own thoughts and judgments and attend exclusively to those of the child. The usual method of dealing with a child's problem goes something like this:

"Tommy won't play with me today. He won't ever do what I want."

"Well, why don't you do what he wants? You've got to learn to get along with your friends." (Advising, moralizing.)

"I don't like the things he wants to do."

"Well, get someone else to play with then." (Offering a solution.)

"There isn't anyone else to play with."

"You're upset because you're tired. You'll feel better tomorrow." (Interpreting, reassuring.)

"I'm not tired and I won't feel different tomorrow. You just don't understand."

WITH ACTIVE listening, the child would not walk away so dejected.

"Tommy won't play with me today. He won't ever do what I want."

"You're angry with Tommy."

"I don't want him for a friend any more."

"You're so angry you feel like never seeing him again." (Reflecting feelings, restating the problem.)

"That's right. But if I don't have him for a friend, I won't have anyone to play with."

"You would hate to be left with no one."

"Yeah. I guess I just have to get along with him somehow."

With active listening on the mother's part, the child often works out his own problems.

Passive listening, saying "Tell me about it," can let a child open up. It encourages him to talk to you. Active listening, getting inside a child's experience and feeding back to him his message, helps to clarify the problem for the child so he can work out his own solutions.

LIKE DR. GORDON, I studied with Carl Rogers. I did a lot of "active listening" to my children, who soon began to understand the method. They called it giving a "mirror response," which is a good description of what is required. It is better than commanding, warning, moralizing, lecturing. These are all ways of guiding my manipulation.

Children don't need that and don't want it.

Educating barbarians

By WILLIAM V. SHANNON

More students are attending college and more money is being spent on higher education by their parents and by society than ever before. But there is great danger that much of this investment of time and money is being squandered because many college faculties and college administrations are intellectually irresponsible and incompetent.

At some colleges, the retreat from responsibility is far advanced. Required courses are abolished. The teaching of the traditional curriculum in the arts and sciences is abandoned, in whole or in part. Written examinations and formal grades disappear. Students, including freshmen, are invited to "design your own courses." Even when students begin to concentrate in some field of study, they may find that what used to be regarded as a major has lost its coherence and they are instead encouraged to slosh about in that primordial ooze known as "interdisciplinary studies."

YET THERE IS NO mystery about what a college-educated person should know. It is not necessary to agree entirely with Robert M. Hutchins and the advocates of the "Great Books" to recognize that there are books every college graduate ought to have read and ideas he ought to be familiar with. An educated person should have studied literature, physical science, mathematics, history, philosophy, religion, music, art, and the social sciences and know at least one foreign language.

Since there is not time in four years to learn everything that is worth knowing about all these important subjects, college should be a period of intense hard work, rigorous, concentrated and, at times, exhausting. Intellectual opportunities lost then may never be regained. The books not read, the ideas not mastered, the specific knowledge not acquired may never become part of one's intellectual endowment.

It is true, of course, that education is a life-long enterprise. One can take a college course at 50 as well as at 20. But as most people sadly discover the pressures of career and family life can block all but the strongest drives for intellectual self improvement. It is a lot easier to learn Russian or study Kant or thread one's way through the labyrinthine passages of Proust and Joyce when one has no competing distractions. Moreover, the sooner one acquires knowledge, the longer one has to enjoy it.

IF ALL THIS is as self-evident as it surely is, why then are so many colleges in flight from their intellectual responsibility?

Unfortunately, education attracts an abnormal share of mediocre persons with little exact knowledge or useful talent: men and women who cannot teach physics or Greek or history, who cannot heal a sick child or build a bridge or write a poem. Such persons too often find a living in the intellectual wasteland of educational theory and educational administration. The one thing they can do is verbalize and generate a smog of memoranda.

Sooner or later, they wear down and override serious teachers and scholars who get bored with long committee meetings and circular arguments about the trivial, the abstract and the incomprehensible. Developing a protective mask of cynicism, serious men retire to their academic specialties, leaving the curriculum to the blighting touch of the so-called innovators.

THERE IS RARELY anything genuinely new in these "reforms." Charles W. Eliot abolished required courses and introduced the free elective system at Harvard nearly a century ago. After two generations of experimentation, most serious educators recognized that this smorgasbord or cafeteria approach to curriculum planning scarcely assured young people of the broad general education they need. Harvard and other colleges turned back 30 years ago to more coherent theories of general education. But the enemies of intellectual seriousness are once more going strong and with none of the restraints such as grades, written examinations, departmental majors and intellectual traditions which prevailed in President Eliot's day.

Many, though not all, students are delighted. Most young Americans are extraordinarily verbal. Instead of written examinations, they would naturally prefer to be judged on the quality of their class participation. They rarely know what is in their own intellectual best interest for the whole of their lives. They would much rather talk about homosexuality or the new wave in film making or the urban crisis than study irregular French verbs or the calculus or the treaty of Utrecht. There is nothing wrong with discussing sexual mores or movies or the urban crisis, but that is what students have bull sessions for and why they read newspapers and magazines. It is not why they go to college.

THE RESPONSIBILITY lies with the administration and the faculty. The intellectual devitalization, which has ruined many good high schools across the country, is now spreading rapidly into the colleges. The result can only be a swelling tribe of New Barbarians, armed with college degrees and glib phrases but ignorant. If many parents are uneasy, they have good reason.

Comparing moral and sex education

The Arizona Republic is concerned over the venereal disease epidemic in its area. Its views might well be applied to California and most other states. Its comments are as follows:

Venereal disease in Arizona has reached almost epidemic proportions, and young people under 25 years of age last year accounted for about two-thirds of all infectious VD cases reported to the State Health Department.

Arizona ranks tenth among all states in the incidence of syphillis, with 14 cases for every 100,000 people. The state's VD rate has increased 30 per cent from last year—twice the national rate of increase. Infectious venereal disease has doubled across the country in the last decade.

ALL EXPERTS seem to agree that the only way to reduce this alarming trend is through sex education. Even in England, where Dr. R. D. Catterall of London's Middlesex Hospital estimates that in any school class of 16-year-olds there is a 50-50 chance that someone has VD, it is thought that sex education is the obvious answer.

The logic of this advice, frankly stated, is that the incidence of venereal disease will plummet if only someone will tell inexperienced young people how to enjoy sex without contracting the disease. Or, extrapolated to its ultimate ludicrous extreme, put contraceptives in every school lunchbox with detailed instructions about when and how to use them.

We agree, however, with Arizona State Superintendent of Public Instruction Weldon Shofstall, who said in a recent statement to the State Board of Education that "education about venereal disease is futile, and probably harmful, if it is only factual and frightening and does not include moral education."

Shofstall's indictment of one sex education approach—that we can solve the problem of VD "by teaching young people how to have premarital or extramarital sex without becoming infected"—correctly abjures self-gratification as the only goal of life and nullifies the community that we must return to the forgotten concept of self-discipline that makes possible continued existence of the civil social order.

THE SAME PEOPLE who talk about sex education as the answer to venereal disease, observed Shofstall, are often the ones who also believe we can eliminate drug addiction by teaching young people how to use drugs without abusing them or becoming addicted, and criminality by repealing laws which are difficult to enforce.

Shofstall's view—one that is belatedly gaining currency across the country—is that we must strongly emphasize moral education in the home, church, and school. "In attempting to solve these problems," he declared, "there seem to be many people who fail to realize that there are universal and eternal laws of human behavior which cannot be disregarded or repealed without serious consequences."

We cannot hope to cope with the growing number of social problems—venereal disease, drug addiction, crime, infidelity, discrimination, greed, and so forth—unless we inculcate young minds with moral truths, embodied in the Ten Commandments and the outstanding precepts of other world religions, that have withstood the test of time.

TEACH MORAL and religious precepts in public schools? Why not? As Shofstall correctly noted, secular humanism—the pragmatic social philosophy that currently obtains in most professional education circles—was described as a nontheistic religion by the Supreme Court in its 1961 Torcaso versus Watkins decision.

To teach according to the materialistic precepts of secular humanism, therefore, to the total exclusion of any moral or spiritual instruction, is to establish a state religion, not to become religiously neutral.

Parents, churchmen, and educators must accept the blame for social problems like venereal disease if they insist upon teaching the facts about sex without the moral foundation that puts sexual experience into perspective.

PUBLICIZING a street, highway, or intersection as particularly dangerous is counter-productive, because everybody wants to rush out to see it.

AN "ASTUTE" political advisor is one whose candidate won the last election in spite of him.

Is environmentalism at flood tide?

The rains came to most of the Eastern Seaboard and somehow the environmentalists are being blamed.

The flooding came at the same time a dike broke in California, doing in a small town there.

SOMEHOW THE environmentalists are being accused of responsibility for both floods. Sen. James Buckley, Conservative of New York, is leading the way.

Little credit is given to a storm named Agnes on the East Coast and some construction work on the West Coast.

There were lessons to be learned from the flood, but the basic lesson should not be fear of the environmental movement.

The Army Corps of Engineers talks about storms in terms of how often a strong storm is likely to occur—a 5-year storm, a 10-year storm, a 100-year storm.

Any reporter who covers floods quickly finds out that a 100-year storm is likely to occur about once every three years. I've covered five floods called 100-year storms myself, and I'm not that old.

THERE ARE a couple of contributing factors. Urbanization intensifies the power of a storm—all that asphalt for parking lots, highways, freeways and school yards drains immediately, creating an intensified flood threat.

DOWN TO EARTH

Mr. Developer puts a subdivision into a low-lying area. It rains and the subdivision is flooded. Then the government, called in by the people who are really hurt, builds flood control projects.

The developer makes his money and isn't hurt by the flood. The people who buy the houses are hurt and so are the general taxpayers who have to foot the bill for flood relief and for flood control.

The problem would be better handled if the developer was told he couldn't build in the flood area. California is now trying to enforce such a ruling.

The environmental movement is supporting the effort to control unwise development.

MORE DAMS AND more channelized creek and rivers are a partial and expensive answer at best. Dams can and do fail, concrete river banks can and do overflow when the rains come.

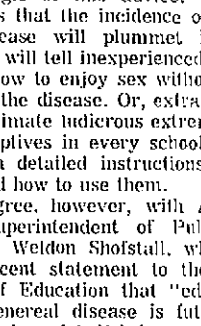

There is but one really basic answer to a flood: Be where the water isn't.

And that is what the environmental movement is all about: learning to live with, not fight, nature.

12 AREA PILOTS ENTERED

150 planes to take off in 26th Powder Puff derby

By HERB SHANNON
Aerospace Editor

Twelve Long Beach area distaff pilots, including the youngest, will be among the starters in 105 light planes entered in the 26th annual All-Women Transcontinental Air Race from San Carlos, Calif., to Toms River, New Jersey, beginning at 9 a.m. Friday.

Also known as the Powder Puff Derby, the race this year will have entries from 30 states, plus competitors from Australia, Canada, Germany and South Africa. Honorary starter will be Col. Gregory (Pappy) Boyington, Marine Corps and Flying Tiger ace of World War II.

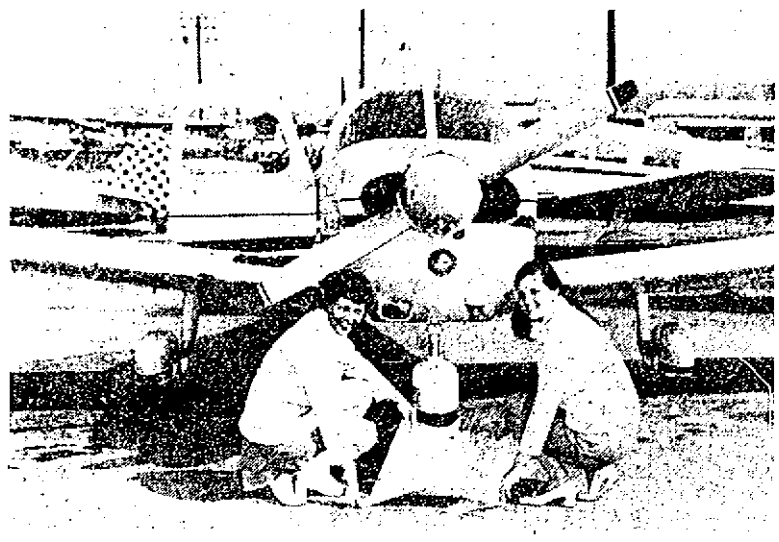

Cash prizes totaling $12,500 and trophies await the 10 top winners in the 2,616-mile coast-to-coast dash. Each plane has been rated at a par speed by race officials, and will be judged on a handicap system. Prizes are awarded for improvement of performance over the par rating, thus winners will not be known until all the finishing planes' time records have been computed.

The course this year takes the Powder Puffers from San Carlos in the San Francisco Bay area to Winnemucca, Nevada; Ogden, Utah; Rock Springs, Wyoming; Scottsbluff, Nebraska; Sioux City, Iowa; Moline, Illinois; Latrobe, Pennsylvania; and the finish line at Toms River. All planes must be identified at all stops, but only Moline and Latrobe are mandatory landing and refueling points.

To qualify for prizes, all planes must finish the race before 6 p.m. EDT on Monday, July 10.

Youngest pilot in command in the race will be Kathleen (Kay) FitzPatrick, 20, of 2345 Sparta Dr., Miraleste, who is flying her fourth derby. On previous tries, she flew as co-pilot for her mother, Mrs. James (Gene) FitzPatrick, a flight instructor at Rose Aviation, Hawthorne.

This year Kay will be piloting a Piper PA-28 Cherokee, with Mary Catherine Gottschalk of West Covina as co-pilot. Kay's mother is unable to compete in the 1972 classic because she is attending a reunion of the Women's Air Service Pilots (WASPS) of World War II in Texas.

FROM OCEAN TO OCEAN
Mary Catherine Gottschalk, left, of West Covina and Kathleen (Kay) FitzPatrick of Miraleste go over flight plans for Friday's Powder Puff Derby. The women will fly their Piper 180 Cherokee from San Carlos near San Francisco to Toms River, New Jersey along with an estimated 200 other lady flyers.

Other entries in the derby from Long Beach and Orange County areas include:

Trina Jarish, 1247 Baker St., Costa Mesa, co-pilot of a Piper PA-24 Comanche B with pilot Landon Storrs of Hamden, Conn.

Jean Schiffmann, 4209 Via Valmonte, Palos Verdes Estates, co-piloting a Cessna 182-K with Emma McGuire of Santa Monica.

Dorothy A. Waltz, 24432 Overlake, El Toro, pilot, and M. W. (Wally) Funk II, 655 Eighth Pl., Hermosa Beach, co-pilot of a Piper PA-24 Comanche C aircraft.

Madine Carpenter, 1862 Bonaire Way, Newport Beach, pilot of another Piper Comanche C with Julie Burns, 4621 Brighton, Corona Del Mar, as co-pilot. Their sponsor is Air California, intrastate commuter airline based at Orange County Airport.

Shirley Tanner Cote, Newport Beach, piloting still another Piper Comanche with Joan Tanner Paynter of Bakersfield. Margaret Mead, 2307 Valley Dr., Manhattan Beach, a two-time previous winner of the Derby (1968 and 1970), piloting a Piper Comanche with Lucy Loori Brooks, 5352 Ironwood St., Palos Verdes Peninsula, as co-pilot. Margaret won the 1968 race in a Bellanca Cruisemaster and in 1970 with a Piper Comanche 260.

Thelma Nickelson, 3009 Java Rd., Costa Mesa, pilot of a Piper Comanche with Doreen Christensen, 11592 Cielo Pl., Santa Ana, co-pilot.

Car rams into bedroom, injuring couple, infant

A Hawaiian Gardens couple and their infant son escaped with only minor injuries when a car went out of control and crashed into the wall of the bedroom where they were sleeping, sheriff's deputies said Saturday.

The driver, Alfonso P. Ochoa, 34, of 11632 South St., Artesia, was jailed on suspicion of felony drunk driving after the 10:50 p.m. accident at 12506 223rd St.

Rogelio Ramirez, 38, his wife, Victoria, 33, and their 2-onth-old son, Rogelio Jr., were treated for lacerations at Pioneer Hospital after the car crashed into their home.

Deputies said Ochoa was northbound on Horst Avenue when he ran a stop sign at 223rd Street, swerved to avoid hitting a pickup truck and veered into the Ramirez house.

He struck the northeast bedroom wall, which collapsed on the sleeping family, deputies said.

Improvement projects make waves in Lakewood

By LARRY LYNCH
Staff Writer

Winds of change are kicking up waves at Lakewood City Hall. And Mayor Mark Hannaford, who is in a measure responsible for the big blow, is having to work hard to keep the legislative sails trimmed.

It's a new kind of responsibility for him.

"When I was in the minority, I could vote against say a zone change and I never had to prove I was right," the mayor reflected in an interview this week. "I didn't mean to be a gadfly. I thought I was right. But now I have the heavy responsibility of having experience sustain my judgment."

Last April two men whom Hannaford had privately backed won seats on the city council, replacing men with whom he often had policy differences.

ALTHOUGH Hannaford had earlier served a term as mayor, he was previously, a "compromise" choice. After the election last spring, the new council selected him for the post unanimously. In theory, the Lakewood mayor's job is ceremonial. But Hannaford's leadership draws strength both from his six years of experience on the council and from political loyalty.

Under this new Hannaford administration significant programs are breaking ground in at least three different directions.

Two efforts already well under way — to reorganize the city staff and to set higher quality standards for new apartment houses — have drawn criticism from disgruntled former city employes and unhappy land developers. But the reorganization was accomplished quickly, and is now a matter of fact. And the new development standards appear well on their way to enactment although the city's pragmatic planning commissioners will be getting a chance to temper the strong medicine proposed by the staff.

THE THIRD new program that the council is about to undertake has not yet been aired. It may be somewhat more difficult to pull off.

What's projected, according to Mayor Hannaford, is city participation in capital improvements in and around the Lakewood Shopping Center.

The Lakewood Center is "still, in many respects, the finest place to shop in the area," the mayor maintained. He cited the vast parking lot, the ease of traffic access in and out of the center itself, and the variety of shops.

What worries the Lakewood mayor, and most anyone else who is committed to the city's future, is the attractive, new Los Cerritos Shopping Center some three miles east. Whatever retail trade that center, located in the city of Cerritos, draws from Lakewood will detract from the sales tax revenue which has been the major source of financing Lakewood's city government.

"We realize that we have some new and stiff competition. The new city council, along with the principals of the (Lakewood) center, are taking positive and certain action to modernize our center," Hannaford said.

HANNAFORD was clearly hinting at major capital projects, involving improvements within the center itself, although he declined to discuss "the internal details" of the plan.

"Of necessity these have to be a matter of negotiation," he said.

Landscaping and other beautification of the city streets surrounding the center was discussed by the old council when it hired an Orange County firm to plan these and other "image" improvements for the city. This contract remains in force.

Hannaford also discussed the goals of the council's other new programs.

The move to upgrade apartment house developments is aimed at two distinct areas of the city.

One area, east of the 605 Freeway, is already developed but has problems, and the council hopes to establish rules which will improve the quality of apartment house construction.

"The land out there has been lavishly used at a time when land was cheaper," Hannaford explained. "People have bought and hold small parcels for speculation and development. At the same time, many people have built beautiful homes with spacious yards. The area has sewer, water, recreation, school and traffic flow problems. If we had a shovel, the answer would be easier. We'd completely redevelop. It's the mixture of the neighborhood that makes if difficult to plan improvements."

A second problem area involves eight acres of vacant land near the shopping center and another parcel adjacent to the Lakewood golf course, both in West Lakewood. Large, high density apartment house projects have been proposed for these areas.

The council put a freeze on both problem areas two months ago with a building moratorium. Now it is in the process of establishing one set of development regulations that will assure new projects in both areas are as high in quality as the market for rental units will permit.

"As I have said, we want to attract the best possible developers and aim at the top edge of the market to get the most stable population," Hannaford said.

Those who object to this plan have fallen into two categories. Some are individual builders who want to put up something like four unit apartment houses, small income property, on small parcels. Others are large land developers who hope to sell to build-

Child killed

A 3-year-old Bellflower child died early Saturday after he was struck by a car when he darted into a street, sheriff's deputies said.

A 4-year-old companion was in satisfactory condition at Bellflower Community Hospital where he was treated for internal injuries.

Deputies said Christopher L. Lopp, of 10129 Lindale Ave., died at County-USC Medical Center at 12:15 a.m., more than five hours after the accident on Rosecrans Boulevard west of Woodruff Avenue in Bellflower.

The injured child was Clifford G. Webb, of 10139 Lindale Ave.

Deputies said that the driver of the car that struck the children, Pamela P. Pierce, 17, could not avoid hitting them. She was not cited.

ers of projects which aim for maximum immediate income.

Some members of the city planning staff, if not Hannaford himself, feel that the short term goals of big developers may not result in projects that will in the long run enhance the city.

In connection with the reorganization of city government, the mayor asked city employes to "endure uncertainty for a time in return for knowing we are going to be supplying a better service for the city at a lower cost."

So far, the city's tree trimmers have been hardest hit by the reorganization. Of 18 in that job category, 11 have been laid off. Two have appeared at a council meeting to ask for personnel hearings.

The mayor points to what he considers three separate benefits from the reorganization:

"The most important was changing the city administrator to a city manager. I think you can have both a strong city council and a strong city manager, and if each knows its job, both can function best. And I think that's what we have.

"The second most important thing has been to merge the water department with the general city. We got the water department as a private utility and it has for years functioned independently of the rest of the city, with duplications in function, capital equipment, accounting billing, and so on. The (merger) will result i enormous economies.

"The other major thing is the merging of maintenance so that it all comes under one department. Whether you are trimming a street tree or a park tree, it is pretty much the same sort of job."

'Charlie' pleasing on stage

By CHARLES SUTTON

All right, gang, let's hear it for good old Charlie Schulz!

You know Charlie Schulz, of course — the guy who gave us Charlie Brown and his little pals; the fellow who took personal failure and frustration and, without benefit of either Joshua Loth Liebman or Norman Vincent Peale, parlayed them into a brilliantly successful comic strip.

The same Charles Schulz who manages week after week to brighten our lives with his inimitable humor.

His comic strip characters — Charlie, Lucy, Linus, Snoopy, Schroeder and Patty — are currently cavorting on the stage of the Little Theatre at Long Beach State University in a local revival of the 1967 Off-Broadway musical comedy, "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown."

AND CONSIDERING what fun they are, it seems only fair that Charlie Schulz be given a cheer. After all, look at all the good he's done us. If he hasn't cured us of our assorted neuroses and anxieties, at least he's made us feel a little more comfortable with them. And what more can you ask of a guy who doesn't even have a license to practice.

You're a good man, Charlie Schulz. You really are.

"Charlie Brown" is a delightful adaptation of Schulz' comic strip. It was originally adapted to the stage by Clark Gesner, who also wrote the music and lyrics. Now it has been brought to life on the Little Theatre stage by Gail Shoup, a member of the International Threatre Company and an associate professor of theater arts at State.

SHOUP, with the able assistance of Dennis Crow on scenery, Donna Merwin on music and Richard Johnson on lighting, has given us a vivid, colorful and well-paced production of Gesner's musical play. He also has taken a group of relatively untried young people and welded them into a smoothly working dramatic unit.

If there are any flaws in the production, they flow from the weaknesses of some of the characterizations and a tendency to overstate some of Schulz' brittle humor.

Jeffrey Brannan, for example, is acceptable as Charlie Brown, I suppose; but how much more effective and believable he would be if he felt Charlie's inner torment, instead of just "acting" it.

Darlene Hernane plays Lucy, that insufferable fussbudget, with a thoroughly affecting voice and a keen sense of Lucy's trying personality. She spoils it only slightly with a tendency to be too cute at times.

The star of the show is Snoopy. Henry Johnson makes him a wild and lovable rogue, especially when he goes slithering over the top of his doghouse, or acts out some of his marvelous daydreams. Or simply dances and sings, which he does so well.

The others in the cast are Linda Woolverton, Larry Naschel and Kurt Fulton.

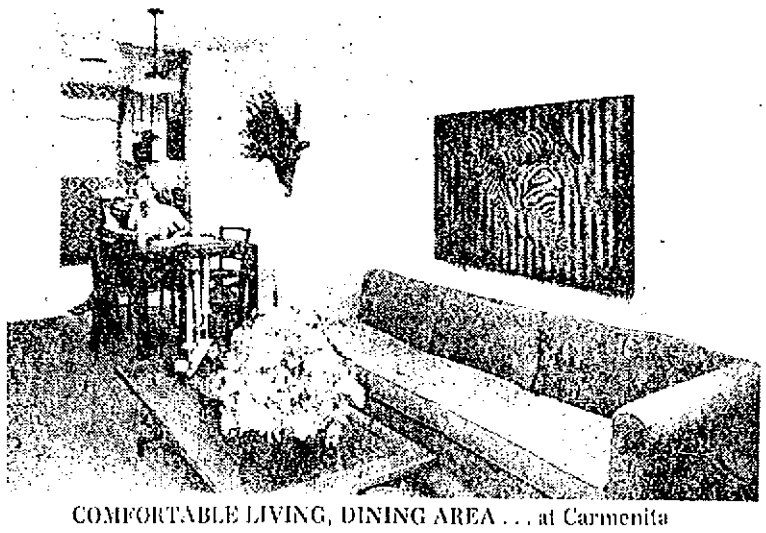

Its faults notwithstanding, "Charlie Brown" is a charming show, and can be seen two more times: at 2:30 p.m. and 8 p.m. today.

Strike at Kaiser

OAKLAND (UPI) — Nine hundred clerical workers at the Kaiser Foundation Health Plan and Kaiser Hospitals in Alameda County are striking to back demands for higher pay and improved fringe benefits.

An estimated 1,000 more union employes have refused to cross picket lines.

COMFORTABLE LIVING, DINING AREA . . . at Carmenita

Carmenita air conditioned

The lazy, hazy days of the good old summertime in Southern California can only mean one thing to everyone in the Southland.

It is going to be hot!

But value conscious people can beat the summertime heat by purchasing a Carmenita Village two-bedroom, two-story townhouse condominium in Cerritos.

Included as one of the features is refrigerated air conditioning in each home and a swimming pool-recreation area, both of which have already helped previous purchasers to beat the heat.

Priced from $19,700 with no down VA and low cost FHA financing, a Carmenita Village home can be purchased for as little as $131.50 a month, reports Alex Graham, president of Marketing Management Co., exclusive sales agent for the builder-developer, DoRuff Construction Co. of Newport Beach.

"Not only is air conditioning and a recreation center included," Graham continued, "we also offer a complete move-in package: wall-to-wall carpeting throughout, drapes, kitchens with built-in range, oven, dishwasher and disposer, private fenced concrete patios and front yard landscaping and sprinklers."

"Just a few homes remain to be sold in the development, and last week three were purchased," the sales executive said, "so, obviously, it makes sense for families to visit Carmenita Village and see for themselves, the excellent, air conditioned homes we're offering."

Midway between the Artesia (91) and Santa Ana (4) freeways on Carmenita Road in Cerritos, the community is just a 20 to 30-minute drive from the employment centers of either Long Beach or Los Angeles.

Model homes are open daily from 11 a.m.

Syndicating said to be 'major need'

SAN FRANCISCO — (BW) — There is a major need for "syndicating for society," a real estate investment executive told 100 financial and construction leaders at an advanced management research seminar.

While the major thrust in real estate syndication in the past decade has been for middle income and luxury housing, the new direction that syndication funds should explore is rehabilitation of depressed business and ghetto areas, said Richard Friedland, president of the Heritage Group, Beverly Hills, and vice chairman (south) of the syndication division of the California Real Estate Association.

"The inadequate performance of the federal government in many areas of subsidized housing and urban renewal readily indicates a tremendous opportunity for syndicating for society," Friedland said.

He also declared the federal government would be ill advised to strip tax shelter benefits from real estate syndications.

"TO THE contrary, government should be encouraging the investment of funds by individual as well as institutional investors. And the only way this financial support can be expected is by providing incentives rather than penalizing the private sector," Friedland declared.

Government should also provide more tax incentives for the smaller investor, he added, instead of mainly confining syndication benefits to those in the 50 per cent tax bracket.

Two other recommendations Friedland urged were:

—More disclosure of potential investors in syndicated offerings.

—Standardization of financial projections and terminology used in prospectuses.

S.A. bank expands services

In expanding its list of special professional services, The Westlands Bank in Santa Ana has established a Real Estate Professional Services Division which will offer computerized accounting and bookkeeping facilities tailored to accommodate real estate requirements, bank president Russ Vorwerk announced.

Heading the department, Charles J. Akin has been appointed vice president and director of data processing, and Gordon Yeaton Jr., escrow accounting supervisor.

Real estate firms will have the advantage of such automated services as escrow, mortgage and general ledger accounting, trust deed collection and personalized reconciliation service.

Complete loan services include professional lines of credit, commercial, real estate, home improvement and personal loans, auto financing and capital equipment leasing, Vorwerk said.

Lakeworld opens Orange Co. office

Lakeworld has opened an Orange County regional sales office, in Irvine, for Silver Lakes, its new $29 million water-oriented resort-recreation community in the high desert in Western San Bernardino County, according to Frank Cardone, general manager.

The new office, comprising approximately 5,000 square feet of space in a newly completed office structure at 18552 MacArthur Blvd., is opposite the Orange County Airport and adjacent to the Airporter Hotel.

It will be staffed by 10 sales managers and will include a training school for new salesmen, Cardone said.

Silver Lakes is a four-season recreation community being developed by Lakeworld, a division of Dart Industries Inc. in the Victory Valley, 113 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

Creation of the two lakes, covering 277 acres and with a combined shoreline of 15 miles, is one of the largest, private operations of its kind.

Contract awarded to Grush

Richard Grossgold, Seal Beach architect, has announced awarding of a construction contract to Ed Grush of Long Beach for the construction of a $946,000 clubhouse facility at Leisure World, Laguna Hills.

Construction is to start immediately.

Designated as clubhouse No. 4, the 32,000-square-foot hobby facility complex was designed by Grossgold Associates, architects and land planners of Seal Beach.

The Olympic-sized swimming pool and Jacuzzi pool will be the first of it's kind to provide access with ramps for people that have difficulty with steps or are confined to wheel chairs.

Landscape architect was Lent-Forsum Associates of Dana Point.

Modernization

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Medusa Corp. announced it will spend $13 million to modernize and expand the cement plant at Clinchfield, Ga., it recently bought. Capacity will be increased to 2.5 million barrels a year.

Few Parkside Estates homes remain

A limited number of prestige homes remain for sale at Parkside Estates-Cypress, according to the Presley Development Company.

Acceptance of Parkside Estates is in part due to its easy accessability from three major freeways and the luxury amenities offered. The community is located on Walker just north of Orange Avenue in Cypress.

Eight remaining homes are priced at $35,995 with VA, FHA and conventional financing available. The homes, with 1980 square feet, feature four huge bedrooms, two-and-a-half baths dining room and service porch.

Standard amenities include carpeting, fireplace, built-in kitchen appliances, ceramic tile and hardwood cabinetry, cast iron tubs and sinks, complete fencing and concrete driveways.

Presley Development Company currently has more than 20 residential communities under development in Southern and Northern California, Arizona, New Mexico, Illinois, Maryland and Virginia.

Income property managers to meet

Apartment and income property managers will receive indoctrination for the Certified Apartment Manager's Education Program this week, according to Charles R. Brady, president, Apartment Association, California Southern Cities.

"The education course is divided into seven phases of five-hour formal seminars, a year of adult or college courses in apartment management and two specialized seminars under the sponsorship of an Apartment Association are the prerequisites for the Certified Apartment Manager's Certification as approved by the National Apartment Association's board of directors.

The course of instruction was designed by Eugene L. Zechmeister, executive vice president of the Apartment Association, California Southern Cities for adoption of a National Manager's Program, Don Straub, chairman of the education committee stated.

Dr. Carl R. Alice, principal, Torrance Evening High School, and Chester P. Gromacki, director of vocational education, Community College District of North Orange County were named to the academic committee by the Apartment Association board.

OTHER members of the Academic Committee are Bernard J. Specht, and the executive vice president who was appointed chairman.

The board will monitor the candidates fulfillment of the requirements for the training program and certification of formal adult education and college courses that are held in the Southern California area.

The adult education course of the Torrance High School and Junior College Course in Apartment Management presented by the Community College District of the North Orange County are the only two courses meeting the requirements of the Certified Apartment Manager's Curriculum at the present time, Brady stated.

THE Certified Apartment Manager's Education Program is designed to meet the apartment owners' needs in the United States who are looking for trained personnel, and in Los Angeles County there are more than 52,500 owners of five or more units, and the important feature of the program is it will be given nationwide, Brady revealed.

Apartment managers are invited to attend 30-minute indoctrination meetings in the following cities this week: Wednesday noon, Long Beach Fidelity Federal Savings and Loan; Thursday, 10:30 a.m., Inglewood, United Savings and Loan, 425 South La Brea; Thursday noon, Torrance-Lomita Board of Realtors, 22833 Arlington; Friday noon, Huntington Park, Southeast Board of Realtors, 3642 Florence; and Los Alamitos, July 10, noon, Pine Junior High School, 4112 Cerritos.

Courses of instruction will be planned for the areas to meet the candidates requirements who attend the indoctrination meetings. Brady said.

Sale-leaseback no sure answer

Despite many seemingly good reasons for entering into a real estate sale-leaseback, it is not axiomatic that all business and personal problems could or should be solved by the use of the sale-leaseback device.

So advises Irving Korb, SIR, of Oakland, in a revised edition of "Real Estate Sale-Leaseback — A Basic Analysis," just published by the Society of Industrial Realtors.

"Where appropriate, however, and if judiciously implemented, the sale-leaseback is a business tool which carries many benefits. If employed, the effects of a sale-leaseback on the seller-lessee are far-reaching and, in many cases of considerable magnitude," states Korb.

LUXURIOUS KITCHEN AREA . . . At Huntington Town Homes

Huntington Town Homes second unit sells swiftly

Huntington Town Homes, now selling in the second unit, have enjoyed exceptional buyer acceptance, with some models in the first unit sold out within weeks of formal opening, according to Alex Graham, sales agent.

Graham feels the excellent location in the rapidly diminishing beach area has been an important factor in sales.

In addition to state beaches just minutes away, The Meadowlark Country Club and Mile Square Park nearby offer ample facilities for family outings and recreation.

The condominium way of life offers extra appeal to families who enjoy freedom from yard and pool care.

Landscaped areas, lawns, exterior painting and fence care all professionally maintained. A big heated swimming pool with shower and restroom facilities and a play area for children offer country club living right at home.

THE community consists of well-designed two- and three-bedrooms plans, single and two story, with comfortable living rooms, private patios, kitchens with built-in range, oven, dishwasher and disposer, and convenient dining area.

All plans have main bath and powder room with cultured marble pullmans.

Huntington Town Homes, a development of Palos Verdes Developers, is in the harbor area, with schools, shopping and freeway access just minutes away.

Prices begin at $20,650, FHA and VA no down terms.

Big River dealer for Levitt firm

Levitt Construction Systems, Inc., of Fountain Valley (formerly Levitt Mobile Systems, Inc.) has announced appointment of Big River Associates as exclusive Levitt Village House, dealer for the Long Beach area.

In making the announcement, Hank Lee, sales manager for Levitt, stressed that newly named dealership would have Levitt Village House models available for inspection shortly at their 3409 Lakewood Blvd. location.

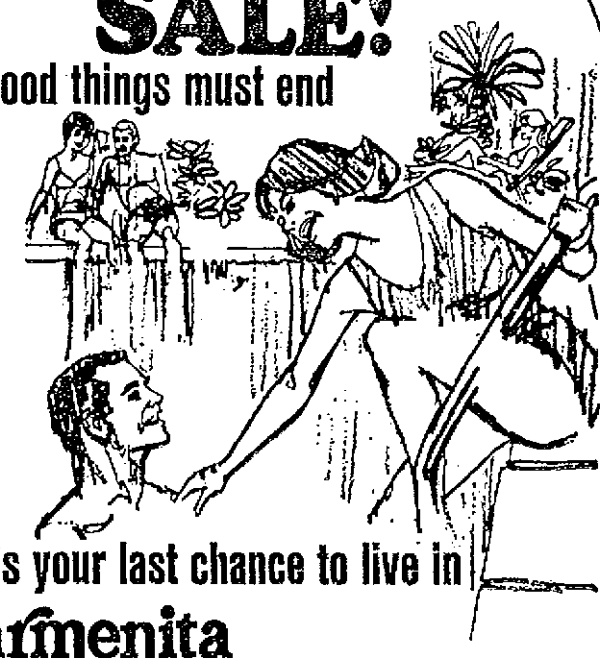

Big River Associates's sales manager is Reid White.

Levitt Construction Systems produces four individual styles of Village Houses ranging from 1000 to 1400 square feet.

Project begins

HOUSTON (UPI) — Shell Oil Co. and a subsidiary of Lockheed Aircraft Corp. said they have a project under way to develop an offshore drilling system that would take oil drillers to the ocean floor "in a dry shirtsleeve environment." Early tests of parts of the system will be made off the Louisiana coast this summer. Heart of the method is a dry one-atmosphere capsule on the ocean floor inside which the drillers work.

Oldsmobile dealers delivered a record-smashing 37,221 cars during the first 10 days of June to move the division 40,000 units a head of 1971 sales, William J. Buxton, Oldsmobile's general sales manager, has announced.

"Never before, not even during new-model introductory periods when demand is traditionally higher, has Oldsmobile sold as many cars in one 10-day period as we did during June 1-10," Buxton said.

The division's previous sales record for any 10-day period was 32,242 cars during Sept. 21-30 last year.

"Even allowing for the fact that Oldsmobile has just concluded a spring sales incentive activity," Buxton added, "does not diminish the tremendous popularity that Oldsmobile's 1972 product lineup is enjoying."

Boosted by the impressive sales during the first 10 days of June, Oldsmobile thus far this year has delivered 341,965 cars, a 13.4 per cent increase over last year's pace when the division set a calendar-year sales record of nearly 700,000 units. By June 10 a year ago, the division had accounted for the sale of 301,522 cars.

A breakdown of the 37,221 deliveries recorded during the most recent 10-day period shows that 18,471 were Cutlass models and 18,750 were full-size Oldsmobiles.

CHEVROLET'S LOS ANGELES ZONE reports May was the biggest truck sales month in the history of the zone.

According to M. J. Schumacher, zone manager, Chevrolet dealers delivered 3767 truck units which was 615 ahead of May 1964 when the 3152 units delivered in that month set the record that has held until now.

1972 truck sales, year-to-date through May, are up 65.9 per cent over last year, Schumacher added. He attributes the sales surge by Chevrolet dealers to their having a full line of trucks to sell from, including LUV, the new little import truck, and the popularity of the Chevrolet truck line for recreational vehicles.

Salary raises

NEW YORK (UPI) — Top executives in the publishing industry generally got salary raises last year while those in the broadcast industry took pay cuts, the Gallagher Report said. The report says, for example, that President Hamilton N. B. Mitchell of Dun & Bradstreet had his pay raised 10.3 per cent to $203,596. Time Inc. President James R. Shepley's pay was raised 17.7 per cent to $171,837. On the other hand, 10 of 19 broadcasting executives took paycuts.

New for the home

For those places where you'd like grass, but it just won't grow: Oasis, an indoor-outdoor floor covering made to resemble grass. Usable on sun decks, boat decks, playgrounds, driveway median strip, balcony, terrace or patio, around the swimming pool, in game rooms, even for that small patch of lawn that stays bare no matter what. (General Felt Industries, Park 80 Plaza West-One, Saddle Brook, N.J. 07662).

A MENDING stick designed to stop leaks in a wide variety of household applications, including fish tanks, water pipes and radiators. Krak-Stik can be used in most cases without draining. No heating is necessary; the seal will withstand moderate pressures, expanding or contracting with the surface to which it's applied; and it can be painted. Good for repairing leaks in laundry tubs, fixing gaskets and stopping seepage in basement walls. Can be used on downspouts and gutters even while it's raining. (Lake Chemical Co., 250 N. Washtenaw Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60612).

FOR THE kitchen, a new adventure in cooking with an electric Wok — the cone-shaped pan used for authentic Oriental cooking brought up to date (West Bend Co., West Bend, Wisc. 53095) — or the age-old all-day stoneware cooker to slow-simmer foods for hours, unwatched — also brought up to date in an electric Crock-Pot version (Rival, 36th & Bennington, Kansas City, Mo. 64129).

Builder's close-out set at La Linda Homes, F.V.

The builder's luxury close-out sale now being held at La Linda Homes in Fountain Valley is bringing that project to completion.

Walker & Lee sales director Mac Blankenship said: "Between the remaining models and fifth unit homes, we now have seven homes left, including three different floorplans."

The remaining homes are one or two stories, with four or five bedrooms, two or three baths and two or three-car garages.

Fifth unit prices are from $36,850 to $39,950.

The two-story home available is the Coronado. It has five bedrooms, three baths, living room, formal dining room, kitchen, family room and three-car garage.

In addition to the attractions of the homes themselves, La Linda has proved popular because of its excellent location. Fountain Valley enjoys a pleasant, temperate climate and is cooled in the summer by comfortable off-shore breezes.

In addition, the homesite is directly across the street from Mile Square Park, a 485-acre regional outdoor recreation center with facilities for people of all ages.

Other recreational attractions within a short distance are Disneyland, Knott's Berry Farm, Japanese Deer Park, Anaheim Stadium, the Anaheim Convention Center and Orange County's famous beaches.

EXTENSIVE shopping facilities nearby include such well-known malls as South Coast Plaza and Fashion Island. Employment centers are highlighted by the Irvine Industrial Complex, while downtown Los Angeles is less than 30 miles away.

Schools in the area are excellent and range all the way up to the University of California at Irvine, which is less than a 30-minute drive from the homes.

The La Linda Homesite is located on Euclid Street just north of Warner Avenue in Fountain Valley, not far from the Garden Grove and San Diego Freeways.

for alcohol when brought to the police station. Secondly, he is taken to the narcotics detail for an interview and examination by experts to determine any evidence of narcotics use. Then he is taken to an interview room for interrogation by homicide detectives.

If they decide to hold him, the suspect then is fingerprinted, photographed, and booked.

What are the qualifications for a homicide detective?

"We think they must be the best detectives we can find," Hurlbirt said. "They must want to work homicide, and the assignment also must be agreeable with their wives and families. Nobody is assigned to the detail who doesn't want to work it—and everyone doesn't want to work homicide, you understand. Some officers find that attending autopsies alone is pretty hard to get used to."

The administrative setup goes like this: Deputy Police Chief R.V. Hill is in overall charge of all investigation; Capt. James M. Black is in charge of the Investigative Division; Lt. James Lynch is in charge of the homicide, robbery and morals detail, and that brings it to Hurlbirt as boss of the homicide investigators.

THE AVERAGE age of the detectives in the homicide detail is 33. All eight men are college graduates or attending, and three—Hurlbirt, Abraham and Mickelson—are college instructors in police science courses. Most of the detectives have taken or are taking courses in anatomy and physiology as an adjunct to their work.

Plans now are under way to combine the homicide and robbery details under the overall command of Lt. Lynch. Investigators primarily would work the same cases as they now do, but the combination would mean that one group could lend the other a hand during times of overload. On obvious cases of a robbery-murder, one investigator from each branch might team up.

The Long Beach homicide detail, incidentally, does not work the regular-partner system worked by many other police departments.

"We have no argument with the system as far as any other department is concerned," Hurlbirt said. "But we think it works better for us to team different persons together at different times.

"WHEN TWO MEN constantly work together as partners, they tend to get out of the habit of conferring with others in the detail. When different investigators work with different partners at different times, we think it helps them keep a fresher viewpoint on their cases."

What is the easiest type of murder to solve—the spur-of-the-moment type or the carefully planned, "perfect crime" type?

"The 'perfect crime' type," Hurlbirt replied without hesitation. "The more carefully a murder is planned, the wider a trail the suspect leaves."

What effect is abolition of the death penalty by the Supreme Court likely to have on homicide in this area?

"I think it will make it increase," Hurlbirt said. "I think the State Supreme Court's earlier decision already is reflected in the upsurge of homicide this year.

"I have had some reservations about the death penalty, in its application, but I really think it has been a deterrent to crimes of extreme violence.

"FOR INSTANCE, you seldom hear of toy guns being used in holdups any more, and they used to be common," Hurlbirt went on. "Bandits all are using the real thing, now."

Is there anything that might cause optimism amid the current upsurge of homicide?

"Yes, the Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program," Hurlbirt replied. "This is going to be a great help—in fact, it already has proved itself in its short duration with three positive results. All of us are glad to see this program get started. Results so far indicate it is going to be one of the most effective of all such programs throughout the country."

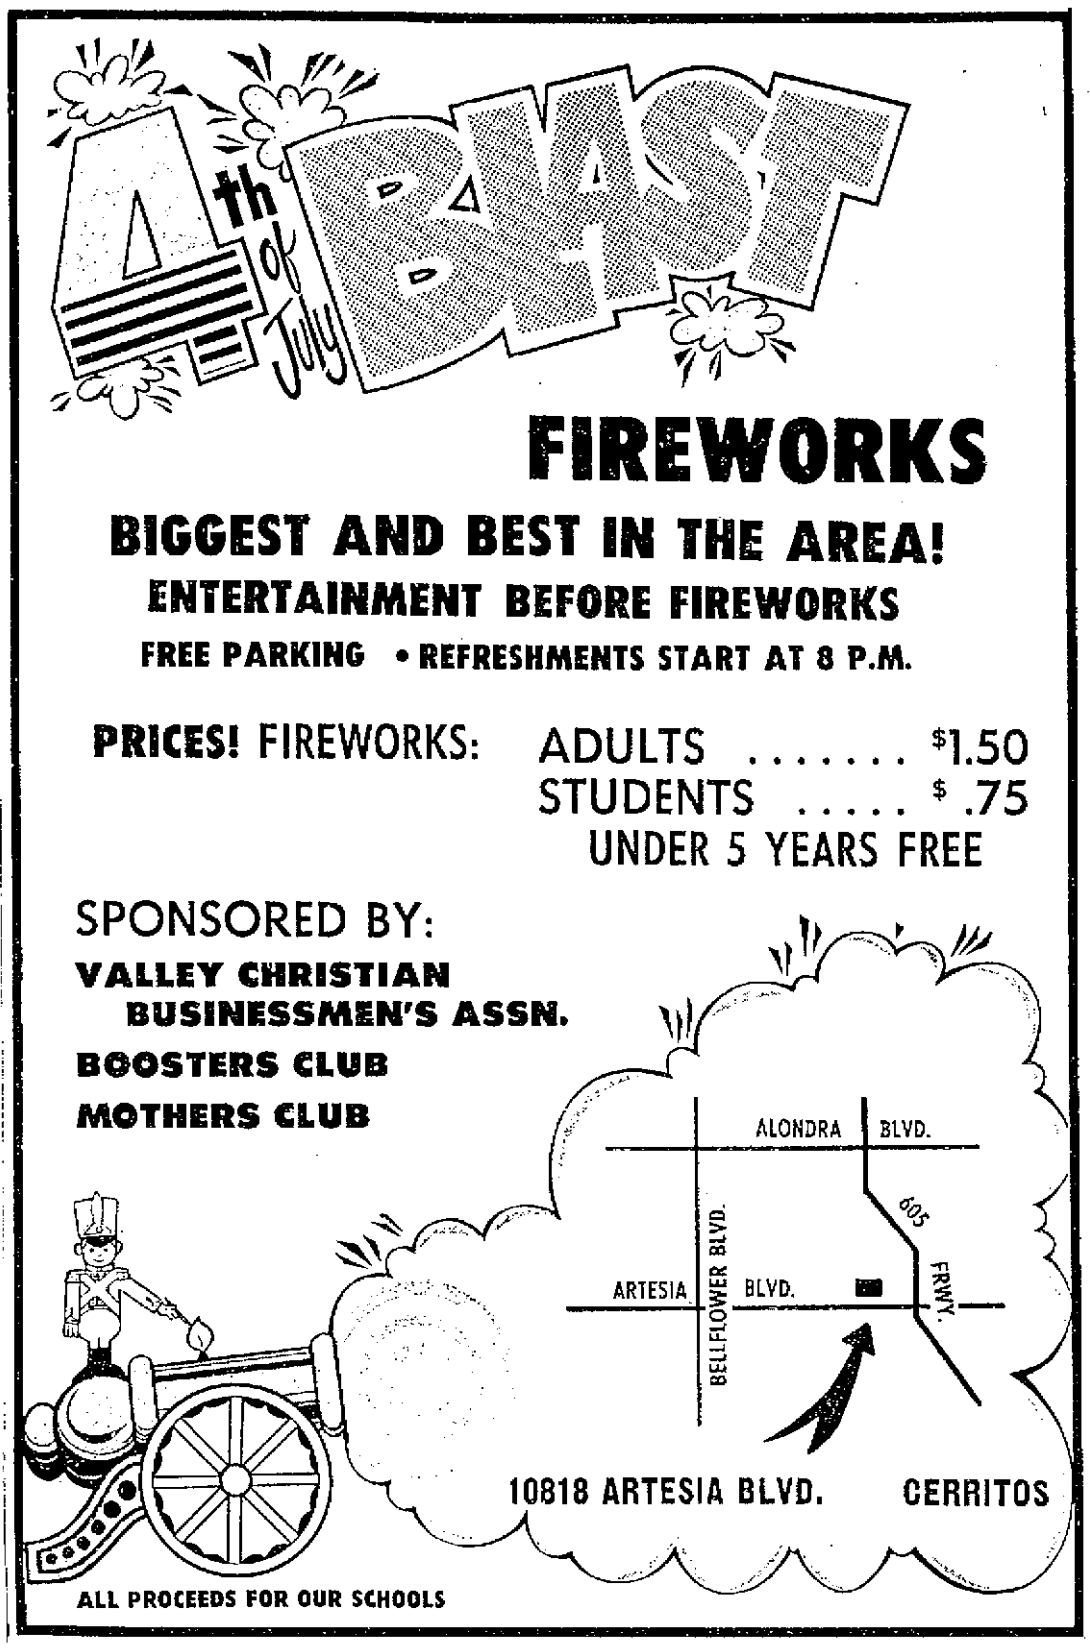

Do Long Beach homicide detectives have any function other than the investigation of murder?

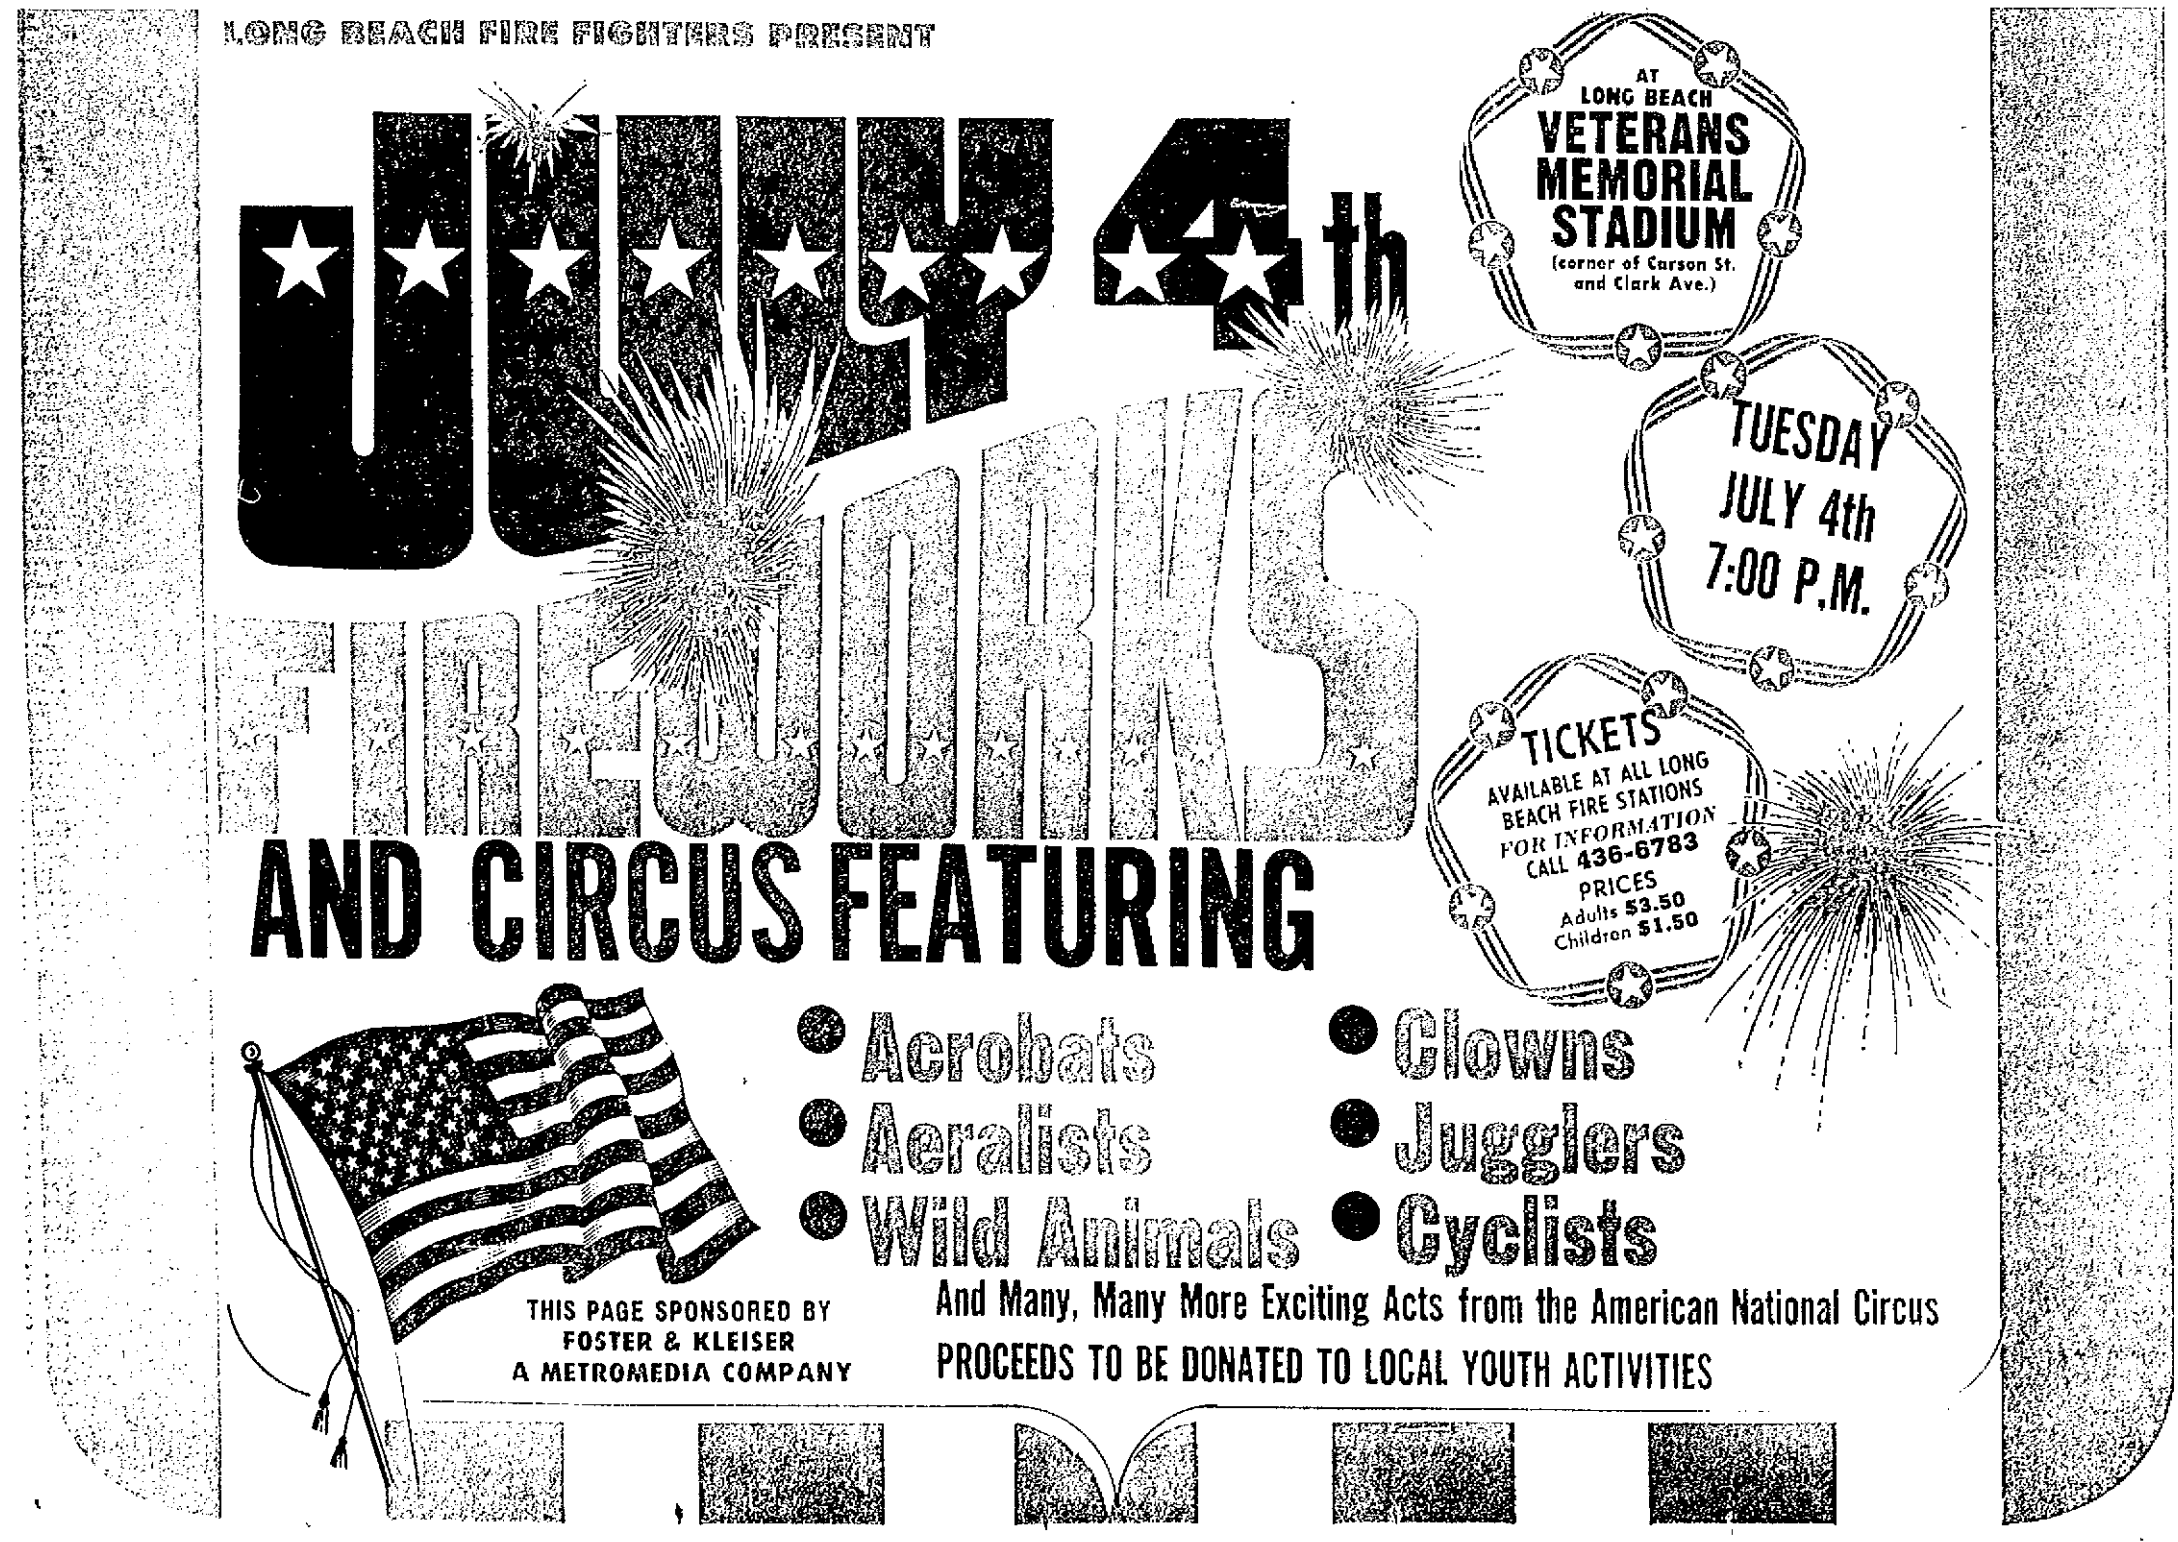

"A FEW," Hurlbirt said. "Such as cases involving attempted murder, officer-involved shootings, mayhem, assault with a deadly weapon, kidnaping, illegal abortion, wife beating, child beating, battery on police officers, common assaults, firing into an inhabited dwelling, and drawing and exhibiting a firearm in a rude and threatening manner.

"Other cases of non-criminal nature assigned to the Homicide Detail include safekeeping gun reports, dead body reports, overdose reports, attempted suicide and suicide reports."

It looks like a long, hot summer for eight Long Beach homicide detectives.

Capucci

Good-bye to big pattern alterations! Hello to better fitting garments with less work. That's the net result of the Spadea Multi Size Printed Pattern which gives you five sizes on one sheet of quality paper. Now you may combine the top of one and the bottom of another size from the same pattern. Here, Capucci has created an open back sundress which may be rickrack trimmed. The zipper is in the left dart seam. Wear it with or without a purchased belt. Fabric suggestions: linen, pique, novelty cottons, synthetics, blends. A-70130 is printed in Misses Sizes 8-16. Size 12 requires 2 1/8 yards of 45" fabric. To order A-70130; give name, address and zip. Send $2.00. Address SPADEA, Box N, Dep't LP-8, Milford, N.J. 08848. Pattern Books by Classification: Italian Couture Collection — $1.00.

Bank greets Hodges executives with flowers as they enter East-West center

When executives of Rex L. Hodges Realty moved into their new offices in Anaheim's picturesque East-West Shopping Center, they were greeted with an enormous bouquet of flowers presented by a Sumitomo Bank official, George Yamashiro, assistant vice president of the bank branch at the center, gave the flowers to Hodges vice president Bernie Jones and office manager Phil Konan on behalf of the bank manager, vice president Frank Omotsu.

The new Hodges location is at 2943 W. Ball Road on the corner of Beach Boulevard. There are several unusual businesses with an oriental flavor in the shopping center. Sumitomo Bank is offering Hodges customers conventional home loans with terms up to 30 years. There are no pre-payment penalties, no impounds, and interest rates as low as 7.25 per cent.

East-West Furniture, Inc., is also housed in the center. They have served Anaheim residents with imported oriental furniture and custom carpets and draperies for over six years. President Kimio "Butch" Tamura is a veteran of more than 25 years in the furniture business. The firm also offers a custom interior decorating service.

Nippon Foods, at 2935 W. Ball Road, specializes in foods from Japan, the Philippines, and Taiwan. Proprietor Shigeo Yamasaki is a native of Japan.

The Asaki Beauty Salon in the East-West Shopping Center is owned by Mrs. Nancy Inoue, who has won many professional awards for hair dressing. She is a member of the Orange County Coiffeurs Guild and the California Cosmetologists Association.

Kyoto Oriental Gifts, at 2947 W. Ball Road, sells Japanese stereo tapes and records, in addition to a complete line of oriental gifts. Masaru Morita is the proprietor.

Ann Takahama operates the Naris cosmetics store in the center, and Kiyoshi Ikai's Miki Tea House is a popular restaurant serving authentic Japanese foods. The tea house is open daily except Tuesdays for dining from 11:30 a.m. to 9:00 p.m.

Hodges offers no payment equity loans to sellers

Home owners who list their homes with Rex L. Hodges Realty may take advantages of an exclusive equity loan plan, wherein no payment is made on the loan until the property has been sold, according to president Robert C. Westmyer.

These equity loans are repaid out of the proceeds of the sale of the home.

Some owners use the Hodges loans to renovate their property so it will bring a higher price when sold; others need cash to complete the down payment on a new home. Occasionally, some pressing personal problem is the reason for requesting this loan service.

Because of their size, the Hodges organization is able to guarantee the sale of a home if the owner so desires. If the seller wants his money in full in as little as five days, Hodges will also buy a home themselves for all cash.

Complete information may be obtained from any Hodges office.

Rex L. Hodges Realty opens new Anaheim office:

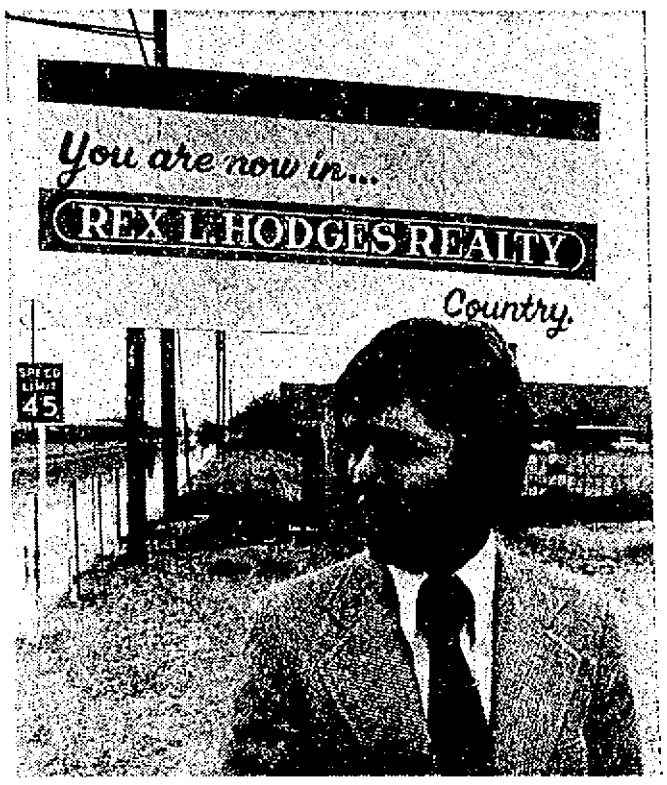

Sales people sought to staff 19 other locations

Another new office for Rex L. Hodges Realty has been opened in the unique East-West Shopping Center in Anaheim, according to Robert C. Westmyer, president of the rapidly expanding real estate firm. 19 more offices will be added as soon as qualified sales personnel can be found to staff them.

Manager for the new office is Phil Konan, who became a top salesman in the Hodges Cypress office in only one year. "We believe in finding people with potential," Westmyer stated, "and advancing them within the organization as rapidly as possible. Phil Konan is a prime example of a man who has worked hard and taken advantage of our exclusive training program to make a lucrative career for himself." Westmyer stressed that Hodges is "going all out" to attract sales men and women with real estate licenses. "We're advertising in newspapers and on radio. Applicants are told to contact our vice president and sales manager directly to learn about Hodges and what we offer. His name is Bernie Jones, and he wants to talk to each salesman personally." Jones may be reached at his office on his own private telephone lines. His special phone numbers are: (714) 839-5501 and (213) 435-6381.

Rex L. Hodges offices currently serve more than 45 communities. All existing offices have been recently refurbished or remodeled, and some have been enlarged in the past few weeks by as much as 2,200 square feet. Hodges also owns a complete property management company, an escrow service, and an insurance company. New sales people are trained in an ultra-modern educational division with closed-circuit television facilities.

Rex L. Hodges Realty was founded in 1929 and has expanded continuously for the past 43 years.

Hodges vice president Bernie Jones surveys "Rex L. Hodges" country as he stands in front of a large billboard in Cypress.

YOU CAN BUY ANY HOME OFFERED BY ANY REALTOR IN THIS AREA THROUGH HODGES' FIFTEEN OFFICES.

Day may come when entire team is hypnotized

DR. WILLIAM BRYAN
Uses hypnotism on stars

The time will come, says a Los Angeles physician-hypnotist, when a football team's training schedule could call for relaxation on the doctor's couch.

Dr. William J. Bryan also says a team physician could use hypnotism to set a player's broken or sprained limb almost immediately with practically no pain or swelling, and the recuperative time would be diminished—all through subconscious control of the autonomic nervous system.

A pitcher or quarterback's sore arm, a halfback's fear of injury and other such real and imaginative maladies could be treated by team doctors trained to use hypnotism medically and psychologically.

This will be common in "five, seven or whatever years," says Bryan, organizer and head of the 17-year-old American Institute of Hypnosis.

Individually, many athletes have sought hypnotism. Some have revealed its effects, such as baseball's Maury Wills of the Dodgers and football's Dick Schafrath of the Cleveland Browns.

Schafrath believes it has helped him concentrate and maintain a high level of competition in a long career as an offensive tackle. Wills says it helped relieve pain in his legs after he set a major league record of 104 stolen bases in 1962.

Wills says his legs hemorrhaged toward the end of the 1962 season from so much running and sliding, and during the winter "They ached. Or at least I got it into my head that they ached. I began to worry."

Under hypnosis, Wills says he was told to do leg exercises, and the legs would not hurt unless there was something wrong.

"It was amazing," Wills says. "I felt no pain in my legs. Some people will say that the pain was all in my head in the first place, which is true."

Bryan said he has had hundreds of athletes from virtually all sports come to him as individuals, and one professional team in the Midwest, which he would not name, has talked with Bryan's organization.

"As soon as a team wins a championship or shows success with hypnosis, they'll all follow," Bryan says. "They'd simply have to, because the edge would be so great."

Bryan, interviewed in his office, where he can treat three patients simultaneously with tape recordings and closed-circuit television, said hypnosis can help all athletes.

In fact, he said, successful athletes use a form of self-hypnosis and some coaches use hypnotic technique in psyching up players.

"Concentration of the mind, relaxation of the body — that's what hypnosis is," he said.

"Many, many players are using hypnosis and are unaware of it. They just don't call it hypnosis.

"They may never have read a book on hypnosis but they're concentrating their minds, they're relaxing their bodies and they're giving themselves positive suggestions over and over and over, and conditioning themselves.

"That's what hypnosis is, and they're doing it, every one of them is doing it." But Bryan warned that coaches should be careful with unqualified use of hypnosis.

He referred to "the coach who

Turcotte: 'Too close at the end'

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Staff Writer

Riva Ridge, winner of two parts of racing's Triple Crown — the Kentucky Derby and the Belmont Stakes — put on a magnificent, gutty performance while giving away as much as 17 pounds to capture the $109,900 Hollywood Derby Saturday at Hollywood Park by a neck over longshot Bicker.

The win was almost a wire-to-wire triumph for the courageous Kentucky-bred, who appeared around the stretch curve to have let the first prize of $59,900 slip beneath his hooves.

But when challenged by Laffit Pincay, the nation's leading jockey, and Finalista, Canadian Ron Turcotte managed to turn back the latter's challenge and still have enough gas left to get Riva Ridge's head across the finish line ahead of the fast-closing Bicker, a 10-1 shot who was carrying 15 pounds less than the 129-pounds packed by the Kentucky Derby champion.

Finalista held on for third money, one-half length behind Bicker and another half-length ahead of Quack.

The brilliant sophomore son of First Landing returned his followers in the crowd of 45,327 the sum of $3.20, a figure considered in the nature of an early Christmas present inasmuch as most experts figured Riva Ridge would go

Moffitt beats Dodgers for first victory

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — On a day when Billie Jean Moffitt King won at Wimbledon, her brother, Randy, earned his first major league baseball victory.

"Maybe now" the former Poly High and Long Beach State star said with a grin, "she'll call me — if she hears about it, that is. Most of the time I'm the one calling her."

Recalled by the San Francisco Giants three weeks ago, Randy has already pitched in 11 games, all in relief, and his presence adds substance to a bullpen which includes Jerry Johnson and Don McMahon.

Saturday afternoon the 23-year-old Moffitt marched out of the bull pen, hurled 4 2-3 innings, his longest performance all season, and he finished with an 8-5 victory over the slumping Dodgers before 13,872 sun-baked Candlestickers.

"Earlier in the season we didn't have much of anything," said San Francisco manager Charlie Fox, reflecting on the Giants' poor start. "The bullpen wasn't the only thing that was bad. But Moffitt has done a great job since coming back up. I know we've used him a lot but that's why we brought him back."

On the contrary, Moffitt delights in getting the call often.

"I thrive on work," the righthanded relaxer said.

2 world marks tied; Ryun fades to fourth

EUGENE (UPI) — Dave Wottle, a slender six-footer who runs with a cap on his head, defeated a fading Jim Ryun and equalled the world record of 1:44.3 for 800 meters moments after Eddie Hart and Ray Robinson tied the world mark for the 100-meter dash to win spots on the Olympic team at the U.S. Track and Field Trials.

The 21-year-old Wottle, a social studies major at Bowling Green State and the NCAA champion this year, came from behind with 100 meters to go to beat world record holder Ryun, who wound up fourth and thus failed to win an Olympic berth.

Wottle's time matched Peter Snell's world record set in 1962 in New Zealand and equalled by Ralph Doubell in Australia six years later.

Richard Wohlhuter finished on Wottle's heels and Ken Swenson nipped Ryun at the wire for the third

Evert, Connors win

Billie Jean advances

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — American teenage tennis stars Jim Connors and Chris Evert both won again Saturday and reached the Wimbledon quarter-finals, but denied they are in love.

The crowds at the All-England were all agog over newspaper pictures of the two youngsters on a dinner date and holding hands.

But Connors, 19-year-old left hander from Belleville, Ill., whipped France's Francois Jauffret 6-2, 6-3, 8-6 and said: "Chris and I are just good friends. Marriage doesn't enter into it."

Chris, 17, from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., wore down Julie Anthony of Malibu, Calif., 6-3, 6-2.

Little Miss Evert, who takes all publicity in her stride with the coolness of an iceberg, said: "I enjoy Jim's company. But all I'm thinking about really is winning my matches."

Connors and Stan Smith, the No. 1 seed from Pasadena, Calif., are the only Americans in the quarter-finals of the men's singles.

Miss Evert is one of five Americans in the women's quarter-finals The others are Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., Nancy Gunter of San Angelo, Tex., Rosemary Casals of San Francisco and Patti Hogan of La Jolla, Calif.

Evonne Goolagong of Australia defending champion and top seed also reached the quarterfinals.

Miss Goolagong trailed 3-5 to Olga Morozova of Russia in the final set before pulling out some of her best shots to win 3-6, 6-0, 9-7.

'Politics kept Terry off'

Ratleff raps Olympic picks

Ed Ratleff, Long Beach State University's all-America basketball player, took a swing at the U.S. Olympic Games' basketball selection committee when he addressed George Lederer's weekly luncheon group at Anaheim Stadium.

Eddie, who was chosen for the Olympic team, said, "It was a darned shame that Chuck Terry wasn't picked for the squad, too. Politics were involved."

ED RATLEFF
'We can beat UCLA'

Ratleff was named to the U.S. team a week ago, while teammate Terry was listed merely as an alternate.

"We're close friends and I feel sorry for Chuck," Ratleff told the crowd.

Two or three days before the final selections for the Olympic team were to be made at our tryout camp in Colorado Springs, all the guys were talking about the players they figured would make the team.

"Every player there picked Chuck to make it. But then came the politics.

"When Chuck was named as an alternate, everybody was stunned, especially since he scored 26 points in his last tryout game and was a big star.

"All the players figured the Olympic committee didn't want two players from any one school to be on the team. It was a darned shame, too, because Terry definitely should have been on it."

RATLEFF POINTED OUT that he was happy he stayed at the Air Force Academy camp two weeks instead of the anticipated three.

"We had two practices a day every day," smiled Eddie, "but that wasn't the bad part. What was bad was that we had to walk a mile each way to the gym.

"Then when we got back to our rooms after practice, we had to walk up steps that honestly seemed a mile high. Those steps never seemed to end and after the second practice, it was a tough climb."

"After two weeks, everybody was happy to get home."

Ratleff noted that the Olympians would practice a final three weeks in Hawaii.

"Everybody thinks it will be a fun trip," laughed the Columbus, Ohio, native, "but that's not so. We were told we would see the beach only two times in Hawaii. What the officials meant was that we'd see it going into camp and we'd see it again coming out of camp."

"I THINK WE CAN win it all in the Olympics," remarked Ratleff. "This is certainly the youngest team the U.S. has ever had. All but one player have one or two years left in school.

"We'll have to be good to beat the Russians. Their front line three are something like 7-4, 7-1, and 6-11. The Russians are learning this game real fast—too fast!

"Olympic Games rules are different, too. Some of the things are difficult to adjust to after playing American basketball.

"One rule that's really different is when a man's shooting, the other guys can grab him, climb all over him, and everything like that. There's no foul called, either. Believe me, that's a tough way to play."

WHY HASN'T RATLEFF, who has been offered the moon, turned pro like so many other college undergraduates?

"I turned down a lot of money by not accepting some professional offers," said Eddie. "But I'm so close to gaining my college degree that I want to get it no matter what. That's the important thing to me right now.

"When I came to Long Beach State, I came here with the idea that the most important thing was to earn my degree. Basketball is important, too, and it was the means to my end, but right now graduation comes before a pro career."

Which pro club would Ratleff prefer, if he had a choice?

"The Lakers or the Knicks," replied Eddie, without hesitation. "I'm still young and those two cities, Los Angeles and New York, are great for a youngster.

HANK HOLLINGWORTH

"When I'm older, maybe I'll feel like playing in Boston or Milwaukee, where the pace is slower. But not now."

TO WHAT DOES RATLEFF attribute 49er coach Jerry Tarkanian's success?

"He takes a genuine interest in his players and that makes a difference in how a man plays," said the 49er all-America.

"He's been like a father to me and I know that attitude makes me play all the harder. All Tarkanian's players are like sons to him. The players know it and that's a big factor.

"When Jerry recruits players, he comes out to see you and makes you feel like you're really wanted.

"Also, his practices are well organized. Everybody's doing something all the time. Nobody's just standing around. Everybody's occupied every minute of practice time. All this adds up to being a successful coach, as Tarkanian is."

THE INEVITABLE QUESTION: How will the 49ers beat UCLA next year?

"We've got some 6-9 boys coming into Long Beach State next season and they could help apply pressure to Bill Walton," analyzed Ed.

"To beat UCLA we have to control the game's tempo—play it our way, not UCLA's way—and apply the pressure to Walton.

"I've played against UCLA two years and know what I'm talking about. The Bruins are great, but we can beat them.

"This is my last year and I'd like to go out beating UCLA and winning the NCAA championship."

Eddie Ratleff is no shrinking violet, even when it comes to such topics as the U.S. Olympic Games selection committee and UCLA.

Harvard wins at Henley

HENLEY, England (UPI) — Harvard successfully defended its Thames Cup title and Kent School of Hartford, Conn., scored a narrow victory in the Princess Elizabeth Cup finals Saturday at the 133rd Henley Royal Regatta.

U.S. entries, however, dropped three other finals against crack Olympic contenders on the River Thames course.

Northeastern University of Boston made Russian Navy Crew WMF Moscow —the Soviets Olympic representative at Munich—pull out all the stops in the Grand Challenge Cup before being edged out.

The margin after the most memorable finish over the last decade in the Regatta's glamor event for eights, was a mere two-thirds of a length.

In the double sculls, New York Athletic Club's Jim Dietz and Larry Klecatsky pushed British Olympic hopefuls Pat Delafield and Tim Crooks to a record time for the 700 yards barrier of two minutes three seconds.

The Americans, who only row together in competition, could not maintain their effort, however, and were beaten by 1¾ lengths.

In the premier singles event, the Diamond Sculls, Irishman Sean Drea of Philadelphia's Temple University had trouble with his boat and lost by 3¾ lengths to Russian Navy man Alex Timoschinin.

Harvard's inexperienced crew crushed England's Kingston R.C. by an overwhelming margin in the final after disposing of London R.C. earlier in the day.

Royse clubs Cards, 7-3

Royse Insurance, powered by a hard-hitting trio of Mike Mallet, Ron Davis and Rock Harmon and by the five-hit, eight-strikeout pitching of Chuck Phillips, claimed first place in the Coast Connie Mack League with a 7-3 triumph over the Great Western Cardinals at Blair Field Saturday night.

In the earlier game of the doubleheader, Hawaiian Gardens nipped the Douglas Jets, 2-1, on Ted Davis' two-hit performance.

For Royse (11-4), Mallett clubbed a triple and a single, drove in two runs and scored twice. Davis also had two hits and two runs, and Harmon had two hits and one run. The winners slammed 15 hits off a trio of Cardinal hurlers.

Steve Capic had two hits and two runs for the losers, and Bill Simpson homered out of the park.

The Cardinals are 9-5, tied for second with Hawaiian Gardens.

Johnson equals US gal record

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Olympian Patty Jean Johnson tied the American record and equalled the meet mark Saturday in 100-meter hurdles trials in the Amateur Athletic Union, National Women's Track and Field Championships.

The 22-year-old Seattle school bus driver, who was fourth in the 80-meter hurdles in the 1968 Olympics, sped to a 13.1 clocking tying the American mark she shares with Mamie Rallins of Tennessee State.

It eclipsed the meet record held by Chi Cheng and Miss Rallins by .3 of a second.

Rose Allwood, a college freshman from Washington, D.C., matched the 100-meter meet time with 11.1 in a qualifying heat. However, the mark was disallowed because it was aided by a 5.5 m.p.h. tailwind.

Miss Allwood, 19, also posted the leading time in the 200-meter heat with 23.2 seconds and ran a 56.0 anchor 440 leg on the Washington D.C. relay team.

Willye White of Chicago, seeking a fifth Olympic berth, and Martha Watson of Long Beach resumed their rivalry in the long jump.

Miss Watson led the 12 qualifiers into tonight's finals with 19-10¾, three-quarters of an inch ahead of Miss White.

Sherry Calvery of Los Angeles, the heavy favorite in the javelin, placed second in the trials, Miss Calvert, who has a loss of 192 feet this year, had a throw of 167-3 to 179-6 for Kathy Schmidt of Long Beach.

Karen Seidler of Chicago led the 12 shotput finalists with 40-11¾, and Jan Svendsen of Los Angeles was runnerup at 46-11.

In the 1,500-meter run, Terri Anderson of Topeka, Kan., was number one with 4:39.0, just ahead of Judy Graham of Los Angeles, timed in 4:39.3.

RYUN FOURTH—

and final Olympic spot in the 800 before a crowd of more than 10,000.

Ryun, who holds world records in the 880-yard run, the mile and 1,500 meters, still has a chance at an Olympic berth this year. He is scheduled to run in the 1,500 this week, an event Wottle prefers to the 800.

Hart was declared the winner in the 100 with Robinson second and Robert Taylor third in 10 seconds flat.

Robinson's and Hart's time equalled the record set four years ago by Charlie Greene, Ronnie Ray Smith and Jim Hines at the AAU championships preceding the 1968 Olympics.

Jay Silvester, John Powell and Tim Vollmer finished in that order in the discus to also win Olympic berths, and Larry Young, Goetz Klopfer and Tom Dooley are one-two-three in the 20-kilometer walk to also secure berths on the 6h-man U.S. team for the Munich Games.

John Craft, Dave Smith and Art Walker added a fine finishing touch to Saturday's program with an eye-popping exhibition in the triple jump final.

Craft leaped a wind-aided 56-2 to win the event and Smith had a jump of 55 feet even, without help from the wind, to set an American record. Walker, the existing American record holder, was third at 55-1.

Silvester, a bronze medal winner in 1964 but fifth in the 1968 Games, won the discuss with a throw of 211-2. Powell, formerly of San Jose State, was second at 235-10 and Vollmer, formerly of Oregon State, was third at 202-0.

Young, who won a bronze medal in the 50-kilo walk at the 1968 Olympics, took the 20-kilo walk in one hour, 35 minutes, 58.4 seconds. Klopfer, 10th in the 1968 Olympics, was second in 1:38.03.0 and Dooley, another 1968 Olympian, finished third in 1:39.10.0.

Wottle, probably the favorite now for the 1,500-meter run, said that if he wins the metric mile he probably will drop out of the 800, which would leave the spot open for Ryun in the event he fails to qualify in the 1,500.

Earlier in the program, Robinson led a five-man, wind-aided 9.9 finish in a semifinal heat of the 100-meter dash.

It was believed to be the closest and fastest finish ever in a 100-meter dash, a 10.51 mph wind nothwithstanding. Officials, working without a phototimer, took more than 20 minutes to declare the final positions and when they finally did, Robinson was selected the winner.

Following in order, according to the officials, also in 9.9 were Norbert Payton, Warren Edmonson, Eddie Hart and Willie Deckard. While Steve Riddick, two-time Olympian Mel Pender and Harrington Jackson were caught in 10.1.

Since only the first four finishers Saturday advanced to the final, Deckard with his 9.9 and Riddick, Pender and Jackson with 10.1s did not make it.

The other 100 semi-final was won by Gerald Tinker in 10 flat with the help of a 7.83 mph wind. Marshall Dill was second, also in 10 flat, while Robert Taylor was third and John Young fourth, both in 10.1.

U.S. cycling team chosen

SAN JOSE (AP) — Weeklong trials for U.S. Olympic cycling team ended Saturday night with addition of eight cyclists — five of them from California — to round out the squad of 14, plus two alternates.

The 14 regular members of the team next journey to Encino, Calif., for a 30-day training camp beginning later this month. The group will be trimmed to 10 cyclists for the final trip to Munich, Germany for the Olympic Games in late August. The California members of the team:

Jeff Spencer, 21, Pasadena; Skip Cutting, 26, Riverside; Jack Disney, 42, Aracadia; Butch Stinton, 20, Long Beach; and Gary Campbell, Paramount, were the Californians chosen Saturday in the 1,000 meter sprint tandem categories.

Convicts get okay for Munich games

NEW YORK (AP) — If boxer Bobby Lee Hunter and high jumper Gene White, both serving prison sentences, qualify in final trials, they will be entered in the Olympic Games in Munich, Germany, Clifford H. Buck, president of the United States Olympic Committee said Saturday.

Hunter is eligible for parole next year from a 20-year term for manslaughter he is serving in a prison at Manning, S.C. White is serving a two-month to two-year term for forgery in the Centre County, Pa., jail.

Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, has indicated it is doubtful that Hunter would be able to compete in the Olympics.

"The USOC strongly supports the principle of rehabilitation," Buck said in a statement. "We feel that Bobby Lee Hunter and Gene White are setting excellent examples for others in prison who are striving to rehabilitate themselves."

Buck also noted that Hunter participated in the Pan American Games in 1971 and "his conduct was exemplary." White did not compete in the Pan Am Games.

Hunter is one of eight flyweight boxers scheduled to compete in the final tria's at Fort Worth, Tex., July 19-22. White is entered in the high jump trials at Eugene, Ore., July 8-9.

HYPNOTISM ON THE WAY?—

has heard about hypnotism and decides that he's going to go in and hypnotize the whole team and win all the games. He may be very good as a coach but he doesn't know enough about hypnosis and psychology and may not know how deep he's getting in.

"This should be in the hands of a physician or psychologist, but preferably a physician because a lot of things are going to involve physical injuries. You shouldn't make a guy play with a broken leg."

What does the hypnotist do if a player breaks a leg?

"If you're right there at the time, you can place the person under hypnosis. You can stop the pain, swelling, bleeding-you can do all kinds of things-because with hypnosis you can get a hold on the subconscious mind and therefore the autonomic nervous system, which controls such things as the muscles that surround blood vessels and determine how much fluid seeps into the tissues.

"You can have a tremendous control over the healing properties of wounds. So right from the very beginning the patient's fracture can be set. The pain can be stopped.

"The greatest advantage of hypnosis is not just anesthetic, but lessening, almost eliminating post-operative complications. It has virtually no side effects. You can't be allergic to it."

Byran said his patients have included, besides athletes, U.S. senators, governors and movie stars.

Clemente hits two, Bucs win

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Roberto Clemente socked his second home run of the game following Milt May's pinch single in the ninth inning, giving Pittsburgh a 4-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs Saturday and keeping the Pirates atop baseball's National League East.

May batted for Jose Pagan leading off the ninth and singled to right. Clemente, who homered over the left field fence in the seventh for Pittsburgh's first run off Ferguson Jenkins, 9-7, drilled a pitch from the right-hander over the right field wall to break up the baseball game.

The Pirates, who entered the game with a lead of three precentage points over the New York Mets, fell behind 3-2 in the eighth when Jenkins led off with a single off starter Bob Moose and Billy Williams greeted reliever Ramon Hernandez with a two-out home run, his 14th of the season.

Clemente's sixth homer of the season tied the game at 1-1 in the seventh after Williams' double following a single by Glenn Beckert in the third enabled the Cubs to break on top.

After Clemente's homer, Willie Stargell singled and gave way to pinch runner Gene Clines, who stole second, took third on Al Oliver's deep fly and scored on Manny Sanguillen's sacrifice fly.

Cards take pair

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Donn Clendenon hit his third home run of the season in the fourth inning Saturday night to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 1-0 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies and a sweep of a twi-night doubleheader. The Cards won the opener 6-4.

Clendenon's homer, which opened the fourth inning, decided a pitching duel between winner Al Santorini and Ken Reynolds. Santorini picked up his fourth victory in six decisions and notched his shutout with relief help from Diego Segui. Reynolds lost his fourth decision in a row.

Bob Gibson, who led the St. Louis attack with a double and two singles, held on to win his seventh successive game in the opener. Jim Nash, the first of four Philadelphia pitchers, suffered his fourth loss in five decisions.

Astros trim Braves

HOUSTON (AP) — Lee May cracked his 14th home run of the season and Doug Rader smacked a two-run single Saturday night to lead the Houston Astros to a 4-2 victory over Atlanta.

Rader's single in the sixth, which knocked out braves starter Phil Niekro (7-8) provided Don Wilson with the runs he needed to post his fifth victory in 10 decisions. He finished with a seven-hitter.

Cesar Cedeno's infield hit and walks to May and Bob Watson set up Rader's one-out hit to center field that gave the Astros a 4-1 lead.

Reds edge Padres

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Joe Morgan collected three hits, including his 10th home run, walked twice and scored twice Saturday night as the Cincinnati Reds edged the San Diego Padres, 3-2.

Ed Sprague, making his first start, improved his record to 2-0 with relief from Jack Billingham, who pitched the final three innings. Sprague gave up five of San Diego's seven hits and both runs.

Morgan scored a first-inning run without a benefit of a hit. He walked, stole second for his 31st theft of the season, moved to third on an infield out and came home on Bobby Tolan's fielder's choice.

San Diego went ahead 2-1 in the second inning on Nate Colbert's double, an infield out, a wild pitch by Sprague, a walk to Garry Jestadt, Pat Corrales' single and a squeeze bunt by Enzo Hernandez.

Steve Arlin took the loss to make his record 7-8. He was touched for six hits and four walks.

DODGERS

"I like pitching in the bullpen because that way you come to the park every day thinking you may have a chance to pitch."

Moffitt's first win added to the Dodgers woes. Winless the first two games of the trip, the Dodgers have dropped three games in a row, five of their last six games and seven of the last nine.

Manager Walter Alston again presented a worked-over lineup, one necessitated by a mounting toll of injuries.

Frank Robinson had to sit out again when his ailing left wrist failed to respond and Willie Davis, nursing a painful left leg, joined him on the bench.

Saturday Al Downing was shelled from the mound in the fifth, the third consecutive Dodger starter to fail to last five innings. The Dodgers have had one complete game since June 23, that one by Don Sutton (9-3) last Wednesday. Sutton will oppose Juan Marichal (2-10) this afternoon in the concluding game of the series.

Mistakes, a mounting concern lately, again plagued the Dodgers. After Steve Garvey's two-run homer in the first inning off Sam McDowell provided Al Downing with a 2-0 advantage, the Dodgers messed up a chance for a doubleplay in the bottom of the first and Dave Kingman accented the blunder by swatting a three-run homer, his 17th of the year.

Moffitt entered the game in the fifth, got Wes Parker on an infield hopper that scored a run, Parker's fourth RBI in two games, and then got Jim Lefebvre to drive a line drive at McCovey who doubled Garvey off of second to end the Dodgers' last severe threat.

He gave up a run in the seventh but wound up scattering four hits for the win.

DODGER DOPE: Juan Marichal, scheduled to start today, hasn't pitched since June 11 because of a bum back. He's 21-2 against the Dodgers in Candlestick . . . The game will be televised on KTTV, Channel 11 at 1 p.m. . . . Randy Moffit says the shattered left kneecap suffered last August while at Phoenix has healed 100 per cent. "They say I limp when I run but I don't believe them," he said . . . Since June 1, when the Dodgers had a 1½-game lead on Cincinnati and Houston, they've lost 17 of 24 starts and have fallen into third place.

Newman hit tops Nitehawks

By CHUCK MEDICK
Staff Writer

Jack Newman blasted a three-run homer to deep right-center in the bottom of the sixth to give the Inglewood Royals a 3-2 victory over the Long Beach Nitehawks in the quarter-final round of the Joe Rodgers Memorial Softball Classic Saturday at Joe Rodgers Field.

The Hawks had scored in the first when Jerry Flory singled, was sacrificed to second by Daryl Kamm, and scored as Bob Will singled to center.

Newman's blast was the second and final hit off loser Bud Todd but there was no doubt when it left the bat that it was far out of reach of the chasing Nitehawk outfielders.

Warner Electric Jets of Lakewood got the scare of their lives in the preceeding game when they had to go eight innings to down the stubborn San Jacinto Hawks, 3-0. In the bottom of the seventh with one out San Jacinto had a runner on third but Ed Klecker struck out the next two batters and forced the extra inning.

Klecker has fanned 31 batters in two games.

Larry Higgins, in an earlier game, pitched a no-hitter for Reno, Nevada as it downed Gagnon Realty of Long Beach, 6-0. Higgins, who normally pitches for Home Wares of California in the Long Beach City League, was acquired by the Reno team when they came to town without their top pitcher who had to remain at home because of illness in the family.

One other American girl was defeated. Laura Duepont of Charlotte, N.C., was overwhelmed by eight-seeded Francoise Durr of France 6-1, 6-2.

Miss Hogan, who upset fifth-seeded Kerry Melville of Australia Friday will be next to face Miss Evert.

Mrs. King's quarter-final opponent will be her old Wightman Cup enemy, Virginia Wade of Britain, who beat Helen Gourlay of Australia, 6-3, 6-2. Miss Caslas and Mrs. Gunter are paired against each other, while Miss Durr faces Miss Goolagong.

Tom Gorman, the Davis Cup star from Seattle, Wash., was beaten by Ilie Nastase, the No. 2 seed from Romania, who rallied from 2-5 in the third set for a 6-3, 3-6, 8-6, 6-4 victory.

The big surprise was provided by Colin Didley, the hard hitting Australian, who crushed Pierre Barthes of France, the No. 6 seed, 8-9, 6-3, 6-2, 6-1.

Manuel Orantes of Spain, seeded third, overcame Ion Tiriac of Romania 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3.

That made the quarter-finals line-up: Smith vs. Alexander Metreveli, Russia; Onny Parun, New Zealand, vs. Jan Kodes, Czechoslovakia; Dibley vs. Orantes and Connors vs. Nastase.

For the 15,000 fans at the center court, the duel of the day was between Nastase and Gorman.

Gorman had three set points in the third set — one at 5-2 and two more at 5-4. Each time Nastase served and volleyed his way out of trouble. After that, Gorman's game went steadily downhill.

Ryan strikes out 16 A's in 5-3 victory

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

Reggie Jackson described Nolan Ryan uniquely and simply.

"He is faster than instant coffee," said the Oakland slugger.

Johnny Roseboro, an Angel coach who used to be on the receiving end of Sand Koufax' high hard ones during Sandy's prime said of Nolan Ryan:

"He is about a half-plate away from becoming a super star."

It looks now as if Roseboro can reduce that fraction to one-quarter.

Ryan was a marvel Saturday night — a pitcher of blinding speed, uncompromising quickness.

He established an Angel record when he struck out

ANGEL OF DAY
NOLAN RYAN struck out a club record 16 and pitched Angels to 5-3 victory over Oakland.

16 A's en route to a 5-3 victory over the divisional leader and it was a performance which matched his previous best strikeout high with the New York Mets.

Closing in on the club standard, Mr. Flamethrower finished with a flourish, striking out the final four men he faced to neatly tie a ribbon on his ninth victory.

When pinch-hitter Adrian Garrett became No. 16 and the final out in the game, the anxious, anticipating crowd of 11,947 led out a thunderous ovation for the young man from Alvin, Tex.

In 107 innings of labor for the Angels this season, Ryan has struck out 114 batters, a figure which puts him second in the league behind Detroit's portly portsider, Mickey Lolich, who has 120 to his credit.

"It was Ryan's third consecutive complete game victory and in those 27 innings of pitching he has struck out 30.

The Angels used the long ball to support Ryan's overpowering effort.

With the score even at 1-1 in the third, Ken Berry opened the inning with his third homer of the year and moments later Leo Cardenas, the slump-infested shortstop, capped it with a three-run shot off loser Dave Hamilton.

Cardenas' bomb, his first homer since May 12, followed a walk to Ken McMullen and a single by Lee Stanton.

Ryan had only one bout of wildness, a malady which has been his shadowy companion throughout his career. That was in the second when he walked Mike Epstein and hit both Bill Voss and Sal Bando to load the bases with none out.

He suddenly regained his rhythm and fanned Dave Duncan and Tim Cullen and appeared off the hook pitching to Hamilton when he uncorked a wild pitch, permitting Epstein to score.

He had a no-hitter for four and two-third innings before succesive singles by Campy Campaneris and Joe Rudi following a walk to Hamilton gave the A's their second run.

Oakland scored its final run in the sixth when Epstein doubled and Voss drove him home with a single.

"The fastball wasn't as good as it was last year in San Diego (when he also struck out 16)," Ryan said, "but the curve was better and that's what made it all possible.

"I had rhythm problems between the second and eighth innings. I don't know what it was but I kept losing it. I was struggling in the eighth when I just told myself to throw."

Ryan made good use of sidearm curve, a new weapon in his arsenal this year.

"It has become a good pitch for me," he said. "Right-hand hitters won't stay in there too well against it."

Maybe it was an omen, but before the game, Ryan's pretty wife Ruth was asked to throw a ball through a brick wall.

She succeeded, although the brick wall appeared somewhat more like crepe paper.

"She was more nervous than I was," Ryan reported. "She was afraid she wouldn't even hit the wall."

On this night, both the Ryans did their job.

Kaline homer nets Lolich win No. 13

DETROIT (UPI) — Al Kaline's 389th career home run opened the sixth inning Saturday and gave Mickey Lolich his 13th win of the season as the Detroit Tigers downed the Baltimore Orioles 2-0, increasing their first place lead to two games in the American League East.

Kaline's home run, which dealt Orioles' starter Dave McNally his seventh loss of the season in 15 decisions, tied him for 17th place on the all-time homer list with Ralph Kiner.

Lolich, 13-5, is now the winningest pitcher in the majors as he limited the Orioles to seven hits while striking out four and walking one.

The Tigers got their other run in the eighth when Bill Freehan walked, went to third on a single by Willie Horton and scored when shortstop Mark Belanger dropped a potential double play ball by Mickey Stanley.

Brewer streak ends

BOSTON (UPI) — Ben Oglivie crushed two home runs while pitcher Marty Pattin hit his first major league homer Saturday as the Boston Red Sox snapped a six-game Milwaukee winning string with a 5-4 win over the Brewers.

Pattin snapped a 2-2 tie with a drive into the left-field screen after Carlton Fisk had singled with two outs in the second inning.

Oglivie gave the Red Sox a 5-2 advantage with a homer into the rightfield seats to lead off the third. He had slammed a two-run homer into the Milwaukee bullpen in rightfield with Doug Griffin aboard in the first inning to tie the game at 2-2.

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees scored three times in the fifth inning on Thurman Munson's tie-breaking single and Felipe Alou's two-run double and beat the Cleveland Indians 5-1 Saturday as Mike Kekich pitched his first complete game of the American League baseball season.

Kekich, 7-6, allowed five hits, the only damaging one being Graig Nettles' fourth home run of the season in the second inning.

It was New York's third consecutive victory and the sixth loss in a row for Cleveland.

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Pinch-hitter Gail Hopkins slapped a run-scoring single in the 11th inning Saturday, scoring John Mayberry from second base to give the Kansas City Royals a 3-2 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Mayberry led off the 11th and drew a walk from reliever Jim Panther. He was sacrificed to second by Jerry May. After Bobby Knoop was intentionally walked, Hopkins batted for Paul Schaal and pulled the game-winning hit down the rightfield line.

Bobby Bonds has replaced Mays as Giants leader

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — Charlie Fox, the manager of the San Francisco Giants, isn't one to expound on which one of his young athletes is the club's new leader now that Willie Mays has been sent back to Gotham.

Fox's definition of a leader is the guy who's hitting the most home runs and driving in the most runs, neither of which Bobby Lee Bonds is doing at the moment.

But it's clear Bonds, still only 26 after four years in the major leagues, is the so-called field general now that Mays is gone. It's Bonds who shouts instructions to the other outfielders on how to play a certain hitter; it's Bonds who positions the infielders, and it's Bonds who delivers the lineup card to the umpires before a game.

Previously, it was Mays who handled those chores; now it's Bonds, the fleet outfielder from Riverside who is coming off a year in which he batted .288 and earned his first Golden Glove for his defense.

"But," he was saying with a grin before Saturday's game, "it's a little hard to tell someone else what to do when you're having trouble yourself. Heck, I'm the guy looking for help."

Bonds is hitting but .247 although he has driven in 40 runs and has hit 11 homers, both second only to Dave Kingman.

Bonds calls it a slump. Some slump. The 40 RBIs and the 11 homers are more than any Dodger has managed.

"In eight years of playing pro ball I'd never been in a slump," Bonds said. "Never. I just didn't know how to react. I was 0-for-11 once before but I didn't really call that a slump. When I was 2-for-29, now, I DID call that a slump. When I went 15 to 16 times without a hit I really started worrying. 'How do I get out of this?' I asked myself.

"But all through it I still worked on my defense. I hate to make a mistake in the outfield. It's easy to tell the other guys what to do when you're going good. But it's a little tough when you're not. So I just keep playing the outfield the best way I can."

Bonds' best in the outfield is just the other side of superb and, not surprising, he gives the credit for his improvement to Mays.

"I used to kick myself whenever a guy got a single that fell just in front of me," Bobby recalled, "and Willie would say 'That's all right, you held the guy to a single.' It started making a lot of sense.

"It took a while to learn but I've finally got it. Take a team like Pittsburgh. Willie Stargell is the guy who hits all the homers but I'll play Roberto Clemente deeper than I'll play Stargell. If Stargell hits it out it doesn't matter where you play. All you can do is lean on the fence and watch it go out. But Clemente hits a lot of line drives so I play back and hope to keep him to a single, not double or triple."

The Giants' sudden turn for the better after their dismal start isn't the least bit surprising to Bonds.

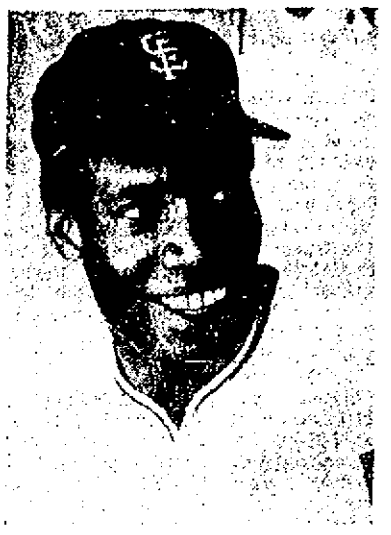

"We're still a good club," he contends. "We haven't played that bad of ball. This is a young club, a good young club. We're just now getting to know each other. It's starting to pay off, too.

"Last year when we won it, guys had confidence in one another. They knew each other. A guy would get on, then the next guy would bunt him over knowing the three or four guy in the lineup would drive him in. It's getting to be that way again. We just weren't getting any breaks earlier in the season.

"When we lost McCovey I thought, 'Oh no, here we go again.' That's when things really started to go bad. But we haven't played bad enough to embarrass ourselves.

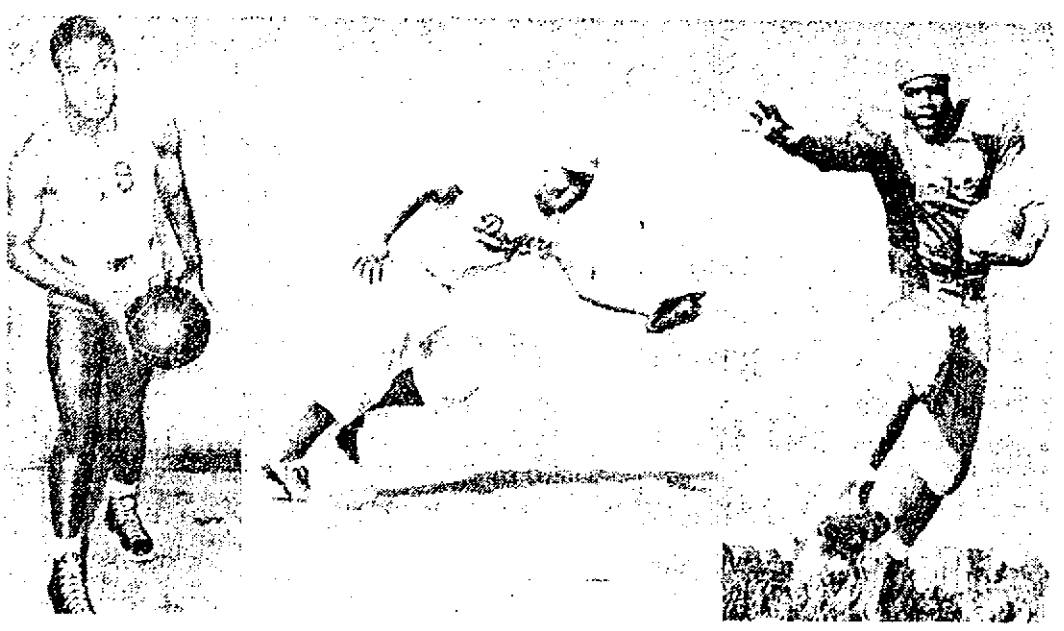

"Then I got into this slump."

Some slump, indeed.

REMEMBERED BY PRESIDENT NIXON
When President Richard Nixon picked his all-time baseball team he also selected a most courageous player, Lou Gehrig, left, and best all-around athlete, Jackie Robinson. Gehrig played in 2,130 consecutive games before retiring in 1939, while Robinson was an all-conference football and basketball player at UCLA as well as playing baseball.

Nixon selects all-time team

Editor's Note: The following article by President Nixon was obtained by Associated Press Sports Writer Tom Seppy.

By PRESIDENT NIXON

Mr. President, as the Nation's number one baseball fan would you be willing to name your all-time baseball team?"

When Cliff Evans of RKO General Broadcasting asked me this question at the conclusion of a news conference in the Oval Office on June 22 I readily replied, "Yes." Since then I have found that preparing an answer to that question is about as difficult a task as a President or any other baseball fan could possibly undertake.

Fortunately I was able to obtain some expert advice in making my selections. The most avid baseball fan in the Nixon family is David Eisenhower, on Sunday afternoon at Camp David, June 25, we sat down together and began to study the record books for the purpose of compiling a list of stars which would stand up under the scrutiny such a selection would receive from sports writers and baseball fans throughout the country.

We first decided that we would select National League and American League teams for both the post-World War II and pre-World War II periods. We decided to include only players after 1925 since that was about the time that I began to follow major league baseball in sports pages. Some present-day stars who will undoubtedly be selected for the Hall of Fame in the years ahead are not included only because I believe more time is needed to appraise their careers fully.

As any baseball fan will understand, I found it impossible to limit the team to nine men. Consequently, on each team I have selected two catchers, five starting pitchers, one relief pitcher and five additional infielders and outfielders who are listed as reserves but who by a toss of the coin could be put in the starting lineup.

Some other personal observations might be of interest at this point. Referring now only to players I have personally seen in action, either at the ball park or on television, here are my all-time selections for great performances:

Best all-around athlete, Jackie Robinson is, of course, remembered as a great baseball star. Few, however, will recall that he was an all-conference halfback at UCLA, an all-conference basketball player at UCLA, an all-conference track man with a broad jump record of 25 feet 6 inches at a time when anything over 25 feet would have qualified a man for the Olympic team.

Most courageous player, Lou Gehrig, baseball's Mr. Profile in Courage, must be placed at the top of the list. In the same great tradition is Red Schoendienst who was struck down by tuberculosis in the prime of his playing career and came back to star again and deserves the admiration and respect of sports fans throught the country.

What Henry Aaron needs is AL fences—Frank Robinson

The Hank Aaron Tent Show had left town and Frank Robinson, an interested bystander, was commenting on Bad Henry's celebrated pursuit of Babe Ruth's record of 714 home runs in a single summer.

"There are a lot of things that would help Henry," Robinson said. "One of them would be to get himself traded to the American League."

A listener winked and nodded knowingly. Robinson was talking about the pitching in the American League as it is compared with that of the National League where Aaron performs in the costume of the Atlanta Braves.

The arms in the National League are a sorry collection as compared with those of the other league. Hitting in the American League has been likened to placing one hoodlum in one room with one baby and one bar of chocolate.

FRANK ROBINSON, IN FACT, may go down in history of the pastime as the scientist who contributed more to the documentation of the fact than any man who ever lived. Robbie left Cincinnati to join the Baltimore Orioles in 1966, whereupon he feasted. If there was some kind of a title, honor or award connected with swinging a baseball bat, Robinson won it.

THEREFORE, WHEN HE SUGGESTED it would be in the interests of Henry Aaron to obtain a transfer, it was clear he was making reference to the inferior pitching limbs of the American League.

"Well," Robinson went on, "there is a lot more of it than the pitching. Most people do not realize it is a great deal easier to hit home runs in the American League because of the parks.

BUD TUCKER

"There are small parks and short porches in the American. The National, with the exception of Wrigley Field in Chicago and maybe the stadium in Atlanta, is loaded with places like this."

Robinson was looking at the distant fences of Dodger Stadium which has never been regarded as a paradise for home run hitters. In fact, sluggers have been traded to the Dodgers only to suffer nervous breakdowns in their futile attempts to reach the seats.

"The American League is full of hitters' parks," Robinson went on. "Probably the only tough place to hit is at Yankee Stadium but even then, you can get it out if you are able to pull the ball.

"Look at Boston and Detroit, for instance. Boy, when I got over in that league and saw some of those close fences, my eyes lit up like light bulbs. They were as big as saucers."

ONE WAS CURIOUS, of course, as to what a switch in leagues might mean for Aaron's assault on the record. At the time, Bad Henry was 63 behind Ruth and, according to the terms of his contract, had three seasons to catch up. It was also noteworthy that the files and records of organized baseball list Aaron as being 38 years of age.

"I would say," Frank Robinson replied, "that hitting in the American League would add ten home runs a year to Hank's total. Maybe 15.

"An extra 10 to 15 home runs is a lot for any player, but it might give Aaron the record. The thing is, ten a year for three years is half of what he needs.

"Of course, we're only talking for the fun of it. Henry isn't going anyplace."

ROBINSON WAS PROBABLY quite right but an avenue of interesting thought is opened. Suppose an American League team, one of the many with no attractive names on its roster, recognized the value of owning the new home run champion and made an appropriate offer.

Out of sheer curiosity, Donald Davidson, assistant to the president of the Braves, was asked what it would take to get Aaron.

"We might let him go for 20 million dollars," he replied, but American League teams interested in Bad Henry should not be discouraged.

Donald Davidson is a midget with a persistent habit of talking big.

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — When the dazzling splendor of the Olympic games comes dancing across the television screen late this summer, many an athlete will be watching with misty eyes and heavy heart. Thousands of miles away from the action, he will be in an emotional turmoil because he had failed to become a part of it. Perhaps he even would have been good enough to win. But the recipe for an Olympic gold medal begins not too unlike the recipe for rabbit pie, which demands: first catch the rabbit. The gold medal formula starts with: first gain a qualifying berth on the Olympic team.

The assembling of America's track and field forces is under way in Oregon's remote elegance. It is a novel final Olympic tournament for this country because the program is being stretched out over 10 days in simulation of the time schedule at Munich. No pressure can match Olympic pressure but it still is mighty intense at Eugene because the competition for places is so fierce that anything short of a maximum performance could prove insufficient.

THESE CONTESTANTS are all world-class athletes who passed rigorous qualifying standards merely to rate an invitation to the tryouts. When the tests have ended, there will be gasps of dismay among the experts when they check to discover which Olympic hot-shots fell flat on their faces literally or figuratively or both. It happens in every Olympic tryout.

Of all the athletes now gathered in the Oregon showcase, which one is likeliest to succeed at Eugene and later at Munich? He has to be Rod Milburn, the seemingly invincible high hurdler. The last thing I ever would want to do is put the whammy on an estimable young man like Milburn, but I can't help but think back to the final Olympic tryouts of 1948 on the Northwestern University track at Evanston.

Most of that meet fuzzes up in my memory, but one recollection still stands out with a strange and vivid sharpness. It is the tragic picture of Harrison Dillard standing in front of the ninth hurdle and draped despairingly over it, his brightest dream shattered beyond repair. The holder of the world record in the event and the winner of some 60-odd consecutive races, Dillard had been considered a shoo-in to win the tryouts and the Olympic championship.

Small for a hurdler but very stylish, Dillard broke off his starting blocks too fast or too slow or something. He never did have his true rhythm. With each succeeding hurdle his symmetrical style disintegrated still more until he was actually knocking down the barriers. Finally he pulled up short in front of the ninth hurdle.

FOR A REASON that confounded the experts at that time the world's finest hurdler had elected to try for a peculiar double in that tryout series. He also sought a qualifying berth as a 100-meter sprinter. No one could understand why. Admittedly Dillard was fast but he certainly couldn't expect to outrun top-ranked dash men like Barney Ewell and Mel Patton. Nor did he in the tryouts. Properly enough, he finished behind them in third place.

But in the Olympics the unfrocked hurdler, Dillard, beat the genuine sprinters for the championship and equalled the record of 10.3. Maybe it was poetic justice of a sort. But a snapper was still to come. In the 1952 Olympics four years later, Dillard picked up his rain check. He won the 110-meter hurdles and set an Olympic record.

It was four years ago in another set of final tryouts that Bob Schul, the defending Olympic champion at 5,000 meters, finished a dismal last. Another defender, Billy Mills, had scored an incredible victory in the 10,000-meter run at Tokyo. But he couldn't make it in the tryouts for the Mexico City fandango and his heartbreak came out in words.

"Tomorrow," he said, "is the first day of the rest of my life."

GERY LINDGREN, an Olympian at 18, shed tears when he was unable to qualify in either end of the Woolworth double, "the five and ten" — that's thousands of meters. Also missing out was Dave Patrick of Villanova, who had once seemed as much a certainty in the 1,500 as once did a fellow alumnus, Marty Liquori, for this year. It has always been tough to win places on the American team.

A guy doesn't even have to be a chauvanist to see that the United States has so overwhelming a supply of talent that we can lose a Dillard and still finish one-two-three in the Olympic high hurdles competition that he reluctantly vacated. However, the rest of the world keeps gaining so steadily and impressively that American dominance may be fading toward an end.

Much tryout interest this year is focused on Jim Ryun and his qualifying bids in both the 800 and the 1,500. What's the score with Jim Ryun anyway? His form chart this year has been so streaked by inconsistencies that he may not even know the answer himself.

Two share Cleveland golf lead

CLEVELAND (AP) — Veteran Miller Barber shot a steady two-under-par 69 Saturday and moved into a deadlock with young Larry Hinson for the second round lead of the $150,000 Cleveland Open Golf Tournament.

Barber, had a 68-69-137. Hinson, six under par with a 65 for the first-round lead, faltered to a 72, also for 137.

Grier Jones shot a one-under-par 70 for a 138 total and third place.

Bob Murphy, back in the pack with a 73 Friday, charged into a tie for fourth place with a five-under-par 66, grouped at 139 with Lanny Wadkins, 68-71, Mike Spang 67-72, J. C. Snead, 69-70, and George Archer, 69-70.

Hinson's putter went sour. He four-putted one green and three putted two others.

Ironically, the four putt green came on the 196-yard No. 7, where Friday Hinson nearly holed out his four iron, and Tom Weiskopf scored a hole-in-one.

"I four-putted from 25 feet," said Hinson. "The first one was about four feet past the hole and I put the second 14 inches past coming back, then I missed the third one because of a heel print.

"I should have chipped it in." Hinson said he and Weiskopf were "completely exhausted by the round."

"We were out there about five and one-half hours. We had to wait for three rulings and you have to walk a good ways from green to tee, and, of course, we had a bigger crowd today." Hinson said.

Barber said "I drove exceptionally well. I could have shot a 65 easily."

Four birdie putts stopped on the lips of the cups.

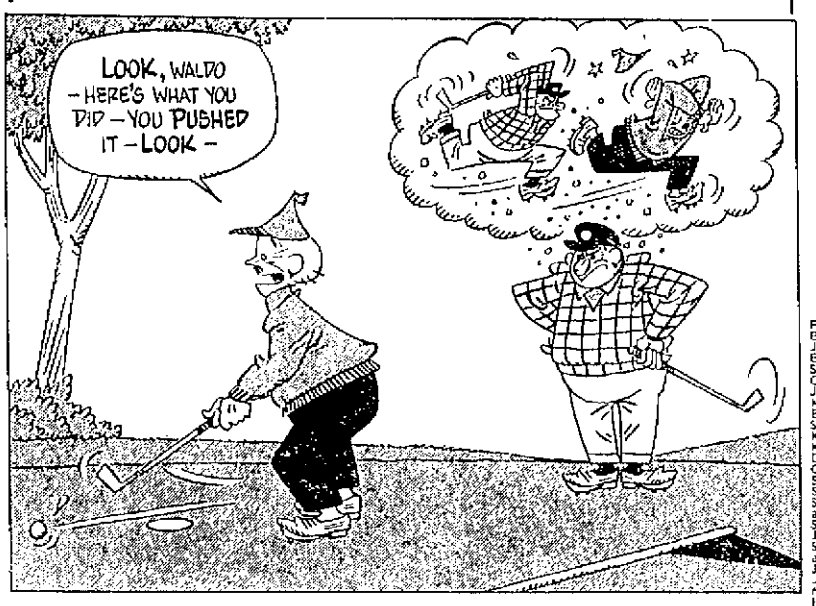

Murphy said the greens held up "unbelievably well. I had a 20-foot downhill putt on No. 7, and I swear the ball jumped into the air eight feet, dropped down and rolled into the hole. When you're hot, you can't do anything wrong."

HOW TO TAKE FUN OUT OF GOLF

By DICK HARRIS — Cartoons by WILEY SMITH

Missing a 12-inch pressure putt is not only agonizing, but embarrassing. If this happens to your opponent, explain and demonstrate how he "yanked" or "pushed" it off line. He probably doesn't know that and will appreciate your observation.

Shirley fades; Laura fires 77

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — Pam Barnett fired a third-round 75 Saturday and surged to a three-stroke lead in the $40,000 U.S. Women's Open golf championship, while Shirley Englehorn, who led the first two rounds, limped in with an 82 for a 13-over-par 229.

Miss Barnett, alone in third place with a 149 going into the round, didn't play well but gained the lead with a 54-hole total of 224. She had three birdies and six bogeys, including a bogey five on the final hole.

Gloria Ehret and Miss Englehorn, playing in the same threesome, also bogeyed the last hole. Gloria, second with a 148 starting the day, slipped to four strokes off the pace and a fifth place tie with Susie Maxwell Berning, who carded a 76 for a 228.

Laura Baugh of Long Beach shot 77, her best score in three days and enters today's final round with a 236. The Long Beach golfer's total is third lowest by an amateur.

In a tie for second, at 227, were Betty Burfeindt and four-time winner Betsy Rawls, who carded 74s, and Judy Rankin, who had a 76.

Also at 229 were Kathy Cornelius, a former Open winner, Jocelyn Bourassa and Betsy Cullen.

Elizalde the gunner

North's 605 battle plan—aerial blitz

By KEN PIVERNETZ
Staff Writer

Before Ruben Elizalde goes marching off to the Naval Academy, he'll have a chance to get in plenty of gunnery practice in Friday night's fifth North-South Kiwanis 605 Game at Cerritos College.

"We'll definitely put the ball in the air," reports North co-coach Bob Spindola who sounds more than optimistic about his team's chances, even by all-star game standards.

Elizalde, who'll leave for Annapolis the day after the game, accumulated 5,253 yards in his three-year career at Pioneer High, second only to Pat Haden in CIF Southern Section history.

With Elizalde in camp at Rio Hondo College have been favorite receivers Art Aranda (split end) and Curt Autenrieth (tight end). Add Spindola who was their coach in high school and it's easy to see why the North has looked so good running the pro-T offense.

Elizalde's presence has made it hard for former El Rancho star quarterback Mike Ortiz, the Moore League offensive player of the year, to break the starting lineup.

Another former Don, Randy Contreras, is currently battling Hans Verstegen of Santa Fe for the starting halfback spot. Fullback is set with 6-foot-2, 215-pound Martin Medina from St. Paul.

Spindola admits everything has been running smoothly "and now it's just a matter of fitting everything together as a unit. There's no doubt we have plenty of talent."

Verstegen, Medina, Elizalde and Aranda were accorded all-CIF honors on either the 4-A or 3-A level last fall. Center Ken Lavigne from Santa Fe and linebacker Tim Pelton from St. Paul are in the same category.

"A lot of people told me it'd be a tough job putting so many players from different schools together into one team," adds Spindola, "but I couldn't have had better cooperation. The attitude has been great."

The North will take off the next three days, then finish up Wednesday and Thursday. Friday's game kicks off at 8.

St. Paul's Marijon Anicich has been handling the defense.

The North surrendered 38 points last year in losing for the first time but still leads the overall series, 3-1.

Tickets are on sale at all Mutual Agencies and the Cerritos College Student Center.

AERIAL FIREPOWER for the North in Friday night's Kiwanis 605 all-star football game at Cerritos College will be provided by Mike Ortiz (12) of El Rancho High and Ruben Elizalde of Pioneer, second leading career passer in CIF Southern Section history.

400 pole captured by Isaac

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Defending champion Bobby Isaac, who won the Firecracker 400 last year with the hood on his Dodge flapping in the breeze, took no chances Saturday as he won the pole position for the big July 4 NASCAR race.

Isaac easily captured the No. 1 starting position for the $104,135 race with a sizzling lap of 186.277 miles per hour over the sticky 2.5-mile high-banked Daytona International tri-oval.

This year, Isaac and his crew chief, Harry Hyde, have four hood pins on the flame-red Dodge to securely hold it in place at the 200 mile-per-hour speeds which the cars reach on the speedway's backstretch.

"We do not intend to lose that hood again," quipped Hyde, who said he was really sweating at the finish of last year's race because of the uncertainty whether the hood would fly all the way open.

The 37-year-old Isaac was the next-to-last driver to attempt to qualify Saturday and he easily bettered the previous fastest lap of 134.128 mph.

Quirk signs bonus pact with Royals

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Jamie Quirk, 17-year-old shortstop from St. Paul High School in Santa Fe Springs, Calif., signed a major league contract with the Kansas City Royals Saturday for a bonus in excess of $70,000.

Quirk, the Royals No. 1 pick in the June free-agent draft, thus rejected a football career at Notre Dame University. The Irish had won out over 35 to 40 other universities and had signed Quirk, who was a standout quarterback, to a national letter of intent.

The bonus was the most the Royals had ever paid a draft choice and also Quirk was the first free agent they had ever signed to a major league contract, meaning he could be paid more than the minor league first-year maximum of $500 per month.

Quirk, who will now forego the North-South Shrine game, said by telephone he expected to report to Billings, Mont., in the rookie Pioneer League July 6. His mother, Mrs. Virginia Quirk, said Jamie's choice "sure wasn't easy. I hope everybody realizes that."

Quirk and his mother visited Kansas City Tuesday and Wednesday and Quirk said much of his decision was determined after talking to Willie Lanier, Kansas City Chiefs' all-pro linebacker.

He pointed out the benefits of taking the money," said Quirk. "I had a chance to go pro now and I took it."

The Royals did not draft until No. 18 in the first round, but other clubs bypassed Jamie because they did not think they could sign him.

"It was a good gamble for us," said general manager Cedric Tallis, "because of his super-potential as a player."

Quirk said he sent a telegram to Ara Parseghian, Notre Dame football coach, informing him of his decision.

"The turning point," said Jamie, "was visiting Kansas City. I went into the locker room and there were no gods. The guys were just normal guys and I said, 'Heck, I can play with these guys.'"

By signing Quirk to a major league contract, the Royals have only four options on him, meaning he must be in the major leagues in four years.

Pendulum, by gum!

I used to watch guys line up putts with a putter dangling in front of their nose, squinting at the hole like One-Eyed Connolly and looking mysterious. It was scary, like it took witchcraft and a plumb bob to sink a six-footer.

It really looked complicated. I figured if my own eyes couldn't tell me the break of a green, there was no way a $2 putter could. I was wrong.

THE RIGHT EYE is dominant in 99 per cent of all golfers. The pendulum system of judging the slope of a green is darn near foolproof, and especially helpful on mountain courses.

Do it this way: Sight a straight line from your ball to the hole, using both eyes. Holding your putter loosely at the top of the shaft, lift it vertically until you see the ball centered on the shaft just above the hosel (neck) of the club.

Okay, now close your left eye (and if the redhead across the green winks back, watch out!). If the hole is to the right of the ball, the putt breaks to the right. If the hole is to the left, give that baby some room to the left on your putt.

DERBY—

to the post at odds of even less than his 3-5.

In becoming only the second colt in 32 runnings of the Hollywood Derby to win under a 129-pound impost—Round Table did it in 1957—Riva Ridge scooted the mile and one-quarter in 1:59 3-5, only a tick off Count Of Honor's race record established in 1956.

Turcotte said Saturday's 12th win in 16 races for Riva Ridge "was by far his toughest race of the year.

"At the quarter pole, I thought Finalista was going to go flying by me. But I got into my horse left-handed and he responded just enough to win.

"But he didn't win nearly the way he did the days he took the Kentucky Derby or the Belmont. After the first few jumps, we led all the way, but it was pretty darned close there at the end — too close!

"I went to the whip with Riva Ridge all down the stretch harder than I ever did before.

"The weight told on him today. I don't mean by that the 129 pounds itself, but the weight we were giving away was the telling factor."

In addition to spotting Bicker 15 pounds, Riva Ridge toted nine pounds more than Finalista.

Trainer Lucien Laurin, who has been in the business for 40 of his 60 years, agreed with Turcotte that Saturday's event was Riva Ridge's hardest race of the year.

"Not only that," laughed the relieved trainer. "but Ron (Turcotte) surprised me. I didn't expecct him to go to the front, but he knows what he's doing and since there wasn't much apparanet speed. I guess that was the thing to do.

"The winning margin today was Riva's narrowest of all his wins.

"As for his future, I think he's earned a rest. We may run against older horses, but we'll wait for the weight-for-age races later in the year.

"You know, Riva's a marvelous horse. Nothing bothers him at all. He has the greatest disposition of any horse I ever trained.

"This was quite an adventure for him and, frankly, I was a little worried. He was nervous on the ramp when he was being loaded onto the plane in New York because it was a new experience for him.

"When he travelled before, he didn't go by air freight but by a smaller charter plane, and I think this big plane scared him a little. Anyway, I think he's proved he's a champion with this win."

Riva Ridge, who was named for a ski run at Vail, Colo., set the pace for all but the first few jumps when Atta Boy Binky, the longest shot in the field of eight at 110-1, skipped out of the gate the fastest.

Turcotte took the bay colt almost immediately then to the front and led by margins of a half-length and a length and one-half over Royal Champion for the first half mile.

Finalista sneaked into the second spot after a mile. But couldn't make any headway against the winner, while Bicker made his charge in the stretch, but it was too belated. Second choice Quack had no early speed and never threatened.

Jerry Lambert, aboard Bicker, claimed "no horse could have run better than Bicker did today. He did everything perfect. He took off when we finally saw some daylight, but the only trouble was we didn't see the daylight soon enough."

Pincay, who had four winners for the afternoon, said Finalista "tried every step of the way. I had to go around Royal Champion and the ground we lost might have made the difference. At the head of the stretch, we got right up the winner and I thought we had him beat. But my horse got tired."

Quack "had clear sailing all the way," remarked Shoemaker, who has been in a stakes riding slump, "and he finished good. We didn't get beat all that much."

Love Charge scores

Love Charge had to put on a Kaweah Bar-type closing rush to overcome Penny From Heaven and win the featured $7,000 Barcella Saturday Night at Los Alamitos.

A crowd of 12,031 saw the black Royal Charge gelding break off to the right coming out of the gate, but jockey Bobby Adair straightened him out and he took dead aim on the leading Penny From Heaven, which was a half-a-length in front at one time early in the race.

About 75 yards before the wire, Love Charge caught Penny From Heaven and then pulled away to a half-length victory. Justlike Pa was third, one-and-a-quarter lengths behind the second horse, and then in order came Charliego, Valiant Ojo, Carnival Girl, Five Chics and St. Louis' Girl.

Love Charge leaves for Ruidoso Downs, New Mexico, with his objectives being the $200,000 Rainbow Futurity and the $700,000 All-American Futurity.

Bet down to a prohibitive 2-5 favorite, Love Charge paid $2.80, $2.40 and $2.10. Penny From Heaven returned $3.80 and $2.40, while the show price on Juslike Pa was $2.60. Winning time for 350 yards was 17.9 seconds, fastest of the meeting for a 2-year-old.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

'Your Camp and Mine' just myth

Today I'm offering an apology to Sterling Bemis for stealing part of his unique title of "My Town and Yours," a daily column that I find very interesting because Sterling and I are from that old school of newspapering and also because we both are doing much reminiscing.

So, let's start with the title of "My Camp and Yours." The reason for that is simple; I saw a headline in Thursday's paper which read, "Rangers to pack pistols in park for first time." That alarmed me, but when I read the story, I found out why.

The rangers now must have special training with firearms and know how to use handcuffs and night sticks because their duty goes far beyond just being pleasant and telling park visitors about the wonders of nature, where the restrooms are situated and what lies beyond the surrounding mountains, provided the park is Yosemite.

Now a ranger must be able to quell riots, stop thievery and try to control the use of drugs. I'm beginning to think that the title is all wrong; perhaps it should read: "Their Camp." Then all of us who like nature in all its phases, good neighbors, whether in the city or in a park, can stay in our own back yard, breathe smog, listen to roaring airplanes and reminisce with your neighbor just as Sterling and I like to do.

READING FARTHER INTO THE STORY, we find that the issuance of revolvers applies only to state parks. I have seen nothing about such national parks as Yosemite and Yellowstone, the oldest of all our parks and one of the greatest.

It's nice to be able to remember camping for instance in Yosemite many years ago and leaving your camp tent wide open. Nobody bothered it; you could even leave valuables inside the tent and feel sure that they would be there when you returned from a hike to one of the falls.

As the years wore on, thievery started and nobody dared leave even an inexpensive camera in the camp. You still had good camp neighbors who would watch everything while you were gone, but perhaps they, too, wanted to hike to some spot in the park.

Now you must have reservations to get into a camp — county, state, national and private — and you carry about a dozen keys so that you can lock up everything, particularly the camper or the trailer that you may own or be renting.

You can drive from here to Wyoming and Montana in the hopes of going through Yellowstone, but when you get there, you also may find that you must keep your vehicle moving because there isn't any place to park. You turn your radio to a certain channel at any one of the five entrances to Yellowstone, and you are told just where you can find space, if any, within the park boundaries.

ABOVE ALL, DON'T BLAME THE PRESENT national or state administrations for this park predicament. Nobody can blame the last few administrations. It is something that started happening a long time ago and the government — all of our government — just could not keep pace with the land developers who were grabbing everything possible for expensive homes, small ranches, country estates and condominiums, even at the expense of ripping out forests and bulldozing down small mountains.

The present State Department of Parks and Recreation is doing the best it can with a rather limited budget. Yet, some people growl about paying one or two dollars for overnight camping if they are lucky enough to find a place.

Let's all hope that this business of providing state park rangers with firearms instead of maps and brochures works well enough to keep our parks clean and our people happy.

The new camps which will eventually become a part of the new California Water System of reservoirs and canals are going to be very primitive at the start. Castaic and Castaic Downstream Pool and Silverwood Lake, all in Southern California, will become a major testing ground for the Department of Parks and Recreation.

Rangers at those places will have their hands full, so let's do the best we can to help them.

OUTDOOR MINIS — Continuing with this column about state parks, the CDPR has opened a campground which will cater primarily to trailerites and boaters in Bidwell Canyon at the Lake Oroville State Recreation Area. It is situated 10 miles east of the town of Oroville.

If you have a dune buggy, trail bike or a minibike, any one of which is used exclusively for off-the-road recreation, it must be registered with the California Department of Motor Vehicles. A $ 15 fee covers a two-year period and DMV officials say that most of the money will be used for special recreation areas open only to those vehicles.

There should be some rather fast trout fishing at Irvine Lake this week. With the water temperature still low enough to support trout, Russ Cleary put in 1,750 pounds of Idaho trout ranging from one to three pounds on June 22. He repeated that on June 29 for the benefit of the long Fourth of July period.

The Long Beach Rod and Gun Club had a real family outing at Henshaw Lake recently, with 80 turning out for the two-day affair. George Casey's 9-3 channel catfish took top prize, which was a weekend at Henshaw for two with red-carpet treatment, donated by Manager Jack Ford.

BEAUTIES HELP CHARITY REGATTA

The West Long Beach Lions Club Fourth of July Regatta at the Marine Stadium should be a success with all these lovelies lending a hand to Lion Club President Bill Wagoner Jr. (left) and Southern California Speedboat Club Commodore Bob Pehrson (at wheel). Charity the winner in July 4th regatta

The West Long Beach Lions Club is a real charitable organization and its 23rd Fourth of July Speedboat Regatta Tuesday will help the City of Hope, Foundation for the Junior Blind, the Lions' Eye Foundation and the Braille Institute.

So, a good percentage of the $2.50 that adults pay for admission will go to those institutions and other charitable agencies which the Lions help throughout the year.

Bill Wagoner Jr., president of the West Long Beach Lions, says that the members hope to make this one of the best regattas ever held, not only for charity, but also for the spectators.

The regatta will bring together almost 100 of the high-performance sprint boats, with some big-name drivers participating. As has been the case in the past, the Southern California Speedboat Club, with Bob Pehrson as commodore, will be staging the events for the Lions.

In the recent western regionals at Ogden Utah, SCSC drivers won nine of the 11 events which they entered. Accordingly, spectators Tuesday will see a new "Parade of Champions."

There will be such drivers as Don St. John, driving Hobbit. Chuck Boyd's unlimited K-Racing Runabout, and Gordon Jennings at the wheel of Ron Woodruff's Liberty, the boat that holds the world kilo record.

Racing will begin at 11 a. m. and children under 12 will be admitted free if accompanied by parents.

President Wagoner said that the Lions Club Sportsmanship Trophy will be awarded to a driver to be chosen by the SCSC officials at the conclusion of the day's program. The trophy is a memorial to the late Lowell Johnson. In 1971 the trophy went to a man of the same name—Ed Johnson—who stopped his boat and turned it broadside to protect a driver who had been thrown into the water.

Rick Paap, 23, a man who has his eyes on the world water-skiing speed championship, will give a demonstration of speed skiing on the newly styled Vogue Speed Ski between noon and 1 p.m. He will be pulled by Gary Scow, driving Firewater, a blown fuel hydro that has reached a speed of 194 miles per hour.

Craig Vestermark, 27, Long Beach fireman who now holds the world record for barefoot skiing, and Jim Smith, also 27, another barefoot skier, also will entertain the fans with some fast skiing at the same time. Donnell Culpepper.

Anaheim pro team looking for gridders

The California Razorbacks, an Anaheim-based professional football team, are conducting team tryouts every Sunday afternoon at Cal State Long Beach.

Tryouts, which will continue through July, are also held every Tuesday and Thursday evenings at St. Justin Martyr Church, 2030 Ball Rd., Anaheim.

Practice sessions begin at 2 p.m. every Sunday at Long Beach State's main football field and at 6 p.m. every Tuesday and Thursday.

Two bulls each for trio at Tijuana

Jaime Rangel, Manolo Martinez, and Antonio Lomelin will each face two bulls today in the downtown bullring, El Toreo de Tijuana, beginning at 4 p.m.

This will be the first Tijuana corrida for Lomelin, 27, of Acapulco, since his goring in the liver last August 1. Since then, however, he has recorded many fine performances throughout Mexico and in Spain, where he starred in 1969, 1970, and 1971.

Demonstration by girl rowers at Stadium

Three girls of the Long Beach Rowing Assn. will take part in a rowing demonstration at the Marine Stadium boathouse, today at 9:30 a.m.

The girls — Karen McCloskey, Carol Simpson and Joan Lind — will represent the United States in the European rowing championships at Brandenberg, East Germany, Aug. 10-13.

The trio, first women from Long Beach ever invited to row, will have to pay their own way to the championships. Total cost for the three will be $4,500.

Techniques in rowing, how a race is won and the equipment used will be part of the demonstration.

Keino after double in Olympic Games

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Kenya's Kipchoge Keino will compete in the 1,500-meters race and the 3,000-meters steeplechase at the summer Olympic games in Munich, Germany, it was announced Saturday.

Keino was the Olympic 1,500-meter champion and medalist in the 5,000 meter run in 1968.

California Cup soccer final opens

The first of the two-game series for the California State Soccer Cup final will be played today at Daniels Field in San Pedro. Kickoff is at 2:30 p.m.

The contenders are Montebello Homenetmen, Southern California winner, and San Jose Portuguese, surprising survivor of the Northern playoffs.

Today's program at the harbor field starts at 1 p.m. with Montebello juniors (10-14 year old class) facing an All-Star team of the Golden League.

In the State Cup final, there will be no overtime in the first match as the total goals of the series decides the California Cup winner. The second game will be played July 9, at Kezar Stadium in San Francisco.

The Homeneten won their way into the grand final with wins over San Pedro Yugoslavs (1-0); Valley Germans (5-2), and a one-sided 7-1 local final over La Gloria Club of the California Soccer League.

JESUS CHRIST SUPERSTAR

Last supper enjoyable enough for seconds

By PRESTON REESE
Pop Music Critic

If the Last Supper had been as enjoyable as depicted in the West Coast production of the musical Jesus Christ Superstar, people would've asked for seconds.

Now playing at the Universal City Amphitheater with a cast of 30, Tom O'Horgan's revamped staging of his New York production is a must for devotees of the original album who felt they had been hyped by the flood of "concert version" tour groups. What they saw at the four appearances were nothing more than the album performed live by a street-clothed choral group.

LONG OVERDUE, judging by consistently packed houses during its preview run, it seems O'Horgan's version wouldn't have been so poorly received had it opened here rather than New York's Hillinger Theater.

Not that the bad reviews hurt it any. The album alone had sold its first three million copies before "Hair" director O'Horgan took the task of staging what had been loosely referred to as a "rock-opera."

More opera than rock, the music itself is merely passable at a point when rock-theater is still an infant art form which is lucrative in its novelty yet growing every day.

Superstar British composers, 27-year-old Tim Rice (lyrics) and 23-year-old Andrew Lloyd Webber (music), "did pretty good for a first opera," according to director O'Horgan, who produced his first oratorio at the age of 12.

With nearly a half-hour's worth of fresh, new songs added for the stage version, which is now being produced in Brazil, Copenhagen, Stockholm, Paris and London, O'Horgan has re-worked his 10-month-old production for the open-air Amphitheater performance. As spectacular as ever, this staging isn't as vague as the first production, which forfeitted its music to high camp glitter.

A fast moving, tight performance, the Los Angeles show seems to have gotten over most of the technical stumbling blocks encountered in its preview run. Sound engineering and stage direction problems pop up now and then but on the whole, it's worth a second try for audiences that saw it prior to last Wednesday's premiere.

PERHAPS the most outstanding addition to the West Coast Superstar is vocalist Heather Mac Rae, as Mary Magdelene. In the role introduced by Yvonne Elliman, who is now preparing for the Aug. 10 film version in Israel, Miss Mac Rae, one of many former "Hair" performers in the cast, can captivate an audience often distracted by the Amphitheater's surrounding trees, city lights and 66-degree temperature.

Carl Anderson, Judas, faces a strenuous task in the portrayal of Christ's "alter-ego" with lyrics and microphone cords that sometimes get in the way of his leaps and bounds across the stage. Anderson, who played the same role on the road and on Broadway, seems to have everything together but microphonics. Dynamic, yet sometimes overly dramatic, Anderson, the second male lead, easily overshadows Ted Neely, who appears cut short of the stature required for the part of Jesus.

Neely, who performed in the Los Angeles "Hair" troupe, will probably fare better on screen however. His wide vocal range is played down by an obvious attempt at patterning his style after Ian Gillian's original protrayal on the record.

The part of Christ, which calls for nothing short of a Mick Jagger, will open Thursday, when Neely leaves the cast to begin filming for Superstar. One of the two understudies in line for the role is a former Long Beach man, Tom Westerman, who appeared in a local touring company performance.

BRUCE SCOTT, as Pontius Pilate, is wheeled on stage atop a royal tower of skulls and bones, one of many eye-opening gimmicks O'Horgan used to heighten the spectacular side of Superstar.

Herod, palyed by Allan Nichols, seems to have jumped right out of "A Clockwork Orange" in a twist given to the ragtime counterpoint of the show.

Conductor Gordon Lowry Harrell coordinated the best music of both worlds with a 25-piece orchestra and rock group, which made previous attempts, by the Deep Purple and Procol Harum, seem like child's play.

Now equipped with a full range, stereo sound system, the Amphitheater continues its daily Universal Tours stunt show. Sets for the exhibition and the evening performances of Superstar are mounted for easy removal on freight train flat cars.

Uniformed pair gets $100,000 at bank

OVIEDO, Spain (AP) — Two men clad in military uniforms grabbed six million pesetas — nearly $100,000 — from two employes of the local savings bank early Saturday, police reported.

The employes said the robbers, brandishing pistols, forced them into a car and drove them to the outskirts of Oviedo, where they were found hours later gagged and manacled.

DEPICT U.S. CULTURE

American Film Institute saving valuable old movies

By DONALD SANDERS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Film footage which otherwise might have been lost forever is being saved, with some 8,500 old motion pictures added to the national collection at the Library of Congress in the past four years through efforts of the American Film Institute.

Old films deteriorate in time unless special efforts are made to preserve them. Until a few years ago there were no such organized efforts, and the nation was in danger of losing a vast treasure of motion pictures portraying the mores and morals, the customs and costumes of a bygone era. Many indeed are lost.

Through the film institute's efforts, Cecil B. DeMille's "The Squaw Man" of 1918 has been preserved, along with the 1939 "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," with James Stewart.

So have "So's Your Old Man," a W. C. Fields picture of 1926 long thought to have been lost; Orson Wells' "Citizen Kane" of 1947; "Wagon Tracks," a 1919 feature starring William S. Hart; Marie Dressler's "Tillie the Scrub Lady" of 1912, and a 1906 Vitagraph production called "Saving the Mortgage."

MOST OF the films have come from the industry itself, but others have been acquired from private collectors scattered from Vineland, N.J., to New South Wales, Australia. Some have been found in basements of old theaters.

John Wayne provided the only known 35mm copy of the 1939 Western classic "Stagecoach." Joan Crawford gave copies of seven of her features made in 1945-55. Mary Pickford provided more than 50 pioneering one-reelers made in 1909-13 which she bought up in the early 1920s. Warner Baxter came up with five 1929-37 features.

The American Film Institute, established as a nonprofit, nongovernmental corporation in June 1967, is headed by George Stevens Jr., the son of a famous film director.

The institute, with a budget of about $2.9 million a year, runs a variety of programs but none which it regards as more urgent than the preservation of old films.

CHLOE AARON, director of public media programs for the National Endowment for the Arts, says: "There was a great need for somebody to come along in films' acquisition and in a coordinating role."

The Museum of Modern Art in New York City started collecting old films as early as 1935, and it has 8,000 or more titles. There is a similar collection at the George Eastman house, started about 1946-50, which is strong on silents made before 1930.

Mrs. Aaron said the best estimates are that it would require perhaps $80 million to preserve all the old film available, including newsreels for which almost nothing has been done.

She has enlisted the aid of the National Science Foundation in a search for simpler and cheaper ways to preserve old films as well as the more modern videotape, which also deteriorates within 10 years or so unless stored under perfect conditions.

Boater's body found Near Oakland piers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The body of a Hillsboro man who apparently fell overboard from his boat was recovered Saturday from San Francisco Bay near the Oakland piers, the Coast Guard said. The victim was identified as C. M. Issacson.

Issacson's 45-foot boat was found aground with the motor running on the west side of Alcatraz Island late Friday night.

EARL WILSON

Nonstop Mitchum hard to interview

NEW YORK — Man and boy, I have been interviewing Robert Mitchum for 30 years, and I want to make it perfectly clear that Bob has replaced non-stop-talking champion Tallulah Bankhead as the most difficult interviewee.

Tallulah babbled on so non-stoppably, throwing in "Darling!" every sentence, that a reporter could hardly get a word down. Mitchum's conversations are thrilling with unexpected allusions to geography, literature and fights he's been in -- but you come away with sealegs as though you've been in a storm.

Almost always there's an adventure wherein some guy "hauls off and goes WHAP" but he doesn't mind because "the guy couldn't break an egg" but the guy "begs for just one shot" and that's when he hauls off and goes WHAP.

Trying to talk about what he's doing seems almost like an interruption.

"Isn't this the first time," I asked him as he was sitting in Danny's Hideaway at five in the afternoon, supposedly to discuss his latest film, "The Wrath of God," that you played a clergyman?"

"No, I was in 'Five Card Stud' with Dean Martin and 'Night of the Hunter' and in both of those, I was a man of the cloth."

The captain serving us sneaks a message to Bob: "Mrs. Mitchum called to say she won't be joining you."

I will say for Bob that he made no husbandly funny remarks. He said the picture was made in Mexico. "I guess because you can't shoot those pictures in Sweden. Why not? The Indians would look awfully funny with blue eyes. Genetically there is no way for Indians to have blue eyes."

"Why not?"

"NO WAY. Unless Leif the Lucky happened to connect with some Indian maidens on his trip over. The Western aborigines did not have blue eyes."

Bob somehow got to talking about the fuzz and a fly cop and "the other cat was layin' down a bad story," and he salted it with such wide choice of language that I didn't know whether we were in the upper or underworld.

"What's the picture about?" I asked.

"It's about a renegade priest and $57,000 which he's just lifted from a Texas bank." The maitre d' came over and signaled, did he want another drink?

"No, Pete, help me, will you, Pete?" said Bob with a nice grin.

"How do you feel now about legalizing marijuana" I inquired. Bob replied by using the popular four-letter word for marijuana and then:

"Ignore it! I was on the Mike Douglas show and a woman says, 'It's legal now to smoke hamatash in Pennsylvania.' I said 'Is it?' An old lady shouts out, 'Sure it is, come over to my house.'

TODAY'S BEST laugh: "I bet on a horse called 'Schubert's Symphony,'" writes Fran DiBacco," — and sure enough, it didn't finish."

Wish I'd said that: A man said his son, who's a college dropout, plans a political career: "It's the only profession that requires no preparation."

Remembered Quote: "The only reward of virtue is virtue; the only way to have a friend is to be one."

—Ralph Waldo Emerson

Earl's Pearls: Bill Strickler says he's taking his car back to the dealer: "I want him to tell me again what a great buy it is — the more I drive it, the harder it is for me to remember."

"The cost of living is getting ridiculous," grumbles Lee Tully. "I asked for 50c worth of Swiss cheese, and they wrapped up eight holes." That's earl, brother.

Pope does not plan to resign

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The Vatican's third ranking official said Saturday Pope Paul VI does not intend to resign when he reaches age 75 on Sept. 26 despite repeated reports he will do so.

"He never gave anyone any reason to believe he would resign at 75," said Msgr. Giovanni Benelli, the Vatican's assistant secretary of state. "In fact, he has expressly said he will not do so."

The denial was made during a Vatican radio interview with Benelli, who ranks third in the Vatican behind the Pope and Secretary of State Cardinal Jean Villot.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY
Preparation is important this coming year. Most of your plans are revised by midyear, requiring new arrangements, added contacts. Many of today's natives will move into different vocations. Today's natives generally enjoy a strongly magnetic personality, can sell almost any idea.

Aries (March 21-April 19): If you want anything done, do it yourself, as seasonal distractions, holiday-vacation conditions reduce efficiency and attendance.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Life with friends and family goes on with much fun. Don't neglect your work, keep a change in mind for tomorrow.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Your energy is high and life is interesting. Stay on the surface, with as much distance or movement as conditions permit.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Come forth with your ideas early, defend them if necessary in discussions. They turn out acceptable to all when fully understood.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Take your mind off office politics, work problems, and let current routines proceed. There is enough to keep you busy all day.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): No business at hand should be publicized — nothing official should be pursued. Give any white elephants to charity.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Creative work is favored, but not much business gets done. Notes made now are priceless later. Extend yourself to enrich all new contacts.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): While others skip routines and schedules you should keep your share of details clearly in mind so you can pick up after the holiday.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Fine time for self-improvement, tests of your skills, but avoid personal competition for better objective results.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Home and family affairs take first priority. Skip work routine today. Defer new starts for next week or later if you can.

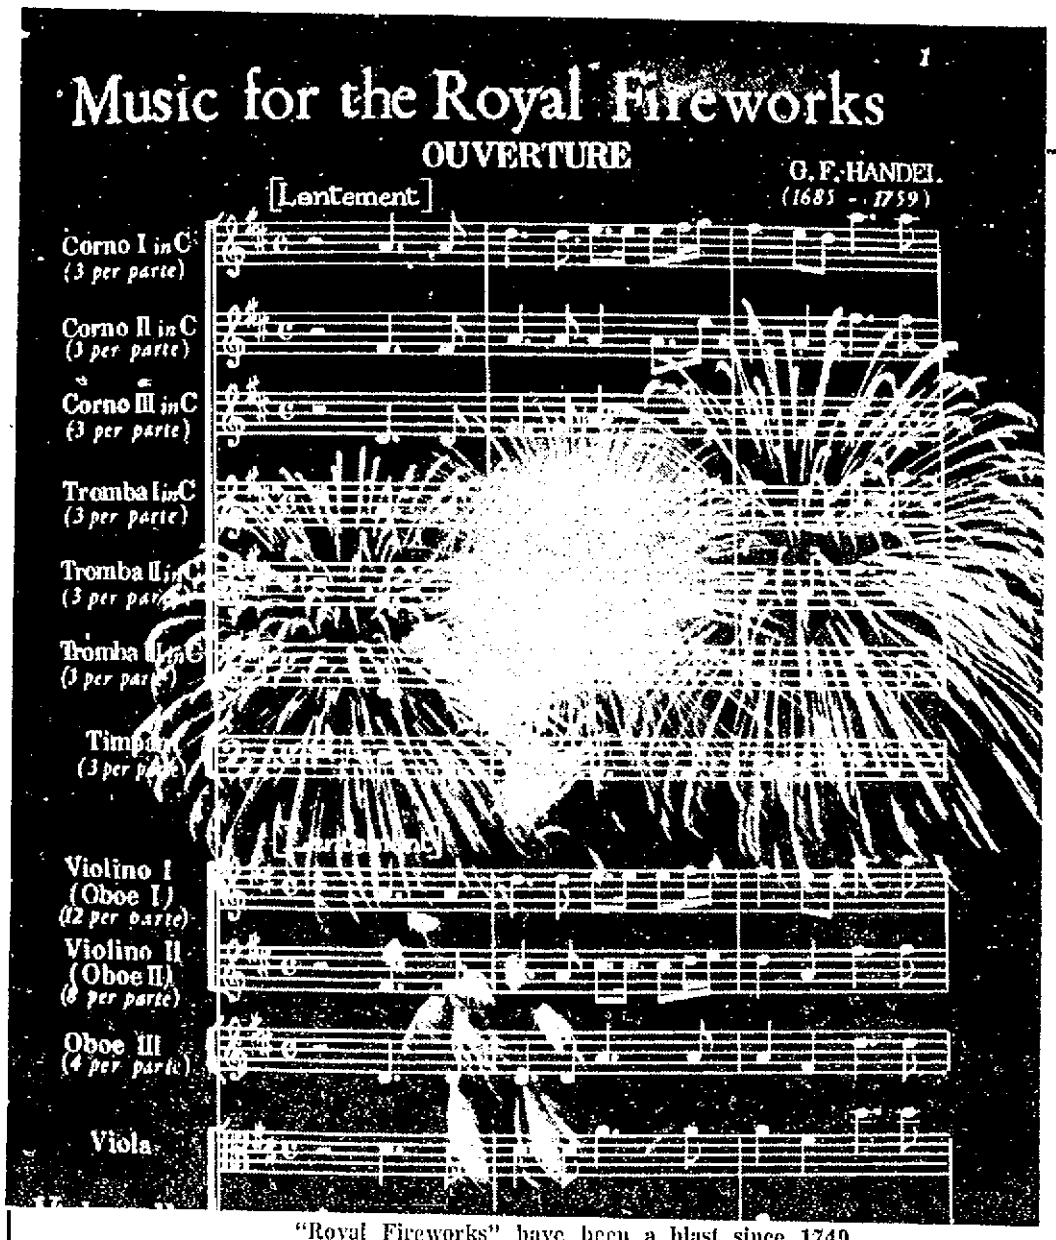

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Side-step pressures; let others pick up their share of leadership, likely along lines you hadn't thought of, but feasible.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Little opportunity presents itself for immediate application of today's ideas, particularly where revision of work habits is your goal.

Fourth of July: fireworks notes

By ELISE EMERY

The Fourth of July on TUESDAY?

You work Monday — that leaves a one-day holiday. No time to go on a junket.

You're off Monday and have a four-day vacation? So you have to come home early Tuesday before the California flood — traffic, that is — submerges you. That leaves Fourth of July night just hanging there.

Cheer up!

Long Beach Symphony Association has a star-spangled evening set up for you, the opening of the summer Starlight Serenades in Recreation Park. Free, of course.

The 8 p.m. concert will make some history of its own. For the first time, the symphony and Long Beach Municipal Band will combine to fill the air with show tunes and patriotic melodies — music to tingle the toes and set mom and pop and the kids to humming.

Couples holding hands will lean back against gentle old trees that have smiled on many a romantic twosome. For some of the grownups, the World War I melodies will seem fresh as yesterday, stirring memories of

Reverse flow of alimony is foreseen

By DAN CARLINSKY
Women's News Service

NEW YORK Quick quiz: Define the word "alimony."

If your answer is "an allowance paid by a man to a woman after divorce," or something close to that, you've got a history on your side, but you may be just a bit behind the times.

Coming up next, say some knowledgeable lawyers, will be broad acceptance of the idea of alimony for men — thanks in part to Women's Liberation.

In fact, "reverse alimony," many women will be chagrined to learn, already exists.

American divorce laws are based on Anglo-Saxon laws of hundreds of years ago, a time when females were seldom educated, rarely held responsible jobs and weren't even allowed to own land. In those days and until very recently women clearly couldn't be expected to support themselves. But times are changing.

Today, women are said to control more than half the wealth in America. More than 40 per cent of married women hold jobs (the figure ten years ago was just 30 per cent). And the Women's Lib movement is continuing to press the fight for equal treatment of the sexes.

DIVORCE PRACTICES are changing, too. Dissolving a marriage—if you haven't heard has gotten easier. California, which is leading the way in divorce reform, now allows "no fault" divorce similar to "no fault" auto insurance in that the law no longer asks who is to blame. Plaintiffs in California divorce courts can simply plead "irreconcilable differences," a category sarcastically referred to by many lawyers as "burnt toast."

The new California law, incidentally, was signed into effect a little more than two years ago by Gov. Ronald Reagan, who was divorced in 1948 from actress Jane Wyman. The aim of the code, the governor said then, was "to remove the sideshow elements" from divorces in a state where divorce seems almost as popular as marriage.

So simple is California's new dissolution procedure (the word "divorce" no longer appears in the law) that a divorce-by-mail program has been approved in Contra Costa County. If both spouses sign affidavits asking that their marriage be dissolved, a judge can grant the dissolution and mail forms back to the ex-husband and ex-wife.

With the question of blame thus pushed aside, courts in the Golden State are left with alimony as mainly a financial matter. And with more women being able to shift for themselves, it seemed only a matter of time until men began receiving alimony payments from their former wives.

ALIMONY LAWS in most states are written to favor the female partner. In fact, in more than half the 50 states, alimony is defined as support paid to a woman; a man is not eligible. There was probably no anti-male intent; it was simply that people thought of alimony as a husband's responsibility. (In 1888, in fact, a Kansas man sued his wealthy wife for divorce. He was granted the divorce but refused alimony because Kansas laws didn't allow alimony to men. A few men have been given support payments when they have been declared legally insane or physically unable to work to support themselves, but such cases are rare.)

But the trend recently has been toward rewriting the laws to put men and women on equal footing.

Then, last year in Los Angeles, it happened.

A Hollywood couple, David and Jacqueline Ward, were divorced after 16 years of marriage. Ward, a music copyist, testified that his income averaged about $14,000 a year. His wife, one of the topflight Anita Kerr Singers, collects royalties from well-known television and radio musical commercials for such products as Doublemint chewing gum, Hills Brothers coffee and Datsun autos, and has recorded numerous albums; Mrs. Ward, the court was told, earns an average of $83,000 annually.

It was Mrs. Ward who filed for divorce, asking for monthly support payments and custody of the couple's four children. Her husband filed similar counterclaims. The Wards managed to agree out of court on what to do with the children: Ward took custody of the older children, a teenage daughter and son, and Mrs. Ward two

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

A romantic setting for glittering gala

By CAROLYN McDOWELL

ROMANCE RULES THE HOME of Artie Stevenson and her daughter, Ethel Severson, these days.

Ethel's son, Corky, will marry Debbie Livingston at the Church of the Good Shepherd in Beverly Hills on July 14.

Debbie, daughter of Gale and Flossie Livingston of B Hills, has been welcomed to our town by a series of parties.

Artie and Ethel bid 250 family and friends to their villa for cocktails and to get acquainted with Debbie.

The scent of mixed bouquets and sounds of strolling musicians from Murray Korda filled the air.

Pink champagne bubbled from a silver fountain adorned with cupids and swans.

A pair of larger-than-life flower bedecked swans graced the pool. Daisy crowns perched atop some of the statues throughout the elegant house.

The people were elegant, too. Some of the black tie crowd included the sisters of the late King Farouk, Princess Fathia and Princess Faiza, of Beverly Hills; famed footballer Glenn Davis and his wife, Harriet; Corky's best man, Tim Rossovich and wife, Miki, and Tom Cadwallader, there with his wife, Carol, who will be an usher.

Among others were Gene and Betty Gregg from Arcadia and Ethel's namesake aunt from Bakersfield. Ethel Daly, John and Blanche Clock, Lynn and Claire Hossom, the Trammells George Jr. and Norma, and Judge George III and Linda, Bob and Helen Summy, Dr. "Red" and Nancy Hertzog.

Also Jonah and Helen Jones (celebrating 50 years since their wedding day — see story below) Noble and Dixie Millie, Dan and Dorothy Dunlap, Mildred Shank, Dennie and Thelma Evans, Craig Dummit, Pete and Kathy Wishney and John and Vivian Davis.

THEN THERE WERE the just-for-ladies-parties . . .

A luncheon in the Park Estates home of Mildred Wing, was co-hosted by Doris Wood and Josephine Paap.

The tables were centered with miniature Japanese umbrellas hovering over arrangements of yellow and orange pompon chrysanthemums with sprays of blue bachelor buttons tucked here and there in honor of the temporary status of the absent Corky.

A group gift of bright blue Galloping Gourmet cookware was presented to Debbie who confessed that the affair was not only her first bridal party but the first shower she had ever attended.

Gifters included her, maid of honor, Erica Schmidt, Katy Boswell, Haldis Hertzog, Bird Clay, Sharon Clay and Donna Bergman.

WHITE AGAPANTHUS and magnolias decked the halls of "B" Hancock's spacious home when she and Lillian Maggart entertained at a linen shower luncheon for Debbie.

"B's" daughters, Linda Florie and Carol Johnson, assisted the hostesses along with Carol's little daughter, Lorrie, who was adorable in a hostess gown just like the grown-up ladies.

Among the guests were Marjorie Fluor, of Santa Ana, Vicci Malouf and her daughter, Carol, from Los Angeles and Beverly Weed and Eleanor Carlson.

PINK AND LAVENDAR were the colors chosen by Betty Anne Kirkpatrick for an evening dessert shower co-hosted by Virginia Eagleson.

The invitations requested the guests to send favorite recipes and/or words of advice for Debbie. Artist Betty Anne bound them into a clever book as a marriage guide for the bride.

The hostesses were assisted by their daughters, Sharon Kirkpatrick and Beth Eagleson.

Advice-givers included Val Lyons, Sally Clay, Serena Schmidt, Virginia Muchmore, Joan Dummit, Mauri Bailey, Jeanette Fakehany, Barbara Martini, Muriel Trostle, Bettye Mitchell, Audrey Langslet, Sara Jane Hartling, Jean Moore, Beverly Wing and Alice Brittingham.

MORE IN THE ROMANCE department . . .

Dr. Leo and Margaret Goodman-Malamuth chose to celebrate their 18th wedding anniversary by hosting a pre-nuptial party for Leo's son, Leo III and his bride, the former Becky Bigoney.

The couple exchanged vows on June 24th in Hollywood.

AND MORE . . .

John Richards and his wife, Carol, have as house-guests John Jr. and his fiancee, Mary Louise McRoberts.

Both residents of Long Island, the young couple has set a Sept. 9 wedding date.

John and Carol invited friends to their beach home in Newport to meet the bride-to-be and share a "happy hour and happiness stew."

Hit of the party, (besides Mary Louise) was the dessert — a red, white and blue sheet cake previewing the glorious 4th.

Sheet cake fanciers included Jim and Jane Kresl, Tom and Ann McCarry, Jim and Pat Craig, Frank and Ellie Person and John and Kay Roggeveen.

FOURTH OF JULY came a little early when lighted sparklers in lieu of traditional birthday candles heralded the joint celebration of Bert Hulen and Myrl Hurley.

Bert's daughters, Joan Wyaut, with husband, Lee, and June Mulcahy with husband, Joe, planned the party and the treasure hunt that highlighted the evening.

Treasure hunters included Myrl's wife, Ione and Bert's grandchildren, Molly, Bradley and Susie.

SHARING A QUIET MOMENT before the party honoring them are bride-to-be Debbie Livingston and future groom, Corky Severson. The setting is the pool area of Corky's family home.

AT WIT'S END

Today's parents tell hair-raising tales

By ERMA BOMBECK

Five years ago, if someone had told me I would be loaning a hair dryer to my son, I would have laughed until I got a stitch in my side.

His hair always looked like an unmade bed. The wind parted it. Five fingers combed it. And when birds began to make a nest, we had it cut.

Then one day, all of that changed. The nation went "unihair" and my son went with it.

It would be nice to report that by this time parents have become acclimated to long hair on their sons. They haven't. Everywhere I go, the first question is, "How long is your son's hair?" I regard the length of his hair as a graph to my parental control over him. In June, 1971, I used the heavy-handed parental approach. I told him I did not go through 18 hours of labor to give birth to a prehistoric Cro-Magnon. He compromised by having the barber wave the scissors over his sideburns.

In September, 1971, I used the humiliation route by telling him he looked like Prince Valiant with a $2 permanent wave. He was flattered and borrowed my setting lotion.

January, 1972, was the year of the direct approach. I sat him down and asked him point-blank what he was trying to achieve. He said his long hair stood for his individuality. I asked him to get his individuality trimmed as it was falling into his chili. He declined but said he would keep it out of his eyes, which produced an affliction whereby he would snap his neck and for a brief moment you had a clear view of an eyeball.

In March, 1972, I decided to compromise. If he would get a haircut, I would let him in the house, reinstate him in the will, and let him put a yellow bug light in his reading lamp. He refused.

THIS MONTH, I conceded defeat. I told myself that I had seen boys with longer hair. (Or were they girls?) I told myself that there were worse things than having a son with long hair, like having a tooth grow through your ear, or an 18-year-old who wasn't toilet trained. I told myself I would have to get with it as this is a new generation and they must set their own style. After all, didn't I wear Mickey Mouse hair ribbons? I was in the middle of telling myself that it was a fad and that in a few years he would be as bald as a Marine sergeant, when he went by the door and snapped his neck so that I could see he was conscious.

"Hey, Mom," he said, "We're out of hair spray."

I bit my lip. Maybe I could give it one more try. If chaining him to the bed and playing Wayne King waltzes in his ear doesn't work, I swear to you I'll adjust.

FASCINATING FABRICS

Ban-Lon name on various fibers

By FRANCES DIETRICH

A trademark is "a symbol used by a manufacturer to distinguish his product from those of his competitors, usually registered or protected by law."

It is also something more than that. It is a form of public acknowledgment. The presence of the trademark presupposes that it is backed by reliability.

Various fiber companies license fabric producers and garment manufacturers to use their trademark signifying that the fiber company is behind the product as well as the manufacturer. The trademark can be used only when the licensee meets subscribed quality requirements. His products are checked by the company that holds the trademark as to yarn quality, colorfastness, resistance to wrinkling and pilling and other requirements.

IT IS UNIQUE when a company which owns a licensed trademark does not manufacture anything itself. Bancroft Licensing, a Division of Indian Head Co., is a marketing organization, which made Ban-Lon famous. After it acquired the rights to a patented process for crimping fiber it gave the method the name Textralized. Companies were licensed to use the process and the trademark. The second license was for the trademark, Ban-Lon, which identifies garments and other products made of Textralized yarns. The yarn, the garments, and other products made from the yarn, must comply with the quality standards established by Bancroft Licensing.

In 16 years, Ban-Lon trademarked products have sold over five billion dollars worth of merchandise backed by seventy-five million dollars in advertising.

THE BAN-LON name is familiar, but most women think it means a single knit nylon dress, as nylon was the first fiber Textralized and used in Ban-Lon dresses. However, the trademark also extends to polyester and other fibers in all types of apparel and upholstery.

Now, Bancroft Licensing has announced that the Ban-Lon name will not be confined to Textralized yarn, but will be associated with a variety of different fibers and fabric textures. In addition, it has licensed the Beaunit Corporation to use the name in conjunction with carpet fibers.

In carpeting, it will be restricted to the top price and quality range in the retail carpet field, which represents about 20 per cent of the two billion dollar retail carpet industry.

Beaunit Corporation will license selected mills to produce the carpeting from yarns which it supplies. Bancroft specifications will include everything from the fiber to the carpet construction.

Ban-Lon fabric by-the-yard is sold in fabric outlets throughout the country. In some cities, special Ban-Lon corners are being set up in fabric stores. Fabrics carried are prints and solid colors in nylon and polyester single and doubleknits.

How does Bancroft control quality among its 1600 trademark licensees? Field surveillance teams check production method on the spot. Unidentified representatives buy garments in retail stores and examine quality. Laboratories constantly check yarn and fabric samples.

READER SERVICE: Write for free Ban-Lon pamphlet, THE BEAUTIFUL WAY TO SEW, which provides instruction on how to sew lightweight single knits. Send self-addressed and stamped envelope to Frances Dietrich, P.O. Box 5790, St. Louis, Mo. 63121.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Prudent about cooking, too

By MILDRED K. FLANARY

Let's consider the word "jurisprudent." Webster defines 'Juris' as "foreseeing" — 'prudent,' "careful management, sound judgment, sensible, not rash".

Well, today's Chef of the Week, has been "courting" both ends of that word since 1964, when he, as Attorney Alfred Dovbish, became deputy district attorney for the City of Los Angeles in March of that year.

His functions included complaint issuance and investigation, preliminary hearings, coroner inquests and both court and jury trials.

As an aside . . . he is a former Press-Telegram scribe, having written scholarship sports for the P-T while in high school.

Born in Boston, Mass., Dovbish came to California in 1945. He graduated from both Stephens Junior and Polytechnic High Schools, where he was a member of the student government and editor-in-chief of the high school paper.

Graduating from USC with a B.A. degree and major in political science, he continued his studies at Southwestern University, from which he graduated in '63 with a juris doctor degree.

In May of '65, he became assistant counsel for the State Compensation Insurance Fund.

DOVBISH RETURNED to Long Beach in 1966, and served as deputy city prosecutor until September, 1970, training new deputies, supervising court and jury trials, and doing appellate work through the Supreme Court of California.

No California tour is complete without a trip to San Francisco, which our "Chef" made in late 1970. There he served as deputy attorney general until the following September, when he returned to Long Beach and private practice.

The professional achievements of Atty. Dovbish, are many and varied. In fact, at the time of our interview, he had just received a commendation from the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors.

He has been admitted to practice in all California State courts, the Federal District court of both the Central and Northern Districts, and the United States Supreme Court. Dovbish has also served as judge pro tempore, Long Beach Judicial District, has authored the "California Attorney General Opinions," and published cases in California Courts of Appeal and the Supreme Court.

A member of the State Bar of California, his other affiliations include the Marin County Bar, the Long Beach Bar, the California Trial Lawyers and the National District Attorneys Associations. He has served as president of the Criminal Justice Institute of Long Beach, and is on the board of directors the Academic Halfway House of Long Beach.

When Dovbish does find time for a hobby, he plays tennis or goes skiing at Mammoth Mountain.

Dovbish and his wife, Loretta, have two daughters and a son. Donna, 13, attends Hill, while Linda, 8, attends Tincher Elementary School. Michael, 1, hasn't decided.

"He does do a bit of cooking", says Loretta, "but he's best known for his smoking habits. He owes half the town a cigarette. You see, he gave up smoking, but the urge does hit again on occasion, so he borrows one from a friend." No doubt, they enjoy sharing.

We enjoy sharing his recipe today, also. It's for Stuffed Manicotti.

STUFFED MANICOTTI

Stuffing

2 tablespoons chopped onion

2 tablespoons chopped green pepper

¾ pound ground beef

½ cup cottage cheese

½ cup bread crumbs

½ teaspoon salt

Dash of pepper

ATTORNEY ALFRED DOVBISH

Combine all of the above and stuff into uncooked manicotti (pasta) shells.

Butter flat baking dish. Spoon 8 ounces marinari sauce on bottom of baking dish. Arrange stuffed manicotti side by side in baking dish. Cover stuffed manicotti with 8 ounces marinari sauce and ½ cup of water. Cover baking dish with foil and seal edges. Bake in preheated oven at 400 degrees for 40 minutes. Remove foil, cover with Mozzarella cheese and sprinkle generous amount of grated Parmesan cheese. Re-cover with foil until cheese melts. Serve with Burgundy wine, salad, Spinach, mandarin orange and baconbits. Marinari sauce may be purchased in gourmet shops and markets.

Dear Mr. Corn:

My partner and I are having problems over this hand. Can you please help?

Here is the bidding and my hand:

Partner	Opponent	Me	Opponent
1 ♥	2 ♦	Dbl.	Pass
3 ♥	Pass	Pass	Pass

♠ A Q 8 6
♦ 8 7 6 2
♣ 9 8 6

She claims I should have bid four hearts and I claim she should have either passed the double or gone to game herself.

Log Jam, St. Louis

Answer: Sorry, but you are way off base. Your double was highly speculative and misleading because of your shabby diamonds and lack of general high-card strength. After your partner jumped in hearts she was inviting game even if you had little in hearts and much in diamonds (which you promised by the double). Your good spades and lack of diamond honors plus your doubleton heart should have persuaded you to go on.

Dear Mr. Corn:

I was severely criticized for my choice of bids with this hand:

♥ K Q 5
♦ J 8 7
♣ K 9 8

My left-hand opponent opened one club, my partner doubled and, after a pass, I responded one no trump. Was my bid that bad?

Ten High, Xenia, Ohio

Answer: It is usually best to give a preference to any four-card major suit after partner's takeout double. In your case the decision was close and your bid might well have turned out better. Your balanced hand presents few clues and there is little reason for severe criticism.

New divorce laws bring reverse alimony younger sons. The financial question was not so easily solved. . .

IN THEORY, CALIFORNIA had long allowed alimony to either party; in practice, of course, only exwives were awarded alimony. But section 4516 of the new California Civil Code proclaims that the court "may order the husband or wife, or father or mother, as the case may be, to pay any amount that is necessary for the support and maintenance of the wife or husband and for the support, maintenance, and education of the children, as the case may be."

And the times, as has been said, are changing.

The magistrate in the Ward case, Los Angeles Supreme Court Commissioner John R. Alexander, ordered Mrs. Ward to pay her exhusband $1,602 a month "spousal support" (the new legal term for alimony) plus $1 a month support for each of the two children who would be living with him.

The judge agreed to make most of the allowance in the form of alimony as a favor to Mrs. Ward, since alimony, and not child support, is deductibe for income tax purposes.

He also awarded Mrs. Ward a token alimony of $1 a year from her ex husband. Thus if she might someday need his support, she would need only apply for an increase in alimony.

So both parties are, technically, receiving alimony. But the considerations of the court were clearly concerned with financial matte[illegible]n no bias based on sex. The idea be[illegible] the court's decision, postulates E. Loyd Saunders, Ward's attorney, was "to maintain the same standard of living if at all possible." He adds: "I argued with Women's Lib—that women should be LIBERATED. They should be fee to pay alimony just the same as men."

Family-law experts predict more cases like the Ward settlement. "Why not?" asks Doris Jonas Freed, a New York lawyer who has studied trends in divorce and alimony laws and practice. "There's no reason why women who believe they should have equal rights should object to having equal responsibility."

But, she notes, those who worry about a possible epidemic of divorced men living off their ex-wives should know about another trend: alimony to either party may well be on the way out. It certainly is on a downward course.

In New York, the State Senate is considering a bill that would limit alimony to one year except in the case of a recipient who is old, ill or burdened with preschool children. Lobbying for the new bill is a citizen's group known as the Committee for Fair Divorce and Alimony Laws.

And judges these days almost everywhere seem to be granting alimony in smaller amounts and for limited periods of time. Sometimes the courts don't even have to get involved: Family-law advisory groups and divorce lawyers note that more and more women just aren't asking for alimony when they don't need it. Usually, they say, it's because of pride.

When actress Tuesday Weld divorced her husband, screenwriter Claude Harz, last year, she didn't seek support. Said she: "Part of my reason was liberation—I'm all for Women's Lib. But it's men's liberation as much as women's. I don't see any reason for Claude to have that hanging over his head."

SAYS DORIS JONAS Freed: "Judges are trying to eliminate the 'alimony drones' who live off their payments and are afraid to remarry because they'd risk their financial security. I think a lot of these women panic at the thought of remarriage because they'd lose their alimony, so they really let alimony stand in the way of their making a new life after divorce."

But both trends—toward equality of the sexes and toward severely limiting alimony—will be slow in developing. "Reverse alimony," in particular, won't be as usual as the regular husband-pays-wife variety in the immediate future.

"Alimony for men is putting the cart before the horse," says New York Criminal Court Judge Shirley R. Levittan. "Sure, there's greater opportunity for women now. But women still don't have the good jobs. They're still economically disadvantaged. So alimony for men certainly won't become common."

If judicial leanings away from alimony altogether continue, by the time courts are ready to make frequent awards of "reverse alimony," men may well find they've gotten into the game too late to reap the benefits.

'Man's Reach for God' ---a creative search

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

Man explores many paths in his search for God, and for each the path that leads to his goal may be different.

Believing that the search may be pursued through creative expression, Covenant Presbyterian Church three years ago initiated an all-encompassing approach to worship: Man's Reach for God.

So successful was this first event that it has been continued: this year the festival of religious arts will be held at the church, Third Street and Atlantic Avenue, Friday, Saturday and next Sunday.

Art, drama, music, poetry and worship service will all be a part of the festival which officials of the church describe as "an ambitious event, one seeking to bring to light a variety of art forms which have been created in a God-ward spirit — an expression of Man as he transcends himself."

On Friday at 8 p.m. there will be "A Collage of Experience," an experience admittedly difficult to define. There will be musical offerings, concerts, dance presentations, poetry readings, dramas and other examples of ways people respond to the transcendent impulse through creativity.

This will be repeated in the form of a worship service next Sunday at 7 p.m.

Saturday's program will begin at 7:15 p.m. with poetry readings. At 8 o'clock, Brett Zumsteg will play an organ concert and at 8:45 there will be a dramatic presentation.

After 9 and 11 a.m. worship next Sunday there will be a noon luncheon, followed by music and poetry readings, a drama, "Zaccheaus," at 2 p.m. and the "Collage" at 7 p.m. All events are free with the exception of the luncheon for which a charge of $1 will be made for adults, 50 cents for children.

Art exhibits will be open from 7 to 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday and from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. next Sunday.

An important feature for many young couples is child care which will be provided at no cost. There will be special creative activities for the youngsters.

To watch artists at work, come to the demonstrations after the noon luncheon to see Japanese flower arrangement, pottery-making, stained glass art, and macrame. You can even take part in creating an "ecology sculpture" from junk.

If you want more information, call R. Michael McLellan, one of the pastors, at the church.

ON THE OTHER HAND, these two members of a string quartet drew the intense attention —and admiration—of the younger set. Playing are Linda Curtis, violinist and Hugh MacKenzie, cellist.

WHEN YOUNG MUSICIANS of the Street Life group rehearsed for their performance at Covenant Presbyterian Church, it was the over-21s who stopped to listen. Players, from left, are leader Cliff Ervin, Joe Perez, Brad Thoelke, Ken Kaplan, Jason Eyre and Stephen Hodges.

FINE ARTS AFFILIATES of Long Beach State University have awarded scholarships to 11 students in the school of fine arts. Recipients in art are Peter Atherton, Barrett Lane, Jerry Bailey, Jennifer Kotter, Melinda McCurdy and Charles W. Mundy.

Music awards winners are Patricia Dobies and Christopher Boyle. In theater arts, scholarships went to Susan Thomas, Lee Myers anbd Thomas Edward Wills.

Checks were presented at a luncheon in the home of Mrs. Joseph Byrne, new president of the Affiliates.

MONEY FOR OTHER scholarships flowed in at the Muirfield Faire held June 23 and 24 as a benefit for students at California Institute of the Arts.

The tournament of arts and artists was staged by 11 artists who are, or have been, associated with Walt Disney Productions. The two evenings of reception and cocktails at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Lund (he's the new chief administrative officer of Cal-Arts) netted at least $12,000. Exact figures won't be available until all bills are submitted and paid, but the final amount for scholarships may mount to $14,000. Of the 297 pieces of paintings and sculpture displayed 85 sold to the 615 people who attended.

This is strictly a supportive effort by members of Disney Artists for Cal Arts. Only once in the five years the fund-raiser has been held, have committee members met a scholarship recipient.

"We keep away from the academic side," explained Martin Skalr, committee member, "because we don't want in any way to influence the school in its choice of awardees."

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY, Lakewood Artist Guild members will exhibit at the State Mutual Savings and Loan Association, 4721 E. Candlewood St.

Top winners in the recent Mayfair Park show, sponsored by the Lakewood Recreation Department and the Guild were Janet Rowan, Joyce McGee, Beth Waller and Janet Vamero. Rudy Aguirre of Cerritos College selected these and a number of other winners.

The Guild, in another recent action, awarded honorary membership to Cornelia McKissack, an honor given annually to an outstanding student at Cerritos College.

DURING JULY AND AUGUST, work by prominent artists will be displayed at Woodward Gallery, 5209 E. Pacific Coast Highway. Those represented will be Dali, Tornero, Hamilton, Stone, Neiman, Guitet, Boulanger, Amen, McGaughy and Ritter.

In addition, there will be a selection of graphics by local artists.

CONTINUING ITS POLICY of exhibiting works of unestablished young artists, San Pedro Municipal Art Gallery, Seventh and Beacon Streets, is showing paintings by Carl Geonetta, graphite drawings by Carol Beesley and oils by John R. Goders. Their three-artist show may be seen through next Sunday.

STARLIGHT SERENADE

Holiday music for the Fourth

bringing home the sheet music, trying out the new tune on the family piano.

Jack Palacios, conductor of the Starlight Symphony, and Charles Payne, director of the Municipal Band, have scored a rousing program. Palacios will conduct the first half. Payne the second. The 67 musicians will be string players from the symphony and the entire band personnel.

Guest hosts for the evening will be Capt. and Mrs. Donald A. Smith. He's commanding officer of the Long Beach Naval Station.

There'll be seating for about 1,000 on the permanent benches in the park, but the old bleachers won't be there. They were condemned and replaced by stronger, steel bleachers. You don't have to be an Isaach Newton to realize that what goes up must come down. The City of Long Beach, in the past, was able to put up and take down the old bleachers between concerts. With a new Starlight schedule starting this year, there won't be time enough between programs for this. So symphony officials suggest that you bring your own seating — folding chairs or cushions or blankets — to place on the ample lawns.

JUST AS THEY have ever since the Starlight Serenades began 11 years ago, families and groups will arrive early to share picnic suppers on the broad, green grass.

As daylight fades, as crowds thicken, musicians will take their places on the bandstand, Palacios will raise his baton and, with Saint-Saens' stirring "March Militaire," the program will begin.

Next will come Handel's "Music for the Royal Fireworks," a work composed for a celebration in London on April 27, 1749. King George II was to attend festivities in Green Park to mark the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle.

First, there had been a public rehearsal of the music on April 21 at Vauxhall. A crowd of 12,000 caused a three-hour traffic jam on London Bridge.

But for the formal performance, the Chevalier Servandoni had designed a fireworks machine, presumably in consultation with Charles Frederick, Comptroller of His Majesty's Fireworks.

The king inspected the machine about 7 p.m.; all seemed in order. But, obviously, all wasn't. During the program, a fire started accidentally at one end of the pavilion, the chevalier's temper flared and he thrust his sword at the hapless Frederick. Quickly disarmed, Servandoni was hurried off. History doesn't have much to say about what happened to the fireworks after that.

But the music has remained a real triumph, repeated around the world ever since and especially favored for jubilant, festive occasions.

LEROY ANDERSON's "Bugler's Holiday," Palacios' arrangement of Theme From "Patton" and Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" will complete the first half of the program.

After intermission, with Payne on the podium, Elgar's familiar "Pomp and Circumstance March No. 1" will snap the audience to attention. The 1925 musical, contemporary again since its Broadway revival two years ago — "No, No, Nanette" by Vincent Youmans — is next on the bill. The arrangement is by Robert Russell Bennett.

Reaching back again is a number optionally called "George M. Cohan Medley" or "Over There Fantasy." Whatever it's name, it was arranged by the late Ferde Grofe and is a collection of melodies written by Cohan to stimulate sale of World War I Liberty Bonds. Opening and closing with "Over There," it embraces such memory bringers as "Rose of No Man's Land," "Goodby Broadway, Hello, France," "K-K-K-Katie" and "Where Do We Go From Here?".

Not likely there'll be any nodders, except a few tousled kidlets asleep on blankets, but just in case, the musicians next will play Meredith Willson's clarion "76 Trombones."

AN ARRANGEMENT by Robert Armbruster of "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "America the Beautiful" will lead into the finale, with the audience singing, and meaning it, "God Bless America."

All told, with intermission, the program will last just over an hour, maybe a little longer. Long before the last quarter moon starts to rise, the first Starlight Serenade of the season will end.

But this year, co-sponsored by the Symphony Association, the Independent, Press-Telegram and the Musician's Union Trust Fund, the series is being expanded from three to nine programs. For nine weeks, a performance will begin at Recreation Park, Seventh Street and Park Avenue, each Tuesday at 8 p.m.

So celebrate this musical Fourth of July — and plan to come again July 11 for another top-rated concert by Long Beach Civic Light Opera. Part of that program will be excerpts from the company's just-concluded "Fiddler on the Roof."

Sound investment

Heels over head in dance

Spectacular athletic prowess of the men, graceful beauty of the women make performances of the Ukranian Dance Company exciting. When they appear at Greek Theater Tuesday through July 16, dancers will present several works for the first time in this country.

Where singles swing

By STAN DELAPLANE

When the Danes can't get into the Tivoli Gardens (or more likely, can't stand the summer tourists) they go to Bakken, an amusement park a few miles out of Copenhagen.

It's a big, rowdy fun fair: Ferris wheels and roller coasters. Girlie shows and shooting galleries. Dance halls and boisterous, crowded pubs. We chose the Polsekro (it means "sausage ends") and it was something like a beer joint in an American college town on the night of the Big Game.

Jammed with young Danes, banging beer steins on the tables and singing. (We recognized "Clementine" and "Rule Britannia". Current Danish favorite translated for us as "Ma, I Gotta Peepee".)

Bakken's a good place for singles — though single young men have no problem meeting girls in wonderful, wonderful Copenhagen. Much more swinging than Tivoli Gardens and hundred per cent Danish.

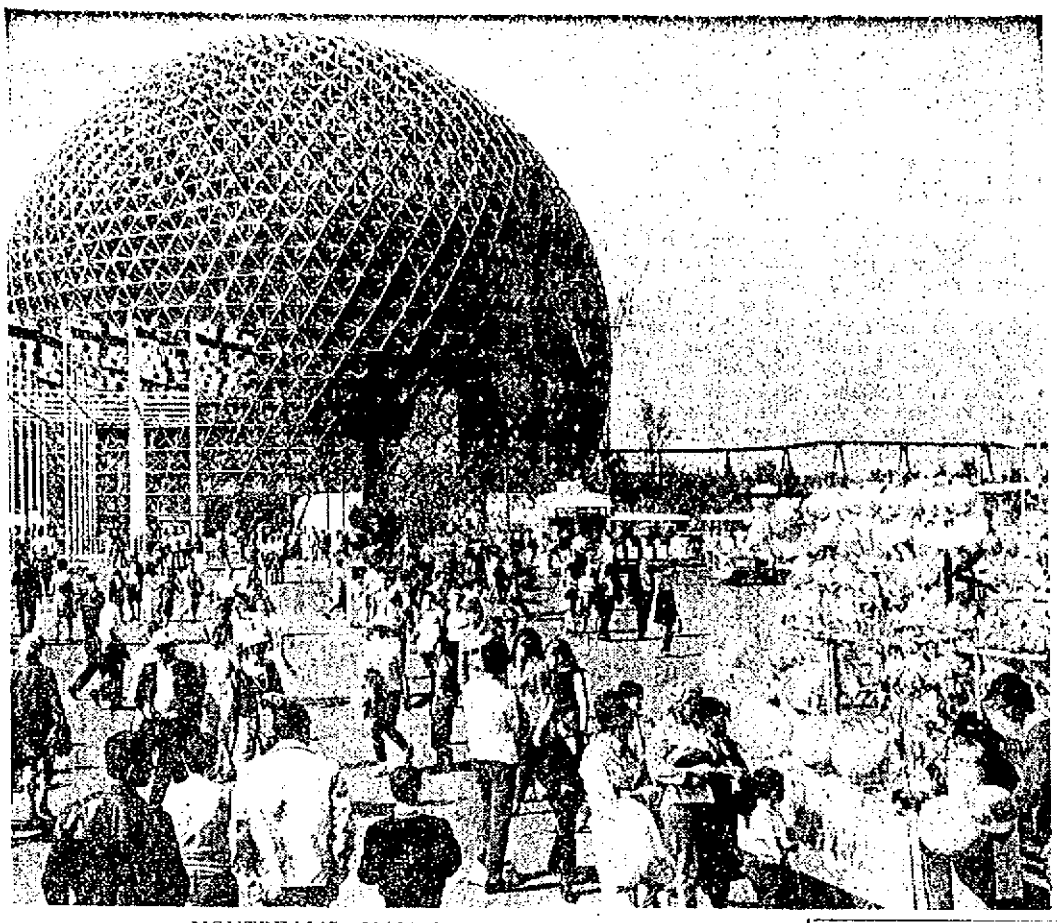

The big pornographic thing has collapsed. Couple of years ago there were sex fairs, book shops, fifty "live" shows. Copenhagen was the porn capital of the world.

Today it's down to one —Club Mademoiselle. (The main bout was punctuated by so much squeezing and coughing, we gave it little time. You could catch your death of cold in the place.)

Copenhagen's still tops with touring shaggies and backpackers. Good hostels. Fairly inexpensive. Danes relaxed — what you do is your own business so long as you aren't a nuisance. Foreigners found with hashish are deported. Sellers get up to two years in stony lonesome.

"For a backpacking trip in Europe: Are there any countries where we will have trouble?"

Haven't heard of any. But surprising to me, I only saw TWO during a week driving in France. Maybe just too early — school wasn't out then. Heard Greece is getting annoyed with the hippie cave dwellers on Crete. May give them the heave-ho. Spain not happy with the hippy colony on Ibiza. But hard to push them around since many have mailed incomes — even wealthy by Spanish standards.

MONTREAL'S 'MAN AND HIS WORLD'
. . . Buckminster Fuller's geodesic dome

TO OPEN JULY 20

'Man and World'

The opening date of Man and His World, Montreal's permanent successor to Expo 67, which was delayed because of a month-long strike by local blue collar workers, is now set for July 20. The international exhibition will run through Labor Day, Sept. 4.

Man and His World, which for the past four years has occupied two islands in the St. Lawrence River, will be presented entirely on St. Helen's Island, the larger of the two.

St. Helen's is also the site of La Ronde amusement area which was readied in two days following the end of the strike and opened on June 17 with a record attendance of 53,839 paid admissions, the biggest one-day gate for the park since Expo 67. The total attendance for the day was estimated at 70,000, since children seven years old and under are admitted free.

A number of the international exhibits which were scheduled for pavilions on the second island, Notre Dame, will be moved to St. Helen's Island to maintain the international flavor and quality of the exhibition.

Among countries participating will be The People's Republic of China, present for the first time; the United States; the USSR; Switzerland; Iran; Belgium and many others.

Admission to the site will be free this year, with a modest charge for visiting the pavilions. The price of a season visa which permits unlimited entry to all pavilions has been lowered from the originally planned price of $5.00 per person to $3.00 due to the shortened season.

Discounts offered for new Caribbean resort

Family and individual memberships are being accepted on a limited basis in a new South Seas island type resort in the Western Caribbean to be operated as a private club starting this winter.

"Bahia Key," as it will be known, is being built on an island and four keys nine miles off the coast of Honduras. The resort will include up to 500 single and multiple bedroom cottages with air conditioning, hotel complex with restaurants, swimming pool, scuba diving on the keys, tennis courts, library and game rooms.

Package tours at the lowest rates, including air transportation, will be offered to members and their families, and also to groups through travel agents. Travel arrangements from the West Coast will be made with National Airlines for connections at Miami with TAN Airlines of Honduras, and with other U.S. airlines for TAN flights from Mexico City.

The development is one of several planned along the format of the Club Mediteranee which has proved very successful in Europe and now in the U.S.

Initial entrance fee for "Bahia KEY" is $11 for singles and $16 for families of three or more. Application forms and full details are available from Minimax Air Travel, 3516 E. Century Blvd., Lynwood, Ca. 90262.

DEAR ABBY

She sings mother-in-law blues

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Why is it that the last one in the family to be married is the one who has to take the widowed mother in? I have had my mother-in-law for 20 years, and not one of the others will offer to take her even for a few days.

I am a nervous wreck. I can never have a private conversation with my husband unless we go into our bedroom, and whisper so she can't hear us.

I can't even go shopping unless Mamma goes along for the ride. We haven't had a vacation in 20 years without her.

My husband tells me that I will get my reward in heaven, but I can't wait that long. —TIRED

DEAR TIRED: Tell your husband you have earned a little "heaven on earth," and to figure out a way to give you a preview.

DEAR ABBY: When a couple gets a divorce, who gets the bride's wedding rings? (My set costs $900).

My husband is financially secure enough, but claims he cannot afford alimony. He takes home a minimum of $160 a week, but it's usually more because of overtime.

I make $40 a week take home. I also have multiple sclerosis and have a heavy medical expense. I can't get a better paying job because of my physical handicap. Besides, I had enough trouble getting this one. There is also the question of wedding gifts. We received linens, silver, kitchen appliances, good china, etc. Almost everyone on my side of the family gave us money for a wedding gift (now long spent, of course). His side gave us mostly gifts. Who should get them? I imagine a lawyer could settle this, but I would like you sincere opinion.
—FINANCIALLY HURTING

DEAR HURTING: My sincere opinion is that you should get everything you are entitled to, that's why I suggest you ask your lawyer for a legal opinion.

DEAR ABBY: You recently printed a letter from a fellow who was turned down when he asked a girl for a goodnight kiss on the first date. He said he was glad that turndown didn't prevent him from asking that girl for another date.

I have been dating a girl for six months, and I am proud to say that so far all she's given me is a goodnight kiss at the door.

She's a very special young lady who shuns X-rated movies, Go-Go bars, and parking. I admire her greatly for her high moral standards. She has a good head on her shoulders, thinks for herself and conducts herself like a lady at all times. Some day she'll make some lucky man (hopefully me) a fine wife.

I have a great deal of respect for her, and I think I love her. And I thank her parents (and mine) for raising us as they did.

I am 19 and have a whole lifetime ahead of me to experience and enjoy the deeper emotions, and I intend to wait until I have earned that privilege.

No need to use fake initials. If that girl sees this letter and knows I wrote it, it will prepare her for what I hope to tell her soon. L.G.R., TRENTON, MICHIGAN

DEAR L.G.R.: What a refreshing letter.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I invited two couples to our home for dinner one night last week. One couple had been married for five years, and the other couple was engaged.

Before dinner, both couples were in each other's arms, off and on, kissing passionately. Now, Abby, I have no objections to couples showing affection to each other, but they really acted like they were all alone.

I am not an old prude myself. I'm 25, have been married for four years, and I love my husband every bit as much as either of those girls love their guys, but I think there's a time and place for everything.

Once, I jokingly said, "Okay, kids, knock it off." My husband gave me a dirty look, and after they left he lectured me.

Was I wrong, Abby? Please tell me. That one couple (the engaged pair) made me blush.
—WONDERING

Quite a man is TV's Mannix

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

It is not every day that I interview someone who is said to make a million dollars a year, so it was with a bit of trepidation that I approached Mike Connors on Paramount Pictures' Sound Stage 17 during filming of an episode of "Mannix."

After five years as star of one of television's top-rated series, it is not likely that Connors has any strong desire to undergo another interview. Probably he just agreed to it to cooperate with the show's publicity people.

When I was led past a slew of cameramen, technicians, stand-ins, cast members, assistant directors, and makeup men and flunkies to Connors, the star of TV's "Mannix" was seated in a chair and busily engaged in listening to another man who was leaning almost on top of him and talking animatedly.

My eyes briefly caught those of Connors, and from that one glance I could tell he wasn't going to be such a tough interview, after all. His were the eyes of a kind, considerate person.

After the fast-talking man departed, Mike rose from his chair and we were introduced. He immediately made me feel welcome, and by the time I left the sound stage nearly an hour later, he almost had me thinking I was doing him a favor talking to him.

He had no sooner sat down in the chair marked "Mike Connors" and had me sit in the one marked "Gail Fisher" before he was called to the phone. He apologized and departed for a few minutes.

Upon his return I told him I had read the article on him in the then current TV Guide and asked if he had seen it. He gave an affirmative nod, and I asked him if all the facts were straight.

"It's wrong where it says I don't do as many of my own stunts as I once did," he replied. "I do as many stunts as I ever did — if not more. I do most of them. It's just the really dangerous things that I don't do, just things where you'd get killed — like running a car off a hill."

Anything else wrong? I asked

"Well, it indicated my wife had had to work as a telephone girl just a few years ago to help support us. But my wife hasn't worked in 17 years."

The article in TV Guide was headlined "The Sweet Smell of Mike Connors' Success" and dealt largely with how Mike, after many lean years as an actor, has hit it big as private eye Joe Mannix.

"The article said you earn nearly a million dollars a year as star and part-owner of Mannix' " I said to him. "Was that part correct?"

This made Mike chuckle, but he didn't deny the information. "People come up with their own figures," he said. "Really, though, I don't know why how much I make should interest the public. I do know that I work long hours."

At this point, Connors was summoned for shooting of a scene. I trailed after him and, with maybe 20 or 30 others inside the sound stage, watched as Mike, a boy of about 6 and two other men did a scene set at a table inside a house.

After doing the dialogue once, they were asked to do it again and Mike requested some hotter coffee. A helper was dispatched and soon came back with a hot cup.

MIKE CONNORS . . . gentlemanly private eye

A publicist pointed out to me that a day or two earlier "Mannix" had been shooting in the mountains above Hollywood and that a dummy dumped out of a helicopter had been lost. The publicist also told me that Rip Torn and Eddie (Popeye) Egan, whom I had seen on the sound stage, were guest stars in the episode being filmed for the series this fall.

When Connors finished the scene at the table, we returned to our chairs and he apologized for the interruption.

I told him I understood he is a native of Fresno and mentioned that my wife is from that city.

"Oh, what school did she go to?"

"She went to Roosevelt High School."

"Our arch rival," said Mike.

He was an all-around athlete at Fresno High School, lettering in football, basketball, baseball and track. I asked him what he did in each sport.

"I played end in football, guard in basketball, right field in baseball and was a shot putter in track," he told me.

"The shot put?" I said. "You're not all that big."

"No," he admitted, "but I wasn't very fast either."

After another brief interruption for a retake, we continued talking about his athletic background.

After three years in the Air Force in World War II, Mike went to UCLA on a basketball scholarship — a scout had seen him play in the service.

"I played at UCLA from my freshman through junior years," he said. "Basketball was my only sport in college. I wasn't a high scorer — guards weren't supposed to be — but I was a pretty good rebounder and good defensively.

The players weren't as tall then as they are now. A 6-foot-6 guy was a giant in those days. (Mike stands 6-1½ and weighs about 185.)

"John Wooden came in as coach my junior year, and we went from a slow to a fast-break, running game. I liked it better under the set system."

Mike married his college sweetheart, Mary Lou Wiley, in his senior year and dropped off the basketball squad. They are still married and reside in Encino with their son, Matthew, 13, and daughter, Dana, who turns 12 this month. Matthew was on the sound stage the day of my interview. "He vacillates between wanting to be a stuntman and an actor," Mike said.

Connors stays in shape with a couple of hours of exercise nearly every day in his gymnasium and pool at his home. "I also play golf and tennis and go water skiing when I have the time. We have a home at Lake Arrowhead and go water skiing there.

"Up until a couple of years ago I played a good bit of basketball. We had our own 'Mannix' team. Now I just shoot baskets with my son in the backyard."

"If you hadn't become an actor, do you think you might have liked to be a private detective?" I asked the guy who is going into his sixth season as two-fisted private eye Joe Mannix on the CBS network and earlier (1959-60) played a similar role as Nick Stone in "Tightrope" on TV.

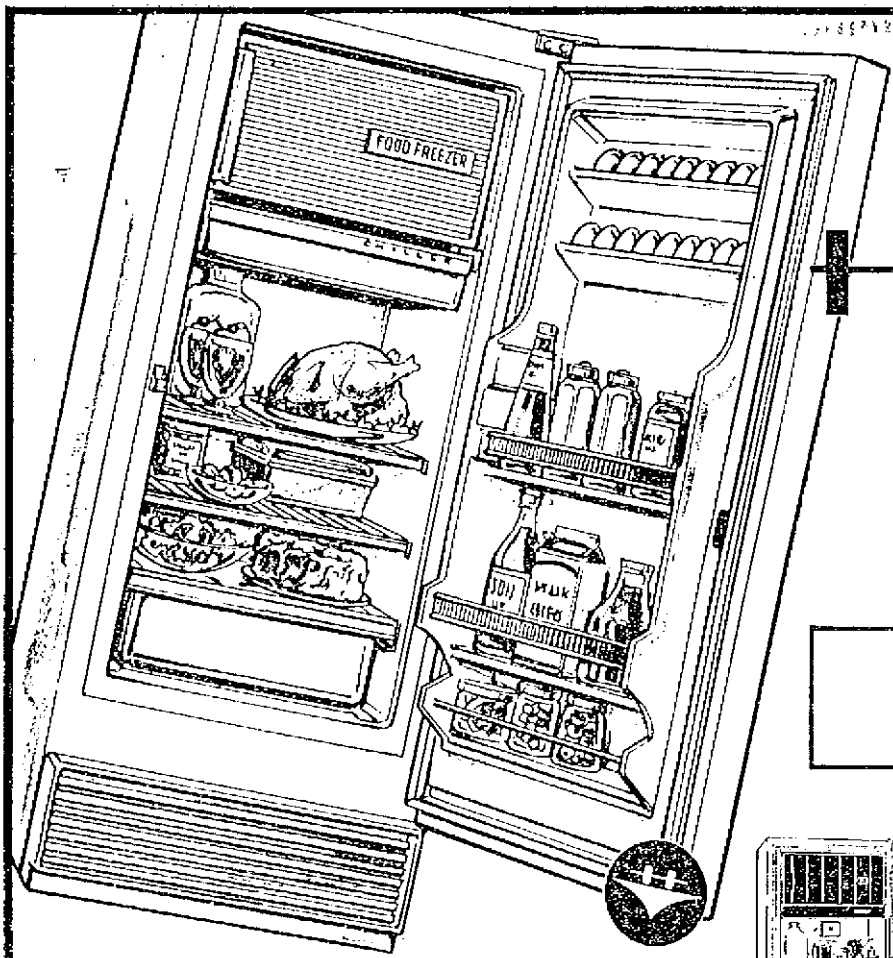

"No, a job as a private eye wouldn't appeal to me. It would be too dull," replied the man who finds plenty of excitement as Mannix. "Most of a private eye's job involves divorce cases and routine stuff, I'm afraid.

"At one time I thought I wanted to be a lawyer, but now I think a lawyer's job would be too dull, too. There's too much paper work and too much of the same thing day after day."

Mike studied law for three years, mostly at night. His father was a lawyer and it's what Mike's mother wanted him to be.

But Mike became interested in drama at UCLA after movie producer William Wellman saw him playing basketball, liked his dark, good looks and suggested he become an actor. He studied theater arts at UCLA and

Stars will salute Oscar Hammerstein

The sound of music, the presence of some of the most distinguished musical and theatrical stars, and the perceptive, powerful lyrics of Oscar Hammerstein II, a man whose songwriting genius has touched a responsive chord in the hearts of people as different as Oklahoma and the South Pacific, blend for an enchanted evening of entertainment in a "Salute to a Cockeyed Optimist: Oscar Hammerstein II" Monday at 10 p.m. on the CBS Television Network (Channel 2).

The special tribute was taped at the University of Southern California during a benefit concert built simply and without extravagant production numbers around the immortal lyrics of Hammerstein, a man who wrote the words of more than 1,000 songs and, in collaboration with such composers as Richard Rodgers, Jerome Kern and Sigmund Romberg, was responsible for more than 40 musicals.

The performers who will salute Hammerstein are, in alphabetical order, Eddie Albert, Desi Arnaz Jr., Milton Berle, Janet Blair, Jean Fenn, Henry Fonda, Larry Hagman, Helen Hayes, Celeste Holm, Gene Kelly and Yaphet Kotto. Also, Burt Lancaster, Johnny Mercer, Ricardo Montalban, Ryan O'Neal, Harve Presnell, John Raitt, Rosalind Russell, Dinah Shore, Robert Stack, Marlo Thomas, Leslie Uggams, Miyoshi Umeki, Ray Walston and Robert Young.

The salute was presented from the stage of the university's Town and Gown Hall by USC Friends of the Libraries, a group of prominent people from the fields of business, industry, government, education and the arts who support the work of the institution's libraries and arrange a program in honor of an outstanding public figure each year. The Motion Picture Relief Fund shared the proceeds of this particular benefit.

Robert Wise, who directed the film version of Rodgers and Hammerstein's "The Sound of Music," was executive producer, and Collier Young and Stanley Musgrove produced for Friends of the Libraries. Charles E. Andrews produced for Paramount Television, and Lou Tedesco directed.

From the opening strains of "Some Enchanted Evening," from the Rodgers-Hammerstein score for "South Pacific," to the finale, Metropolitan Opera singer Jean Fenn's rendition of "Climb Ev'ry Mountain" from "The Sound of Music," the special is alive with some of the most memorable sounds in the life of the musical theater.

Among some 30 Hammerstein classics which are included are "All the Things You Are," recited by Helen Hayes; "Cockeyed Optimist," sung by Dinah Shore; "If I Loved You," sung by John Raitt, re-creating his Broadway role as Billy Bigelow in "Carousel," and a medley from Rodgers and Hammerstein musicals, performed by Raitt, Leslie Uggams, Janet Blair, Johnny Mercer and, at the piano, John Green, the special's music director.

Among the many performers who face the music with pertinent anecdotes about Hammerstein are Burt Lancaster as he prepares to speak the words of "Carefully Taught," Gene Kelly as he introduces Miyoshi Umeki as she appeared in "Flower Drum Song" singing "I Am Going to Like It Here," and Celeste Holm as she recalls the opening night of that musical giant "Oklahoma" in which she first sang "I Cain't Say No," which she reprises on the special.

Other highlights include additional "Oklahoma" selections, a rollicking rendition of "There Is Nothin' Like a Dame," Ricardo Montalban's recitation of "A Puzzlement" from "The King and I" and the introduction of Mrs. Oscar Hammerstein, the guest of honor.

The script was written by Gordon Farr, Arnold Kane and Collier Young.

'Experiment in Red' special to look at Chile

Since World War II, two political models—the capitalist way and the Communist way — have dominated the world. Now, there is an experiment with a possible alternative —the "Chilean way."

An ABC News Inquiry special, "Chile: Experiment in Red," examines the political, economic and social trends in that nation since the election of President Salvador Allende in October 1970, as the first freely elected Marxist head of state in the world.

"Chile: Experiment in Red" will air Monday at 8 p.m. as a presentation in the ABC Television Network's "The Monday Night Special."

The special is hosted and narrated by ABC News correspondent Charles Murphy with ABC News correspondent John Sherman.

The program was written, produced and directed by Arthur Holch, who was executive producer for ABC News' critically and publicly acclaimed "Now" series of television news specials in 1970.

President Salvador Allende, leader of Chile's Socialist Party, came to power as a minority president, and now heads a coalition government. He took office promising sweeping reforms which would move his nation along the road to socialism.

"Chile: Experiment in Red" assesses the successes and failures of President Allende's programs, focusing on the economy, chiefly the copper industry; agriculture; land reform; social services, and the overall political climate of the nation.

Featured on the special is an exclusive interview of President Allende by Elmer W. Lower, president of ABC News, with correspondent Sherman. In that interview, filmed earlier this year in Santiago, President Allende details what he believes to be the differences between Chile and Cuba, the only other Marxist government in the Western Hemisphere.

The ABC News Inquiry offers insights to understanding the people of Chile, vital to the Allende regime.

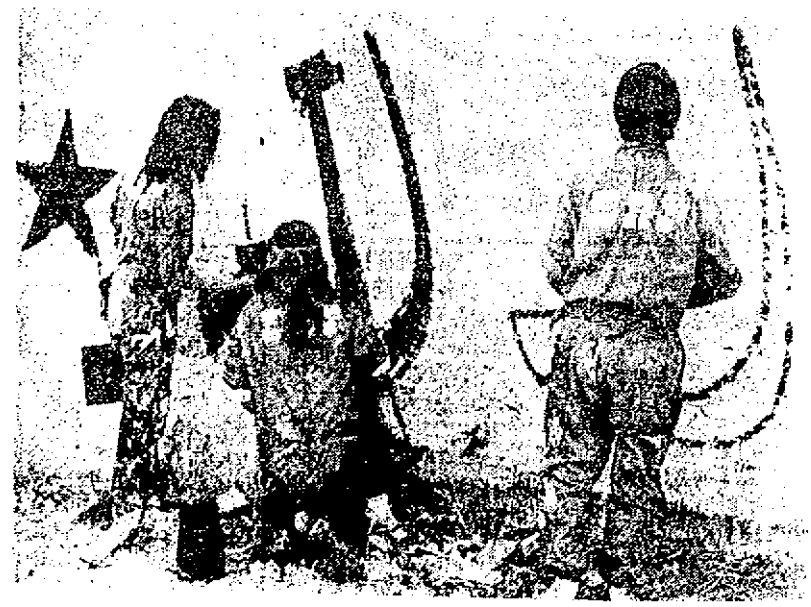

A handsome and independent people, the 10 million Chileans have a long-standing tradition of democracy. Unlike many of its sister states on the South American continent, Chile has had a large and stable middle class. Another tradition has been social welfare, which has, perhaps, made it easier for the Chilean people to accept radical measures such as nationalization of essential industries in the name of social progress.

These characteristics of Chile, along with the special attitudes and folkways of its people, contribute to what constitutes that ephemeral quality, the "Chilean way."

As correspondent Charles Murphy observes on the special, "Allende never promised to make Chile a socialist state. What he said he would do is take it down the road to socialism.

"Well, in a little over a year and a half he has taken it a long way down that road and he has moved bolder and faster than the opposition ever imagined he would. And he has done things the 'Chilean way' as he said he would—generally within the democratic framework."

Correspondent Murphy concludes that the fate of the Allende government "will be of great importance, not just to Chileans and other Latin Americans, but to all people involved in the rivalry between the Marxist and the non-Marxist countries of the world."

YOUNG MEMBERS of the Community Communist Ramona Para Brigade cover the walls of Santiago, Chile, with party slogans and endorsements of political candidates. Scene is from the ABC News Inquiry special, "Chile: Experiment in Red," which will be shown Monday at 8 p.m. on Channel 7.

ERNEST BORGNINE will host the Fourth of July "Great Circus Parade" at the Old Milwaukee Days festivities Tuesday at noon on Channel 28.

Circus parade airs at noon on Fourth of July

KCET will present Milwaukee's colorful July 4th extravaganza, "The Great Circus Parade" featuring veteran actor Ernest Borgnine as host, Tuesday beginning at noon on Channel 28.

A spectacular feat of horsemanship which has not been seen for 60 years will be featured during the special program. Last seen in the 1904 parades of the Barnum and Bailey show, 40 massive draft horses will be driven by one man, Dick Sparrow, as they pull a wagon over the three and a half mile route.

Other attractions in the parade will include 65 historic circus wagons from the Wisconsin State Historical Society's Circus World Museum, 36 marching bands with some groups outfitted in authentic circus costumes, and the nation's only equestrian band which will be making its single annual appearance in the parade.

"The Great Circus Parade" also will include a hippopotamus enjoying a bath in his oversized, tank-equipped cage wagon, plus tigers and other exotic animals. Joining in on the fun will be a hundred clowns, knights in armor, cowboys and Indians, and the patriotic "living tableaux" display.

The special parade broadcast is made possible by a grant from the Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co. and is transmitted nationally by the Public Broadcasting Service.

PAN AND FAN MAIL

Last night (Monday, June 26) at 10 p.m. on KNBC-TV a very important subject to approximately 50,000 Southlanders was excellently presented and narrated by Carl Reiner on hyperkinesis.

I hope that all those parents with a hyperkinetic child in their family watched.

However, many parents could not because they work at night.

Would you please ask your readers to spend 6 cents on a postal card and write to KNBC-TV and ask to have it re-run on the weekend soon and publicized widely so all concerned may learn about this tragic problem.

Thank you.

JUDY STRANGIS of the ABC Television Network's "Room 222" takes a day off from school to celebrate the Fourth of July.

Bob Hope in red, white and blue special on 4th

Stars of the entertainment world and sports figures offer a lively musical-variety hour commemorating Independence Day when the NBC Television Network presents "The Stars and Stripes Show" Tuesday at 9:30 p.m. on Channel 4.

Bob Hope, Anita Bryant, Nancy Wilson and Kenny Rogers and The First Edition head the list of performers appearing at the gala event. Ed McMahon (of NBC-TV's "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson") will emcee the special, originating from the arena of the Oklahoma State Fairgrounds in Oklahoma City.

Some of the sports figures appearing will be ex-Yankee slugger Mickey Mantle, Johnny Unitas of the Baltimore Colts, Roger Staubach of the world champion Dallas Cowboys and Happy Hairston of the world champion Los Angeles Lakers.

Johnny Mann and Stand Up and Cheer open the program singing "America."

Nancy Wilson sings "Strike Up the Band" and her recording hit, "Tonight I Gave the Greatest Performance of My Life." She is followed by Chill Wills, who appears in a dramatic vignette that he wrote himself concerning the effects of war on families.

Kenny Rogers and The First Edition offer "Tell It All Brother" and "When I'm on My Journey."

Bob Hope, backed by Les Brown and his Band of Renown, delivers a monologue in his inimitable style and introduces Anita Bryant, who will sing a medley comprised of "Mighty Clouds," "Joy to the World" and "Put Your Hand in the Hand of the Man From Galilee."

Country singer Mickey Newbury, accompanied by the Strategic Air Command Band, offers "Dixie," "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "All My Trials." All three songs were written more than 100 years ago—in 1853—but retain special significance today. During this sequence, the camera will spotlight each of the many sports figures seated in the audience as a verbal message, pre-recorded by the personality and giving his views about America, is heard. Other sports figures to appear during this segment are Steve Owens and Greg Landry of the Detroit Lions, former Yankee pitcher Allie Reynolds, Bobby Anderson of the Denver Broncos and University of Alabama coach Paul (Bear) Bryant.

The entire group of featured performers will join together on stage to sing Irving Berlin's "This Is a Great Country" as a finale.

In keeping with the program's patriotic theme, all members of the audience will wear red, white and blue—a requisite for admission. The show's performers will also be dressed in patriotic colors.

"The Stars and Stripes Show" is a production of the Oklahoma City Association of Broadcasters.

FAMOUS FOR SERVICE

TV NOTEBOOK

Production of the first of 26 all new hours of "Hee Haw" for the 1972-73 season has been completed at WLAC-TV studios, Nashville.

Buck Owens and Roy Clark will continue to star in the nation's top syndicated series which airs to 206 stations and is 100 per cent sold out to sponsors. Other regulars are Junior Samples, Archie Campbell, Gordie Tapp, Grandpa Jones, Don Harron, Stringbean, Gunilla Hutton, Lisa Todd, Barbi Benton, Cathy Baker, the Hager twins, Beauregard, the Wonder Dog, plus top guest stars like Dizzy Dean, Ray Stevens, Patti Page, Johnny Paycheck, Mel Tillis, Ray Price and Donna Fargo.

Exciting new additions to the "Hee Haw" cast will be Marianne Gordon, Ann Randall and Misty Rowe. The three lovelies will be featured in "Hee Haw" comedy.

"Hee Haw" is distributed by Yongestreet Program Services and co-produced by Sam Lovullo and Bill Davis with Davis also directing. Frank Peppiatt and John Aylesworth are the executive producers of the series seen each week on 206 stations.

AN UNUSUAL program utilizing split-screen communication via satellite between the ABC Television Network's "The Dick Cavett Show" in New York and the BBC's "The Michael Parkinson Show" in London will air on the late-nighter Friday, July 7, at 11:30 p.m.

The two-way circuit via satellite is being coordinated by Western Union International, which provides satellite coverage of the Apollo missions and transmitted coverage of President Nixon's trip to China.

The satellite, Intelsat, is one of four owned by 75 countries. There are two Intelsats located 22,300 miles above the Atlantic Ocean, one above the Pacific, and another over the Indian Ocean.

The delay in live feed from London to New York is six-tenths of a second, enabling Cavett and his guests almost instant communication with Michael Parkinson and his guests.

Intelsat, via intercontinental coordination circuits, will make two-way communication possible between "The Dick Cavett Show" producer, John Gilroy, and director Art Forrest in New York, and their counterparts in London.

The guests and program content for this special show will be announced later.

"THE PAUL LYNDE Show," new ABC Television Network series, began production Monday at Burbank Studios.

Paul Lynde stars in the comedy series as Paul Simms, an attorney in a coastal California community, Ocean Grove. Elizabeth Allen plays his wife, Martha, Jane Actman his 21-year-old daughter Barbara, Pamelyn Ferdin his 14-year-old daughter Sally, and John Calvin his son in-law, Howie Dickerson.

In "Whiz Kid Sizzles as Quiz Fizzles," the first episode before the cameras, Howie is selected as a contestant in a big-money quiz show. Paul, continually frustrated by Howie's encyclopedic mind and ability to do everything superbly—except hold a job—is elated by the prospect of his son-in-law's becoming financially capable of moving out of the Simms household.

"The Paul Lynde Show" is produced for the ABC Television Network by Ashmont Productions in association with Screen Gems. Harry Ackerman is executive producer and William Asher is producer.

The series will air Wednesdays, 8-8:30 p.m. beginning Sept. 13

JO ANN PFLUG and George Pan will guest-star in the "Moonrock" segment of "Probe," starring Hugh O'Brian, to be colorcast on the NBC Television Network this fall on Wednesdays from 10 to 11 p.m., starting Sept. 13.

Leslie Stevens, executive producer creator of the series, wrote the drama. William Wiard is the director and Robert Justman the producer

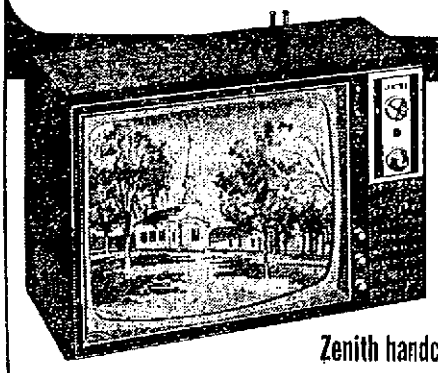

O'Brian stars in at least half the shows on on every-other-week basis, with Tony Franciosa and Doug McClure starring separately the rest of the time. The series also stars Burgess Meredith as head of Probe Control, and Angel Tompkins on a recurring basis.

The series deals with the worldwide activities of private eyes whose actions are electronically monitored by a mission control center.

SARAH KENNEDY . . joins 'Laugh-In'

INSIDE THE TUBE

Last laugh's on Sarah's dad

By BILL MAHAN

Blonde, blue-eyed and baby-voiced, Sarah Kennedy looks and sounds so much like Goldie Hawn that a director for a commercial recently told her, "Do it like Goldie."

She replied, "I'll do it like Sarah Kennedy and if you don't like it, I'll try." She didn't have to bother and in a very short time has succeeded in doing what is almost impossible in Hollywood. She's hit the big time in television and promises to be an outstanding asset as a regular on "Laugh-In" when it airs again in mid-September.

Born and raised in Coquille, Ore., Sarah knew she wanted to be an actress from the age of 5. Her parents laughed it off, assuming she'd grow out of the idea, but, as the years passed, she didn't.

Her father, a model of convention and a successful doctor in the small town of Coquille, started showing the usual worried, nervous signs of any interested parent. "Honey," he said to her one afternoon, "you're a very talented person but you're just a little girl from Oregon. There's a big world out there. Don't pursue something as risky as acting. You should get married and settle down."

Apparently Sarah didn't agree and one day about 6:30 in the evening the Kennedy telephone rang. Dr. Kennedy picked up the receiver and heard his daughter on the other end of the line. "Hi, dad, what are you and mom doing?" she asked.

"Well," Dr. Kennedy replied. "Mary Margaret and I are having our usual 6:30 martini."

"Oh, that's great," Sarah said, knowing perfectly well that that's what they'd be doing. "Guess where I am?"

Suspecting nothing out of the ordinary, Dr. Kennedy answered, "Well, I'd guess you were probably over at your boyfriend's studying."

"No Dad, are you sitting down?"

"No, I'm standing at the kitchen phone."

"Well, why don't you sit down."

"All right," Dr. Kennedy said. "I'm sitting."

"I'm in New York, dad."

The phone was silent for a moment and then Dr. Kennedy said, "That's nice. That's very interesting. Uh, what are you doing in New York?"

"Dad, I've told you all my life that I wanted to be an actress. I don't want to settle down and marry my boyfriend and have kids. Not yet anyway. I've saved some money and I got here on my own. Dad, I'm going to make it."

In a sad voice her dad answered: "Sarah, you're trying to escape reality."

"Dad, I'm escaping reality to save myself."

Whether or not Sarah Kennedy has escaped, no one yet knows. But she has defied convention and she has made it as an actress. No one can stay a little girl forever.

TV's 'Mannix,' Mike Connors, is quite a man

eventually he dropped his law studies and made up his mind he'd be an actor.

"Do you think you got by more on your looks or your acting ability in your early years?" I asked.

"Certainly not on my looks," replied the heart throb of thousands of TV viewers. "I was considered unphotogenic. But not on my acting, either. It was mainly my determination. I just kept batting my head against the wall. Eventually, after a certain length of time, you manage to learn — and eventually you also get some breaks."

I asked him what gave him the idea he was unphotogenic.

His reply: "Because after I took my first screen tests, they came right out and told me I was unphotogenic."

Then he added: "At first I played a lot of heavies, villains, characters. The Tyrone Power sort of good looks for a hero hadn't gone out of style. Then, I think a certain amount of maturity brings out extra appeal in a male sort of way. With more maturity, you pick up a kind of rugged attractiveness. And as you get more established, they take more care in the lighting and in photographing you. At first they don't take enough care."

Connors made his movie debut in a Joan Crawford movie, "Sudden Fear." ("I played a young attorney, and there was some indication of a romance with Gloria Grahame.") He had minor roles in several other films, but got his big break as star of the TV series "Tightrope" in 1959-60. Before that, he had had to augment his income for years in such jobs as door-to-door salesman and as an installer of lawn sprinklers.

After "Tightrope" went off the air, Connors co-starred in such movies as "Good Neighbor Sam" with Jack Lemmon and Romy Schneider, "Where Love Has Gone" with Bette Davis and Susan Hayward, "Harlow" with Carroll Baker and "Kiss the Girls and Make Them Die" with Bing Crosby and Ann-Margret. Then came "Mannix" in 1967.

Connors is of Armenian descent and was born Kreker Ohanian. He has said he is sorry he ever changed his name. His father, who was from the old country, died when Mike was 18. His mother, two sisters and brother still live in Fresno and Mike has financial interests there ("I have some apartments and am putting up an office building").

He said his brother teaches at a school for the handicapped. One sister is married to an attorney and the other one was married to a rancher, who died.

Mike was a good friend of song-writer Ross Bagdasarian of Fresno, who died unexpectedly several months ago, and he knows William Saroyan fairly well. "He was a friend of my father — and they used to play cards together. There was never a dull moment around him.")

I asked Mike if he considers it a bit unusual for a Hollywood star to remain married to the same wife as long as he has been wed to Mary Lou — more than 20 years.

"It's unusual anyplace in the world," he answered. "In fact, it's kind of unusual even to get married these days. But I was lucky. I hit the jackpot the first time out."

I would have enjoyed talking with Connors longer, but it was time for him to go before the cameras again and I thanked him and said I'd be leaving.

"You're sure you've got enough?" he asked.

As we were walking toward the set, he told me: "You know, I'd like to shoot on the Queen Mary one of these days."

Mike, you would add class even to Her Majesty.

The BIBLE Says

Question: "Will everyone be saved?"

No, not everyone will be saved. Jesus warned, "Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and MANY there be which go in thereat: Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and FEW there be that find it" (Matt. 7:13-14). If words have meaning, these words of Christ mean MOST people will be lost.

On another occasion Jesus was asked, "Lord, are there few that be saved? (Luke 13:23). Jesus answered that inquiry by warning, "Strive to enter in at the strait gate: for MANY, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able" (Luke 13:24).

As much as we might like to believe otherwise, the idea that everybody will be saved is not taught in the Bible. Though God desires that all be saved (1 Tim. 2:4; 2 Pet. 3:9), nevertheless, the Bible's warnings about the great number who will be lost are not empty warnings. There is no indication in all the Bible that God will reverse His word and save those who disregarded His law and despised His word.

It is the individual duty of everyone to search the Scriptures and learn what must be done to be saved by God's grace.

Arrangements have been made for a public debate between a preacher of the Studebaker Road Church of Christ and a local Presbyterian preacher. The subjects to be discussed are (1) the validity of baptizing infants, and (2) the validity of sprinkling for baptism. Exact dates for the debate will be announced in this column.

Audrey Totter Returning in role as nurse

Audrey Totter has been signed by executive producer Frank Glicksman for the recurring role of Nurse Wilcox in MGM-TV's "Medical Center," starring Chad Everett and James Daly.

Miss Totter left MGM 20 years ago for semiretirement from acting. The actress, a native of Joliet, Ill., is probably best remembered for her performance in "The Lady in the Lake" movie.

DON MITCHELL, co-star of NBC-TV's "Ironside" series, was relatively close-cropped back in the fall of 1967 when he first played the role of Ironside's aide, Mark Sanger. As the seasons rolled along, Mitchell's sideburns grew longer and a modified "Afro" became the look. In the fall of 1972, when "Ironside" will kick off its sixth season, Mitchell will sport not only longer hair but a flourishing mustache.

Hugh Hefner . . . never has problems with his girls.

Cindy Birdsong (left) . . . has already sung her swan song.

Winston Churchill . . . ordered out the troops.

By HY GARDNER

Q: They say that when Elizabeth Taylor travels, she totes along half a dozen boxes containing her fabulous jewels. Is this a fact? — Mrs. Wills R., Houston.

A: Not only baubles. But beans. According to her famous jet-set hairdresser, Alexandre of Paris. It's the chief ingredient in Liz's favorite French dish, cassoulet.

Q: With all the public appearances Hubert Humphrey has made, as Senator, as Vice President and as Presidential candidate, how come no nut has ever taken a pot shot at him? — Frank Dugan, Seattle.

A: Some would-be assassin did try it. Back in 1947, when Mr. Humphrey was mayor of Minneapolis. Fortunately the gunman's aim was bad and Hubert escaped injury.

Q: As the first magazine to publish nude photos of famous female stars, did Playboy have much trouble getting them to agree? — Ms Maxine R., Des Moines.

A: "We never have problems with the actresses," observes Hugh Hefner. "Our magazine is such a vehicle of publicity. First, they pose naked and use that publicity. Then they express their indignation. But never reach the point of taking legal action!"

Q: Is TV newsman Roger Mudd related to the Dr. Samuel Mudd — who unknowingly set the broken leg of Lincoln assassin John Wilkes Booth? — J. Blackman, Pittsburgh.

A: Yes. The newscaster is one of some 280 living descendants of the humane country doctor. Who, even today, are actively trying to clear their forebear's honor. (A sidelight: the disparaging toast, "Here's mud in your eye," stems from the Dr. Mudd incident).

Q: Is Cindy Birdsong leaving the Supremes to go on her own like Diana Ross did? If so, who's taking her place? — Terry, Lil, Grace and Iola (Supreme fans in Washington, D.C.)

A: After five years with the Supremes, Cindy has already sung her swan song. Retired from showbusiness, from now on Cindy's birdsongs will be heard only by her husband Charles Hewlett and her soon-to-be-born baby. Her successor is Philadelphia gospel singer Lynda Laurence.

Q: In a recent issue of "W" (Women's Wear Daily edited for the Consumer), Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., was referred to several times as "a lady killer." In view of the murder of his twin daughter, wasn't this in bad taste? — Lillian C., San Antonio.

A: Though the Percys probably winced when they read that tasteless phrase, I'm sure the irony of the wordage escaped the editors.

Q: As a man of strong convictions, I wonder — how did Winston Churchill handle strikes? — L. M. deN., Denver.

A: In 1910, as Home Secretary, he twice ordered the troops out to break strikes.

Wells Report

TRADITION, It's a Fine, Old

One of the things that used to make the reading of college newspapers fun was that every October each of these student publications would carry an interview with the homecoming chairman about his plans for that event.

In the course of that interview, the chairman would let the reporter in on a secret. "This year," he would announce, "we're going to start a new tradition."

Nowadays student homecoming chairmen don't seem to worry as much about tradition, probably because students in general no longer work up much enthusiasm for homecoming. But most Americans seem to have a special fondness for traditions, perhaps because they have so few. In fact, judging from the literature on the subject, it may be a misdemeanor to use the word "tradition" without preceding it with the adjectives, "fine, old."

It is therefore a pleasure to report that this Independence Day, a fine old Alamitos Bay Peninsula tradition will be continued in the immediate area of 64th Place. It will not be quite the same because Phil Poppler, the man who originated it, the Grand Marshal in Residence, is no longer with us. But those of us who remain will try to pick up the torch.

The first Annual Fourth of July Parade and Patriotic Reading was held some 15 years ago in a modest way. Since that time it has grown and prospered. It has managed to avoid some of the pitfalls that have plagued other, more ambitious civic extravaganzas. No one has moved it to Miami or Tokyo. Although a goodly portion of it takes place on tidelands, it has never been investigated by the State Legislature. Nor has it ever asked for a cent in subsidy from the City Council.

Phil, a Long Beach attorney who died a few weeks ago, originally organized the event to teach his children the meaning of Independence Day. Phil was a prairie populist from North Dakota with strong beliefs in the U.S. Marine Corps, the Bill of Rights, and the duty of every citizen to speak his conscience.

It bothered him that his children thought of the Glorious Fourth only as a day for picnics and frolics. So typically, he did something about it. He assembled his kids in his patio, and in his best courtroom voice read them the Declaration of Independence. Then they formed up and paraded the American Flag for a few blocks down Seaside Walk. Then they came back to the house for hotdogs and lemonade.

It left some of the adults sunning themselves on the beach slightly gap-jawed, but the neighborhood kids thought it was great. They petitioned to participate. The adult neighbors after their initial shock became enthusiastic, too, and joined in. People outside the Peninsula started coming. And so it grew.

The paraders grew too numerous for the Poppler patio, so they formed on 64th Place. Reading of the Declaration was augmented with patriotic recordings. The route of march was extended down Seaside, across Ocean Boulevard, and up the beach and Bayshore to Chrisman's Galley, where Phil bought ice cream cones for everyone.

Phil led the parade in a pith helmet and bush jacket somewhat resembling Teddy Roosevelt's Spanish-American War uniform. Others came in varying costumes, depending on the mood of the moment. If you were an Arab, or felt like an Arab you might come in a burnoose. If you didn't have a costume, Phil had a large supply of spare hats ranging from the British helmet to a Gen. Stillwell campaign bonnet.

In the tradition of the Bill of Rights, signs were carried. The slogan depended on you. If you were a dove, your sign could read "Get Out Now." If you were a hawk, you might proclaim, "Victory in Vietnam." I remember the burnoosed Arab carrying a sign reading, "Make the World Safe for Harems."

Field music was added. You didn't have to be able to play good, but you had to play loud. Buglers played "Semper Fidelis." Marchers with more sophisticated instruments preferred the "Marine Corps Hymn," or the "Mickey Mouse Marching Song."

One year the Reactivated Stonewall Jackson Brigade and Naval Auxiliary brought its red-wheeled cannon, and after the parade pulled it up on the beach and fired it in honor of the Glorious Fourth.

Neighborhood teenagers, who had participated in the parade in its early days, grew up, got married and brought their children back to the event. When Phil died unexpectedly after a brief illness, the neighborhood began to wonder about the future of their celebration.

Some of us who were friends of Phil think the best tribute we could pay to him is to keep his Independence Day Parade alive. So this year we'll be back on 64th Place ready to march. God Bless Old Glory and the United States of America. □

Ernest Miller Hemingway's fantastically exciting life led to a shotgun suicide in Idaho on July 2, 1961, exactly 11 years ago today.

He was writing the "Big Book" which, according to some, caused his final depression. The title was, "The Island and the Stream," and he knew it was awful. However, in spite of this, his wife, Mary, published it two years ago.

In this article, writer Bill Barry recounts Hemingway's viable and prolific Key West days. Writer Barry feels the last book was nowhere the fine storytelling Hemingway did during the time he lived in Florida and Cuba.

Barry says of this article: "I don't mind letting people know about the good stuff he did, just in case they missed it and might wonder what all the fuss was about a writer of the caliber no better than "Island and the Stream" portrays."

the ways of HEMINGWAY
..his key west days..

Somebody told him that Key West was a good place to get away from the phony New York crowd.

He thought it was a helluva long way to go, but he had to finish up "Farewell to Arms."

So, he and Pauline went. They took a small apartment above the Ford agency. One day, the writing was going badly and he stormed out, going up to the bridge north of town to fish.

He was hanging a line over from a cane pole, when a guy came up and said if he really wanted to do some fishing, he ought to go down to the hardware-store by the old icehouse and talk to Charley Thompson.

So, he did.

Charley and he hit it right off.

Charley said: "Well, I don't know, maybe you'd like to try your hand at the big ones."

"Yes," he said.

"Okay," Charley said. "When do you want to go, tonight?"

"That's fine."

So, they went.

After that, he didn't do as much work as he should have, but he learned a lot, tracking down the big ones in Charley's 19-footer — the valor of big fighting fish, the beauty of them, the touch of man in them. And later, he used it all in his writing and in his fishing.

That first winter he and Pauline only stayed a month. It was 1928. In the beginning, he hadn't expected to come back. But he did. The next year, Charley Thompson's wife, Lorine, got them Gallagher's place over on South Street. He kept whining that it was too small, the walls kept bumping into him.

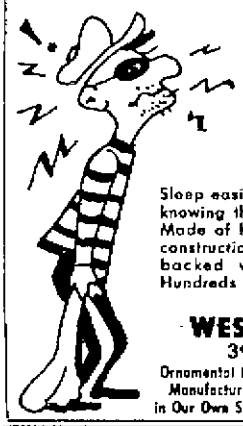

So, Lorine got them a place on Garrison Bight. After that they had Fanny Curry's house.

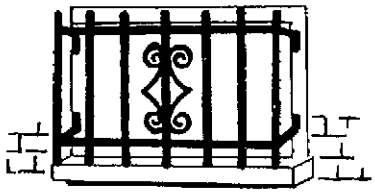

By then he was hooked real good so he figured, what the hell, and he bought Asa Tift's big place over on Whitehead Street. It was the first home he had ever bought, and even though "Farewell" was selling pretty good, he complained over and over that he was broke again.

HEMINGWAY

Hemingway with fourth wife, "Miss Mary"

Pauline knew what it really was.

When he had Hadley (his first wife), poverty was part of the romance. They had gone places and seen things and they had adventure and love. Hadley was Paris, and skiing in Germany, and hiking in Switzerland, and fishing in Spain. They never had money.

But he was always fighting with Pauline about money. She was a Pfeiffer — Hudnut perfumes, the Piggott Cotton Gin Co., miles of Arkansas bottomland — and it hurt him in his vanity to know that her money was their crutch.

THE WEATHER turned cold, coming in on the north winds, so he stayed upstairs in bed all day, writing in longhand, with a wool stocking cap pulled down over his ears, which made him look like a giant troll who had stolen Clark Gable's face.

In the evenings, he got to nagging Pauline about what a wreck the house was. Why didn't she fix it up?

She told him you had to live in a house like that for a while before you started fixing it up, because if you started fixing too soon, before you knew exactly how you wanted it to be, you'd get it all done and then you'd see where you had made the mistakes, too late, and it would be ruined.

That he understood, because that was just like the stories — you had to know exactly what the story was before you started writing it, otherwise you'd get to the end and discover that you had made a very bad mistake.

The house was a big, airy, double-story, Spanish-Conch hacienda, and a good place to work. The writing was going pretty good, it excited him and kept his interest. He started early, about 7:30, and wrote himself warm. If it was going real good, he wouldn't even break off for lunch, but kept going till four, making sure that he knew precisely what was going to happen next in the story.

At four, there was still plenty of daylight left, so he and Charley would head out to the Gulf Stream in the boat, or he'd run Pauline ragged on the tennis court. Sometimes he'd let Lorine take him for a drive.

It was Lorine who figured out that he never stopped working — he was always looking for more stories, frightened that the account in his mental bank would run out. At first, the Conchs thought he was nuts, he'd get to bristling intense about people and what they did. And when he really got wound up in a conversation or event, you either got dragged along in the fierce tide of his emotion, or you quit and bolted away because you just couldn't stand it anymore.

One day, he was driving Lorine along the old ribbon highway that ran between the Gulf of Mexico and the sea. Abruptly, a great gray crane flew up from the marsh and swooped across the road in front of them.

"Grab the wheel!" Hemingway shouted, and dove for his shotgun in the back seat.

"What are you doing?" she screamed, and grabbed the wheel.

"I'll get that bird if he'll only come back again."

"You're crazy!"

"Drive, dammit!"

The car was careening all over the road. He had the shotgun ready. Lorine was terrified, trying to steer with him between her and the wheel, and his foot had stomped on the gas pedal. And the burning look on his face ... she was sure it was not just the need to kill, not cruelty or bloodlust, but the beauty of the bird. He couldn't stand the beauty unless he could partake of it, and the only way he could partake of the beauty was to kill the bird.

She was screaming that this was crazy; they'd be killed, not the crane. And pretty soon he realized the bird was not coming back, and so they were all three saved.

HE FINISHED, "Death in The Afternoon," and the money was coming in. That made the writing easier, because if you had to worry, especially about money, whatever you had to put into the writing was used up and wasted on the worry.

Mostly, he stayed away from the bottle when he was working — drinking blunted the perceptions, made you sloppy, piled fat around the soul so that you had to start all over again and write yourself back into shape, like a prize fighter works to get back into shape. He felt guilty if he didn't do his work first, earn the drinks and good times of the night. The work was always first. It came before Pauline, the boys, fishing, friends, boozing, everything. The work was his duty as a man. A good day was 750 words. A bad day was 320.

There was hell to pay on the bad days. So everybody hid from him when they heard him cursing in rage up in the carriage house loft.

In 1933, he published, "Winner Take Nothing."

And the New York crowd caught up to him in Key West.

The ones he liked he took fishing and drinking. Dos Passos, McLeish, Waldo Pierce, Mike Strater. He liked Sidney Franklin, the Booklyn bullfighter. He treated Max Perkins like a saint, so quiet and deep and gentle. He flattened men for even looking tough at Max.

Charley Thompson and he took his true friends to Cuba and the Tortugas and Bimini. He taught them how to stand a storm-whipped deck and kill sharks with hunting rifles. He hated sharks, spoilers, dull and stupid. He had a fence around the house now, and he said sharks were like a lot of the people who came to his gate, spoiling his concentration while he was trying to work.

After "Winner," the writing was not going well, so he figured it would be better to just chop it off and go fishing. It was bad to force the writing. But he'd had too much fishing, too. So he asked Charley, how'd he like to go hunting? Sure, Charley said.

"All right," he said, "let's go to Africa."

They did.

When they returned to Key West, Hemingway started "Green Hills Of Africa." Charley was the guy in the book who kept shooting the best trophies. Hemingway was the other guy who kept blowing his stack because he figured he could outshoot, out-run, out-fight, out-anything the other guy did, but here was the other guy always getting the best of him.

It was not his best writing and he blamed Pauline for not keeping people away from him. She was a nervous wreck.

Pauline had worked like a Gandy Dancer on the swimming pool. It was the first in Key West and nobody really knew how to do it. But he wanted one, so he could go right from the work to the water. She built it next to the carriage house, 62 feet long, with an elaborate system of wells to keep it full of clear and clean saltwater, never brackish.

When it was finished, he pretended he was mad, hollering that Pauline had cost him his last penny again. He dug a penny out of his pocket and threw it down on the wet patio cement where it stayed, heads up, dried into the cement.

By then people were saying Pauline was crazy to put up with him — he never did a lick of work around the house and was a skirt chaser, as well. Pauline and Lorine were talking about it in the house one day when he was off on another binge. They heard the oddly light tap-tap of his feet on the porch, the house curiously shaking beneath that light-stepping walk.

They went out and followed him around to the back. He was hauling a long white urinal on his back, and he put it down flat beneath the banyan trees.

"I yanked it off the wall at Joe's," he said, and started up to his loft. "It'll look nice full of water lilies."

So, Pauline filled it with water lilies, and a couple days later Lorine's big hound dog got into them and tore them all up. Hemingway heard the racket and came out of the loft, saw the dog and began bellowing for his shotgun, roaring that he'd shoot the hell out of that unprintable, unspeakable obscenity mutt.

Lorine got the dog into her car and tore away. An hour later, she returned and quietly replanted the urinal full of water lilies. Then she called him out of his sanctum and cussed him up and down for a selfish, arrogant, pig-headed, boorish bully.

He stood on his balcony, smiling calmly and gently down on her, until she was finished. Then he said: "Why you don't think I would have really shot your dog, do you?"

"You'd have had to shoot me first, or I'd have shot you, you big overgrown unprintable, unspeakable obscenity bastard!"

He now was working on stories for, "The Forty Nine." And Esquire was paying him to write anything he wanted. More and more people were coming around, bothering him — writers, kooks, fight people, theater types. So he wrote in Esquire that he had become Stop No. 18 in the list of 48 sights for tourists to see in historic old Key West.

And he published "Snows Of Kilimanjaro." It was about a dying writer, who bitterly accuses his rich wife of bleeding him dry of his art and devotion and purpose. People said the wife in the story was Pauline, and the writer was himself, Hemingway being Harry Street.

After "The Short Happy Life of Francis Macomber," Martha Gellhorn came down to interview him for Colliers. Pretty soon, he packed off for the war in Saipan. Martha went too. Later, he broke with her, and returned home.

He started a new book and it went very well.

For years, Pauline had tried to understand. He told her that he needed the other people for his work — to go with them, squeeze them dry, but then he was through with them. She had accepted his trips to war and Africa and fishing, and she worked hard to make the house comfortable for him so he could work well and in peace when he returned.

But now, she said, she couldn't put up with the women anymore. Lorine begged her to reconsider. A lot of men were like that, but there was only one Hemingway. No use, Pauline said, it's over. He was big, but Pauline was too strong for him. They had it out in Wyoming and when they returned, he crossed the Straits and took the house in Cuba.

The fishing was better, he said, and the Jai Alai was there, and the refugees from the Spanish war. Mostly, he said, he was sick and tired of people bugging him in Key West.

Martha joned him in Cuba and her story was published in October of 1940, a few days before Pauline divorced him. The book was called, "For Whom The Bell Tolls." He married Martha, but it didn't last. Afterwards, he married Mary.

After Pauline died, he returned to the Key West house only rarely, and seldom to work. He had aged quickly and people said the great well within him had dried up. But it hadn't. He took to writing standing up, because he suffered from hemorrhoids.

"Across The River And Into The Trees," was a bust. But, "The Old Man And The Sea," was not. It won the Nobel Prize. But people knew the prize was really for stuff he had written during the Key West days — not before, and not after, had he ever been so true to his talent.

The Cuba house was big and open and he could see the fine hills from it, and also the lights and harbor of Havana. He worked and fished, but something had changed in him. He did not do the good work anymore. His son, Greg, said there were too many phonies around him, talking smart-set talk. He had always liked his language clean, like in the stories. But he started talking smart-set talk.

In 1960, Fidel Castro entered The Hemingway Fishing Tournament. He commandeered the three fastest boats and the three best captains, and took off out of sight. When Castro returned to the docks, the three biggest fish were stretched out on his boat. No one dared question who caught them, or how.

Castro was the winner. He started speechifying, so Hemingway wandered down the dock to the Pilar and went to sleep below decks. Toby had to come and wake him up.

"You have to give him the trophy," Toby said.

"Why should I?"

"You promised."

He shrugged and went up and stood in the sun another hour and a half, while Castro raved on. Then he presented Castro the trophy and headed straight for the car.

All he said was: "That man sure does like to talk a lot."

But, immediately, he began to pack his guns and fishing rods and manuscripts, all the things he wanted to keep and within the month, he crossed over to Key West on the ferry with all his belongings.

He went straight to Spain. He was working on a small reminisence, and The Big Book. One night, he failed to show at a dinner being held in his honor. The newspapers reported that he had been stricken by a series of severe heart attacks. He turned up at the Mayo Clinic, weighing 270 pounds. The doctors trimmed him to 190 and said he'd be all right.

Lorine and Charley were waiting for him at the house, after he got out of the hospital. As soon as she heard his steps on the porch, Lorine knew that something very bad had happened to him.

He came in, shuffling, and he couldn't see things. Although he had never before shown emotion, he threw his arms around Charley and repeated, "Good ole Charley. Good ole Charley . . ." He looked like he was going to cry.

He stayed locked up in the carriage house loft for two weeks. He was working on The Big Book, he said. Pretty soon, he went back to Idaho. And the The Big Book never got finished. Its title was: "The Island and the Stream."

Afterwards, people said he had been grieving for a long time. He couldn't remember things. He always said if you didn't have it up there, you didn't have it, period. The writing was going very badly, and he was afraid that he had lost his strength and vitality as a man.

He didn't believe that a man should wait until his courage was gone too. A man should be brave and true. Especially true. A man should do what he has to do, when it comes time to do it.

Life was going badly, and he didn't want to force it, so he figured it would be better to just chop it off and leave it.

And that is what he did with the shotgun up in Idaho, tolling the bell, finally, for himself... ☐

BACKPACKING

By Bob Sanders

While you are reading this, the massive onslaught on California's wilderness will have begun.

Tens of thousands of work-a-day people will be taking off — this weekend or next or the one after — in search of a wilderness experience.

Some will be looking for serenity, peace, majestic scenery or just plain fresh air. Others will be getting away from telephones and traffic, ringing bells and flashinglights and all the appurtenances of civilized life.

Most will return safe, if not exactly sound in mind and body.

With most of the places you can car camp becoming more and more crowded with people who are trying to get away from people, more and more people, young and old, mate and "Ms," are turning toward the ancient art of backpacking.

The Indians started it all with a leather bag of parched corn and a good set of moccasins, but, like Baroque architecture and other things, it has changed since those times.

Today's backpacker's gullet is not used to parched corn and his feet are so tender that, if he tried the moccasins, his feet — by the end of the first day — would resemble the hamburger his gullet is used to.

I have been backpacking, off and on, in and out and sometimes sideways, for more than a decade and, although I'm not an expert, I have picked up a tidy bit of knowledge about the subject — and some very strong opinions.

Most beginners get taken twice: once, before they hit the trail, by the equipment they are talked into buying (usually by the guy who was selling socks last week) and, second, after the trail hits them because of poor techniques used in assaulting the wilds.

First off, an axiom:

There are three basic things the backpacker must have, and it pays to shop well for them. None needs to be expensive, although if you have some money to spend, two deserve it more than anything else you will buy.

Incidentally, the real place to shop for backpacking equipment, along with all other camping equipment, is out on the trail. When you stop to chat with another hiker, take a look at his equipment and ask him about it. He'll be happy to tell you (usually to your eventual boredom). He'll tell you (while the salesman won't) how the damn stuff worked and what he doesn't like about it.

The first thing you need, of course, is a pack — an expensive item. Try to buy a good one and, more important, one that fits you. Try a lot of them on — with weight in them.

About 20 years ago a guy in Glendale came out with a revolutionary pack frame and bag, which was — and still is — expensive but worth it. Today there are dozens of good imitations that work well if they fit.

If you're going to spend money, spend it here.

The second thing you need is a sleeping bag, also an expensive item.

Every backpacker wants (and eventualy gets) a down-filled mummy bag. They are costly (the down itself runs about $16 a pound and up).

But for a beginner, unless you are planning winter camping or being at very high altitudes (10,000 feet or higher) in summer, you don't really have to have one.

A good — that means sturdy — polyester sleeping bag, most of which are rectangular, will do very well for most beginning backpacker's trips. Try it, then examine and ask owners about the down bags you see along the trail.

The third thing, of course, is boots.

Hiking boots come in a weltering of sizes, shapes, colors, materials, lacings, buckles and, yes, soles. And, of course, they can cost. Forget it for your first trip.

Go down to a local department/discount store and buy yourself a good sturdy pair of workboots. The six-inch height is best, although some people, particularly those stern hardy-looking Ms types who posed on mountaintops in the 1920s, prefer the eight or even the ten-inch heights.

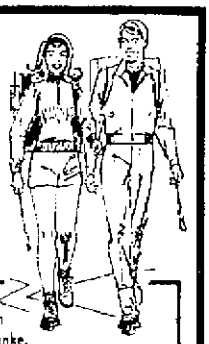

The main thing about the boot is that it is strongly made and that it fits. Take along the two pairs of socks you're going to wear when you hike and try the boots on with them.

Walk a little bit and notice whether your heel rides up and down. If it does, don't. Be sure the laces don't pull the sides of the boot across the tongue too close. When you walk down a steep grade the only way you can keep your toes from butting the end of the boot is by lacing the tops tighter. If the leather comes together, you can't lace them ught enough. I have a pair right now that demonstrates this and have lost at least three sets of toenails to them.

If your boots feel snug, but not tight, and your toes and heels don't ride in them, they are probably all right.

Those are the items that, if you have any money to spend, you spend it on. The rest of it is "gadgetry."

Although there are perennial arguments about stoves, you can make up your mind later about whether propane is better than white gas, etc.

For your first trip, just take a wax milk carton full of charcoal briquets for each meal. Total cost about 15 cents. (Of course, if you're going for a week or two, you may need a mule to carry them all because they are bulky. But I'm talking about a weekend, which is what your first trip should be anyway).

When you get ready to cook, you dump the charcoal out, tear the carton into little (about the size of a silver dollar if you're old enough to have seen one) pieces, fold them once and pile them up. Stack the briquets around on top of the pile of milk carton pieces and light them (the milk carton pieces, of course).

Fifteen minutes later you spread the briquets out on the ground and they will form an eight-inch by eight-inch square which will last from forty minutes to an hour — long enough to cook your one-pot meal and warm water for coffee and dishwashing.

If you go for a weekend the first few times, (recommended) you should be able to check the weather and know whether there is a major storm in the area. If there is, don't go. Most of the late afternoon showers in the Sierra can be weathered with a pair of tarps in a sheltered place.

The same goes for rain gear. Carry a waterproof poncho (which you an buy for about $2) and, if the rains come, stop. It is very difficult (and sometimes downright impossible) to hike in heavy rain. In light rain you just get wet. You'll dry out. Just don't let our sleeping bag get wet.

There are all kinds of pots and pans on the market and most of them don't cost much. However, if you really want to save, a set of nesting pots can be made out of tin cans with homemade wooden tops that just set on the top. I've used tobacco cans because they come with metal tops.

As for clothing, the first few times you go out you will want to be in style in something that looks nice. Later on, you will throw this stuff away and settle for work shirt and blue jeans. The light blue, long-sleeved workshirt with long tails and buttons on the pockets are great. Old-style (farmer type) jeans are fine, but the new bell bottoms are all right, too. The idea is to be comfortable in something that will take a little wear (sitting on rocks is hard on seats of pants, too).

Hats come in all styles, sizes and prices. Just get one with a wide, floppy brim that will keep the sun out of your eyes and will hold up in the pack when you don't want to wear it. Straw is good and so is the old cowboy style.

For warmth a cheap nylon parka is very handy for an outer garment. For underneath, a variety of sweater, shirts and underwear are bulky but warm. If you can afford (ouch on the pocketbook ...) down jackets, they're great.

There's an old Arctic saying (used by our armed forces up there) that keeping warm in cold weather depends on "layers and space" so that several warm sweaters are warmer than one thick one, particularly if your outer cover is air (wind) proof. Buy 'em all large. You don't want anything that's tight.

Now for techniques.

First off, there is a list (made up of the experience of thousands of expert backpackers) of items that none should go off in the wilderness without.

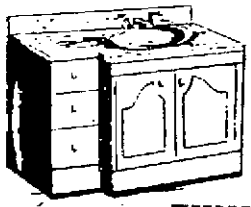

They are known, simply enough, as the "Ten Essentials." Don't ask why. Just take them and hope you never find out why.

They are: (1) map (topographical); (2) compass; (3) flashlight; (4) extra clothing; (5) extra food; (6) sunglasses; (7) waterproof matches; (8) candle (stubs for starting fires — in rain?); (9) pocketknife; (10) first aid kit.

These are, of course for use in emergencies. Some of them, like the pocketknife and the flashlight you will use on every overnight trip. Others, like the first aid kit and the candles you may never use.

There's an eleventh essential that most beginners don't take with them either. That's a body that's ready for the rigors it is going to be subjected to. The best assurance of a pleasant, rewarding trip to the wilderness is to be in good physical condition.

There is an axiom that nothing will put you in shape for backpacking like backpacking. Very true. But any exercise you can get, particularly for your legs, helps when you get up the trail.

Jogging is great. So is running. And just walking if you do it fast enough. Walking with a pack is, of course, better. Calisthenics are also great.

Personally I favor the 50-minute hiking period followed by a ten-minute rest. The ideal, according to scientific researchers, is a 54-minute hike period and a six-minute rest. This is supposed to allow the body to dissipate the lactic acid that builds up in a muscle and makes it tired.

You should find, after keeping to a schedule, that you can find a pace that you can maintain for the required period. THIS IS YOUR BEST HIKING SPEED. It doesn't have to be fast. If it's steady you will make your best time.

The second tip I think has proved valuable to me is how to breathe.

Most of your hiking will be at a higher altitude than the one you live at (it can hardly be much lower). This means you need more oxygen just to stand, let alone walk. So, if you just breathe normally you are soon going to be out of breath, mainly because the average person uses only half to two-thirds of his lung capacity.

What to do about it? Why, breathe deeper, of course. But how?

Well, one way is to take short intakes of breath on each step. Try to do like musicians (horn types anyway) and singers do. Breathe deeply enough that you can feel your diaphragm push downward. This assures a full lungfull of air.

Then, and this is the important part, expel the air with one short burst. All of it. The idea is that while you are sucking air in, your lungs will be extracting the oxygen so do that as long as you can. When you expel the air the lung doesn't do anything to it so cut this short.

You may be sure that the person hiking in front of you or behind you will think you are huffing and puffing because you're out of shape. They may laugh. If they do, just keep this up until they run out of breath. And then you can laugh.

This actually works. Trust me. And try it.

Another piece of advice for first-time backpackers:

Make your first trip an easy one. Most people who are discouraged from the sport are discouraged because they just got too tired and miserable the first time out. Look on it as a test of your equipment and a familiarization trip.

The idea is to be able to stop when you feel like it instead of having to keep going when you're too tired and discouraged.

Those who want to go on in this sport can try rock climbing, snow camping, desert hiking (you carry your water), ski mountaineering, etc., but to do any of these you need some basic knowledge and experience in plain old backpacking.

If anyone is interested in reading about all phases of these sports, the best, most complete, and interesting book on the subject is "Freedom of the Hills" by the Seattle Mountaineers which is available at most backpacker sporting goods stores for $7.50. It's worth it if you're interested.

One final word.

I know I am going to make some old hands at this sport mad when I say it but I must.

I do not like the "peak baggers' philosophy" of mountaineering.

These are the people, if you don't know, whose main object in backpacking is to get to the top of the mountain in the shortest possible time and then getting down again even faster, making sure that along the way nobody ever stops to enjoy anything.

A few years ago I went with a bunch of these nuts down to Baja, California, and climbed a peak call Tres Palomas. All I saw during the three days it took to climb the damn thing was three feet of dirt (or rock) trail and the guy's heels in front of me.

When we came down, we ran. All I saw was the jiggling pack of the guy in front of me. They all acted like they had really done something because they were at the cars by 11 a.m. So what's so great about 11 a.m.?

Someday I'm going back down there and actually take a look at Tres Palomas. I've heard it's very pretty. □

RABBIT STEW

. . . or will the hare-ied citizens of Leisure World be forever in a stew over rabbits?

ILLUSTRATIONS BY BILL BUERGE.

By Robert E. Embry

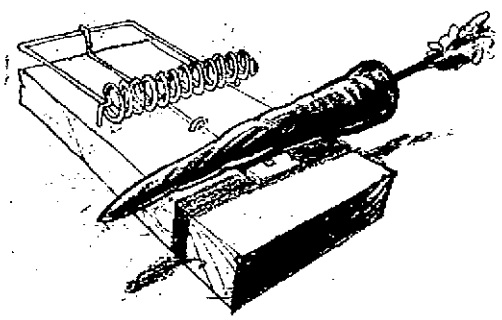

Leisure World is a retirement village for fairly well-off senior citizens. The richly vegetated Seal Beach community is also the home of many thousands of cottontail rabbits. Rabbits eat gardens and landscaping and sometimes have a try at trees.

There was peaceful coexistence though, until about 1968, when the retired folks noticed the rabbit population seemed to be increasing sharply.

Leisure World resident Mrs. C. J. Arend told Independent, Press-Telegram reporter Barbara Knesis that while the long-eared animals "are cute and a joy to our visiting grandchildren," they were also "destructive to patio rugs and cherished plants and flowers."

Mrs. Arend had put her finger on the dilemma — cuteness versus destructiveness. These were to become the battle flags for what, in retrospect, might overdramatically be termed the "Rabbit War."

Complaints about rabbit damage began building up around the ears of Cornelius Van Geest, who, as an apartment house manager at Leisure World, didn't have much choice but to listen. Van Geest is one of those classic living Horatio Alger stories. If the rabbits had known about Van Geest, they might have sued for peace before he put up his $1,000 reward for an amiable solution to the rabbit problem.

Van Geest came to America from Holland in 1913. He was 18, and couldn't understand why the lady from the Traveler's Aid Society told him he had maybe made a mistake. After all, he thought, a young man with 28 guilders in his pocket has a certain start on the game. That 28 guilders, which was worth $7, didn't mean much to Van Geest, who didn't speak English anyway.

In the next 50 years or so, he made a couple of fortunes in furniture, mobile homes and real estate. Now 78, his hair is white but thick on top, and still rides an unbowed six feet off the floor.

Cornelius Van Geest was going to put an end to this nonsense. What he faced, though, was not simply a rabbit problem, but also a certain people problem. A lot of people like rabbits.

Some of the roughly one-third of Leisure World's 11,000 residents which comprised the anti-rabbit faction was muttering about shooting or poisoning the toothy rodents.

The one-third that liked the rabbits was shocked and outraged by this apparently bloodthirsty attitude. After all, they noted, Leisure World's property used to be a beet field, and the rabbits were there first.

The other one-third wished everyone else would stop arguing.

Typical of the conflict was the plight of Bernard Ingles. As the director of physical property for one 384-apartment section, Ingles bought $40 worth of "popsicles," poison sticks to be planted in gardens for the rabbits.

"I thought that was just terrible," said his wife Joan. "They're so cute. They jump and play leapfrog. I told him he'd better not put any around our place."

Ingles tactfully refrained from installing a popsicle in his his own yard. "They didn't work very well, anyway," he said later. All that strife for nothing.

But elsewhere, battle lines were being drawn. In Leisure World's well-furnished clubhouses and over its golf links, voices were raised in argument. Blood pressures rose ominously. Canes were waved. Electric carts buzzed through the night toward coalition meetings.

Into the breach stepped Cornelius Van Geest. He saw that the only way to please almost everyone was to remove the rabbits from Leisure World without hurting them.

His first idea was to trap them in humane box traps and release them in the desert, where they could continue to live and breed in an environment of lesser affluence but greater peace.

He bought five traps for an experiment, but caught only one or two rabbits per week (also one possum, but then, that's another story).

Brooks Copeland, Leisure World's director of physical properties, once estimated there were two cottontails for every human resident. Trapping didn't seem to be the answer.

Van Geest, with his Horatio Alger energy and plenty of spare time on his hands, started writing letters seeking advice.

The animal physiology department of the University of California at Davis recommended an animal repellent called Repel. "It worked great," said Van Geest.

Unfortunately, Leisure World is surrounded by cinderblock walls. The rabbits ran away "great" from the yards of the people who were using Repel and right into the gardens of the people who weren't. The nonRepellers made an allusion to Sherman's march through Georgia and the fight was on again.

Dr. Jessamine Hilliard, UCLA's Woman of Science for 1970, replied: "Well, now, that rabbit situation in Leisure World does sound like a pretty meaty problem . . . have you considered buying a couple of foxes?"

The fertility and reproduction specialist went on to recommend, in a more serious vein, the use of six-chloro-delta-six-dehydro-17-acetooxyprogesterone, administered to each rabbit by stomach tube. Six-chloro-etcetera is a contraceptive.

Getting the rabbits to line up for their stomach tube thing seemed a little impractical, but the contraceptive idea was already becoming Van Geest's main hope. It had occurred to him that the perfect solution was not to attempt to drive the rabbits away (impossible), nor to kill them off (unpopular), but rather to simply de-reproduce them.

This was what Van Geest told Los Angeles newspaper and television reporters who came to Leisure World in the winter of 1970: "I will pay $1,000 to anyone who comes up with a Pill for rabbits. And I've got that $1,000, too," he assured them.

Letters to Van Geest opposing even his apparently reasonable defertility plan trickled in from Leisure World co-residents. One unsigned letter castigated him for "showing the public how to exterminate godly little creatures like bunnies," and recommended that he "take some of your chemicals and have them for your mealtime!"

Van Geest doesn't mind rabbits. But when you're 78 and still a hard-charger, you tilt at whatever windmills are left. "I like rabbits," says Van Geest. "I think they're very nice, very nice. But when you eat a T-bone steak, you don't worry about the cow that died, do you?"

Now, four years later, it looks like the Rabbit War has de-escalated. It also looks like the rabbits won.

"We've got just as many rabbits as ever," concludes Ingles, "but no more. The population has leveled off, stabilized." Copeland says that complaints about the rabbits have dwindled.

The $1,000 reward still stands. Cornelius Van Geest, former chairman of the board, not a tycoon but a God-fearing immigrant who says he made it on hard work and good luck, has met the enemy and they are stalemated.

The furor is over. The perforated plastic golf balls sail lazily over the links and the cards again spin over the tables in the clubhouses in an atmosphere of relaxed fellowship.

Van Geest has had to give up and go back to making money again. But the four bulging files on rabbits in his apartment office are by no means closed.

The rabbits are going to be around a while. But then, so is Cornelius Van Geest.

Watch out, rabbits! □

DREAM CAR

By Steve Ellingson

To make it run, just add one child and a dream. Here's a "bedmobile" you can create that's sure to make bedtime an irresistible call to the young set. In fact, once you put it in that bedroom, you may have created a built-in babysitter!

It looks for all the world like a sleek racing car, and you can make it as authentic as you want. Just add touches like an American flag and crossed checker flag decals. These, together with product decals (for fuel additives, etc.) can be obtained at many auto parts stores. The plan includes a big painted number on the sides and front of the car. The mattress is a standard size.

Built principally of plywood, the bedmobile is sturdy. Those hot-looking wheels are there for looks only . . . the bed actually rests on a strong frame. The tires are easily made from several layers of plywood, rounded with a file. Paint the car your child's favorite bright color and you've got a mean-looking candidate for any raceway.

So gentlemen (and ladies) . . . start your engines and rally for a real fun project. To order the bedmobile pattern number 502, send $2 (add 25c extra per pattern for airmail delivery) by currency, check or money order to:

LEON A. KOTOYANTZ
Early Bird Specials

It catches the light. It shimmers delightfully. It makes a great meal taste even better. Even the Bible approves of it, saying: "Wine that maketh glad the heart of man." (Psalms, CIV: 15).

A glass of wine is especially welcome if it's included with the dinner at no extra cost. That's why you'll notice more smiling faces these evenings at Alfred Restaurant, 700 E. 45th St., just east of Atlantic Avenue, long one of Long Beach's most distinguished dining and lunching establishments.

Recently Alfred's introduced "early bird" dinners which include a complimentary glass of red or white wine. These scrumptious dinners are served every night (including Sundays) from 4 to 6:30. Created by hosts Leon A. Kotoyantz and Armand H. Baltayan, they are colorful, generous affairs which prove once again that Alfred's is knowledgeable about all the arts which make dining out such a pleasure.

The "early bird" dinners, $3.95, include soup du jour and tossed green salad with gourmet dressing, baked potato, vegetable, ice cream or sherbet and beverage. Each night there is a choice of these seven entrees: rainbow trout with lemon butter, escalope of veal Princess with cheese and a wine sauce, broiled lobster tail, brochette of beef, coq au vin (chicken simmered in wine), baked sugar-cured ham with champagne sauce and the combination platter of Mexican specialities.

Everything at Alfred's has fresh, sparkling flavor because of the talent and dedication of its master chef, French-born Christian Bouissierre. His continental sauces are particularly good. The dinners on the regular menu, $3.95 to $6.95, emphasize such enchantments as coquille St. Jacques, a "symphony of sea foods," flaming shish-kebob, tournedoes of beef, scampi San Remo, fresh poached sea bass Louisianne, prime rib au jus and a selection of the finest steaks.

Alfred's (which will be closed July 4) is also renowned for its handling of wedding receptions, banquets and parties. Its upstairs banquet facilities accommodate groups to 250. Leon and Armand also do gourmet catering for parties in private homes, businesses and meeting halls.

GUIDE by Tedd Thomey

JUST LIKE the star of a TV or radio show, Vincenzo Cristiano often receives fan letter.

After dining on the delightful Italian cuisine at his restaurant, Nino's, 3853 Atlantic Ave., his guests return home feeling so fine that they sometimes sit right down and compose a letter expressing their thoughts.

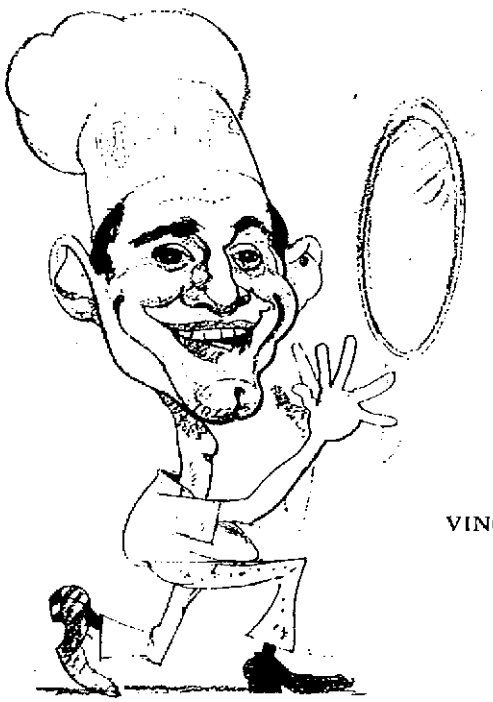

Some are so enthusiastic that they don't wait until they get home. One happy customer, K. V. Aboordian, penned the following words while at his table in Nino's: "We would like to express how pleased we are with the meal here tonight. It is a rare public house that is considerate enough to serve such an excellent meal in all aspects, from coffee to dessert. It is appreciated..."

I agree wholeheartedly. I have dined with my family numerous times at Nino's. Each time I marvel all over again at the fabulous flavors. Vincenzo, who is from Naples, Italy, happens to be a warm-hearted, generous man who is in love with this work. He is never happier than when laboring in his kitchen, creating his rich wine sauces with the freshest ingredients and such entrees as manicotti, lasagne, rigatoni Romano, linguini with clam sauce, chicken cacciatore, chicken Italiano, veal cutlet Milanese and four incredibly delectable varieties of veal scallopine.

Seen from the outside, Nino's isn't a pretentious place. But the inside is pleasant, attractive and inviting, consisting of a fairly large dining room decorated with a wishing well and scenes of Italy. The tables are topped with red-checked linen cloths and crisp white linen napkins.

The complete dinners, $2.95 to $4.95, are imaginative feasts, including many flavor contrasts, ranging from elaborate dishes of marinated appetizers, a big bowl of robust minestrone soup and fine lettuce-tomato salad to spaghetti, hot garlic bread, coffee and a wonderful peach melba dessert. Also featured are excellent wines.

Closed Tuesdays, Nino's serves from 4 p.m. on. Now in its 14th year, the restaurant is owned by Vince and his wife Inge. It is named in honor of the eldest of their three children, Nino, Mike and Carina. □

Medicine & You

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

The relatively new total hip replacement operation has become the treatment of choice for many sufferers from hip disease, according to an editorial in British Medical Journal.

The editorial takes note that the greatest threat to the success of the new operation is infection.

Because of the great concern about infection, the value of the special clean-air operating enclosure is receiving emphasis nowadays. Hospital after hospital is installing laminar air-flow equipment in operating rooms in an effort to reduce likelihood of infection.

The drug indomethacin and cortisone-like preparations play a role in the development of stomach ulcers in arthritis patients, British researchers report.

However, no serious ill effects have been reported among ulcer patients given ibuprofen or dextropropoxyphene and paracetamol (Distalgesic). These compounds are sometimes used in the treatment of arthritis.

The report is in Postgraduate Medical Journal, and also in Modern Medicine.

Infectious mononucleosis (glandular fever) is not supposed to recur, but frank recurrences appear to be fairly frequent, especially among athletes, a doctor notes.

Dr. George A. Sheehan of Red Bank, N.J., says that many distance runners clearly relate overtraining to development of either respiratory symptoms or symptoms akin to those of "mono."

Many patients report symptoms similar to the original attack while under stress conditions — fatigue, rash, swollen glands, joint pains, poor attention span, sleep disturbances and loss of appetite.

"Mono" has an "almost epidemic occurrence" in athletes who have been trained excessively and where coaches are known for their strenuous training programs, Dr. Sheehan says in a report in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

New animal studies indicate that the experimental drug DMSO appears to aid survival of victims of severe head injury.

DMSO — which stands for dimethyl sulfoxide — is ordinarily applied directly to the skin, but in these tests it was given by injection in a saline solution.

The drug appears to protect against neurologic complications, according to researchers at the University of Chicago Pritzker school of medicine.

Studies of the drug are also being conducted in animals with spinal-cord injuries and preliminary findings look "very promising."

DMSO is marketed only for use in veterinary medicine in the United States. However, it is being used for a variety of human conditions in Europe and South America.

The report is in Medical World News, newsmagazine for physicians.

Many physicians fail to recognize the characteristics of a disorder known as fifth disease, or sunshine disease, according to a report in the medical periodical Consultant.

Fifth disease is technically known as erythema infectiosum, a benign disorder believed caused by a virus. It has been called sunshine disease because it is aggravated by exposure to the sun.

The disorder usually occurs in youngsters aged 3 to 12 years, starting as a fiery red rash on the cheeks. A couple of days later the rash spreads to the arms, legs, neck and chest. The rash may come and go for the following three weeks.

A low-grade fever may also be present.

Complications are rare. No treatment is required.

Peptic ulcers, which attack 4,000 new victims each day, appear to be on the increase, according to a new medical report.

Author Theodore Berland explains the problem of ulcers in a new Public Affairs Committee pamphlet entitled "Peptic Ulcer — the Quiet Epidemic."

Ulcer patients are known to be unduly rough on themselves. To help keep an ulcer from recurring, Berland suggests the following rules to live by:

— Eat and drink in moderation.

— If you can't do something about a situation, stop worrying.

— If you can do something about it, do it — or ask George to do it.

— Don't bottle up your feelings. Blow your top occasionally.

— Get away from it all. Leave your work behind at your office. Get away on holidays and vacations as often as you can.

— Make realistic schedules for doing things, seeing people and getting from place to place.

— Enjoy your life and your family and your friends.

The booklet, which sells for 25 cents, is No. 472 in the Public Affairs Pamphlet series. Write: Public Affairs Committe, Inc., 381 Park Avenue South, New York, N.Y. 10016. □

AT MOSCOW BALLET: SECRETARY OF STATE ROGERS, KOSYGIN, NIXON, PODGORNY, MRS. NIXON AND MRS. BREZHNEV. WHERE WAS MR. BREZHNEV?

Q. When President and Mrs. Nixon were in the Soviet Union recently they attended the Swan Lake ballet in Moscow. Newspaper accounts said that Leonid Brezhnev, chief of the Communist Party, refused to go to the ballet with them and sent his wife instead. Is this true? If so, why?—R.T.E., Washington, D.C.

A. There are three Russian versions explaining Brezhnev's absence from the Bolshoi Theater on the night of May 25, 1972: 1. Brezhnev was hard at work with his aides thrashing out the details of the Strategic Arms Limitation Agreement with the United States. 2. Brezhnev said to his wife: "Viktoria, I've seen that damn 'protocol ballet' two hundred times. Now it's your turn." 3. Brezhnev is a football (soccer) fanatic and insisted upon staying home that night to watch on television the Soviet Olympic Soccer Team defeat the French Soccer Team, 3 to 1. Most probably there is some truth to all three versions.

Q. Why is it that whenever Henry Kissinger appears on television his voice is never heard?—Mae Klein, Buffalo, N.Y.

A. Kissinger speaks with the slightest German accent which serves to emphasize his Dr. Strangelove image, which is not an image the White House cares to convey. Actually, there is no good reason for eliminating Kissinger's voice from telecasts since he is undoubtedly the most witty, worth hearing, colorful, and knowledgeable man in the Nixon Administration.

Q. Who are the Hollywood stars who want Agnew to remain as Vice President on the Republican Party ticket?—Murray Marx, Elkton, Md.

A. Agnew's most avid Hollywood supporters are Bob Hope, Frank Sinatra, Ray Bolger, Hugh O'Brian, Jimmy Stewart, Chuck Connors, Cesar Romero, Eva Gabor, Rhonda Fleming, and Frankie Avalon, all of whom a few weeks ago turned up in Baltimore for "Salute to Ted Agnew Night."

Q. I have heard that Ralph Nader offered Harold Geneen of ITT a job as a summer intern on one of the Nader task forces. Has Geneen accepted it? –Lola Vincent, Seattle, Wash.

A. No such offer to date has been made by Nader to Geneen.

NADER

GENEEN

Q. Marina Oswald Porter, widow of Lee Harvey Oswald who assassinated President John F. Kennedy—how much did the government give her for having confiscated Oswald's personal possessions?—T.R., San Antonio, Tex.

A. The Federal Government paid Marina Oswald Porter $3800 for her husband's personal possessions —marriage license, notes, diary, family photographs, and so forth. Mrs. Oswald claims, however, that they were worth about $400,000 on the collector's market.

ASSASSIN'S WIDOW, MARINA OSWALD PORTER.

Q. Is it true that Richard Nixon will go anywhere to lay a wreath? I have in mind his 16,000-mile trip to Austria, the Soviet Union, Iran, and Poland in which he laid wreaths everywhere.—Henry Allen Jones, Charleston, S.C.

A. When President Nixon lays a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in some foreign country he does so to fulfill a diplomatic nicety. The primary purpose of his travels is not wreath-laying; it is the improvement of U.S. relationships with other countries.

Q. What is Warren Beatty's position in the McGovern campaign, and what will be his payoff should McGovern triumph?—Olive Theron, Richmond, Va.

A. Beatty raises funds for Sen. George McGovern by convincing show-business personalities to donate their time and talent in money-raising programs. To date Beatty has raised more than a million dollars in campaign funds. Should McGovern win the Presidency Beatty might one day be rewarded with the U.S. ambassadorship to Chad.

WARREN BEATTY HELPS RAISE McGOVERN SIGN.

Q. Has Frank Sinatra lost his voice? Has he grown paunchy and double-chinned?—Mildred Leavitt, Madison, Wis.

A. Sinatra at 56 is moon-faced, lined, balding and a bit heavier than he was in his youth. He has not lost his voice but his voice has lost much of the quality which made it one of the great pop voices of the 1940's, '50's and even '60's.

VICTOR LOUIS

HENRY KISSINGER

KISSINGER-LOUIS TALKS

On Nov. 13, 1971, at 9:05 a.m., Victor Louis, a controversial Soviet journalist with contacts in the highest echelons of the Kremlin and its security apparatus, the KGB, entered the northwest guardhouse of the White House.

To the guard who asked his business, Louis explained that he had an appointment with Dr. Henry Kissinger. The guard phoned Kissinger's secretary, confirmed the appointment, then asked Louis for some identification.

The journalist showed him his British driver's license and was admitted.

For the next two hours, Victor Louis and Henry Kissinger discussed Soviet-American affairs and the various personalities involved therein. Their conversation was unknown to Soviet Ambassador Anatoli Dobrynin and to Richard Nixon, although Kissinger later told Nixon of the talk.

What did Kissinger and Louis, supposedly the most knowledgeable journalist in the Soviet Union, talk about? Neither party will reveal the details except to acknowledge that the conversation took place. It may well be, however, that Louis helped open the Kremlin's door to Kissinger's subsequent secret visit to Brezhnev this past April.

In any event, Kissinger, the master debriefer, leaves no stone unturned, no source unprobed, in his effort to determine what is going on in high places. His single major failure, to date, has been his inability to understand the North Vietnamese mind, although he has debriefed almost every American journalist who has pulled a stint in Hanoi.

WHOM DO YOU TRUST?

In a recent psychological survey, the answers given by over 400 people may cause considerable embarrassment for some members of our power structure.

For example, in a study of public attitudes toward 20 major occupations, only used car salesmen rank lower than politicians in terms of public trust. This was the conclusion of a team of University of Connecticut psychologists, Profs. Julian B. Rotter and Donald K. Stein (now at the University of South Florida).

All of us are continuously faced with the problem of trusting others, the psychologists point out in their report published in the "Journal of Applied Psychology."

The psychologists rated the 20 occupations on three counts: truthfulness, competence, and altruism.

Professionals such as physicians, clergymen, dentists and judges ranked high. So did college professors, psychologists and psychiatrists, even though they are often the subject of jokes. Yet, the public considers them more competent, altruistic and truthful than successful businessmen, Army generals, or newspaper columnists.

What happens when we suddenly stop trusting each other? One shocking example occurred back in the 1950's when people in the U.S. had a hysterical wave of building fallout shelters.

Some people started buying guns to keep their own neighbors out of their fallout shelters.

A fascinating find of other recent studies is that trust and truthworthiness are closely related. The professors point out that the less trusting an individual is, the more likely he is to lie or to deceive others.

One finding that is backed by generally reported events is a drop in trust by college students in politicians and other power groups within our society.

What other groups are at the bottom? The study shows that ranking barely above used car salesmen and politicians on truthfulness, are labor union officials and auto repairmen.

The professors think there is something ominous in the poor regard shown for people who run our government, from city officials up to U.S. Senators.

What's the message from these findings?

The two psychologists believe the answer is relatively simple. "If you want someone to trust you, you have to tell them the truth." However difficult this may be for politicians, they say, it is the only road to credibility.

Here are the rankings on the basis of truthfulness only:

1. Physicians
2. Clergymen
3. Dentists
4. Judges
5. Psychologists
6. College professors
7. Psychiatrists
8. High school teachers

COMPUTER TERMINAL IN PATROL CAR FILLS IN INFORMATION ON BURGLARY SUSPECT IN TWO SECONDS.

ANTI-CRIME SPEED UP

In Kansas City, Mo., the police are making ever more sophisticated use of computers in combating crime. Last year, for example, they set up an IBM computer in headquarters and crammed it full of information--licenses of stolen and criminal-owned cars, crime-prone street addresses, criminal records of individuals and thousands of other facts.

Until recently, officers in patrol cars called by voice radio to a headquarters dispatcher who consulted the computer and answered the query by voice back to the car--the net interval being only some seven seconds.

Now, this interval has been reduced to an astonishing two seconds by eliminating the middleman--the dispatcher at headquarters. In a series of tests, patrol cars have been fitted with keyboards that communicate directly to the computer. The cop in the field types out his request and the information appears.

The accompanying photograph, taken from inside the patrol car, shows the keyboard, the small screen and, in background, an officer who was given an edge over a suspect because the computer told him in two seconds that the building involved was one of repeated criminal activity.

THE NEW IMPOTENCE

Sexual impotence is on the rise among young American males, according to a team of psychiatrists at New York University's School of Medicine, and Women's Lib may be responsible.

Drs. George Ginsberg, William Frosch and Theodore Shapiro, describing "the new impotence" in "the Archives of General Psychiatry," explain that sexual liberation for women may result in impotence for men. While women are abandoning the double standard, the imperative of "waiting until the wedding," the Victorian image of passive submission to the male's importunate sexual demands, more and more men are complaining of "being used," of not being desired for themselves.

"Formerly," Drs. Ginsberg, Frosch and Shapiro write, "patients with impotence were for the most part married men who gradually began to withdraw sexually from their wives. They complained that the excitement had passed and that their wives no longer provided the variety in sexual practices they craved. Impotence was accompanied by minimal anxiety: they usually had conscious fantasies about the secretary at work, the girl next door, etc., and felt confident that novel objects or practices could revive their interest."

The "new" impotence, however, results in greater anxiety and occurs among younger men, who blame "these newly freed women" who "demand sexual performance." "Currently," the psychiatrists write, "young men describe failures occurring early in their relationships. Following such early failures they become preoccupied with its meaning to their manhood... humiliation and lowering of self-esteem occur.

"Although for some the new 'sexual freedom' may indeed be liberating," they conclude, "for others it merely induces different symptoms rather than improved mental health."

DEPRESSED BABIES

Next time you see a baby with a furrowed brow, just put it down to worry, not premature aging.

A leading Swiss child psychiatrist, Dr. Marie Meierhofer, says that children are very susceptible to depression in the first year of their lives "because they are extremely sensitive to change. It is hard for them to adapt to new people and new surroundings."

Dr. Meierhofer, who filmed 500 babies of working mothers in Zurich nurseries, told "Medical Tribune" that depressed infants exhibited the following symptoms: a low level of activity, apparent apathy, and a typical expression consisting of compressed lips and often a wrinkled forehead. They frequently cry and cover their eyes when they are approached.

According to Dr. Meierhofer, depression in the first months of life is almost exclusively due to isolation.

WHAT'S A WIFE WORTH?

How much is a housewife worth?

If you had to pay a worker to do the cooking, cleaning, shopping, laundry and other jobs performed by the typical wife and mother of two children, how much would it cost you?

In England, where wage scales are lower than in the U.S., a housewife is worth $177 a week or $9204 yearly.

These are the figures provided by a team of management consultants for the British Broadcasting Corporation.

The consultants monitored the work-week of Mrs. Iris Gobin, 36-year-old housewife and mother of two children, an 11-year-old boy and an 8-year-old girl. They found she worked an 85-hour week, including 11.6 hours cleaning, 7.2 hours laundry, 6.4 hours shopping, 31 hours as a "catering manageress," 4 hours as "planning manager and public relations executive." At going rates, Mrs. Gobin would earn about as much as her husband, a makeup artist for a woman's magazine.

"The only way I could pay her," Mark Gobin replied when confronted with the evidence, "is to stop smoking, stop drinking, stop everything, really."

"I don't think my husband has recovered from the shock," Mrs. Gobin comments. "Needless to say, he doesn't give me $177 a week. In fact, I haven't got an extra penny from him on my housekeeping, but I think with this report I ought to put in a claim."

Miami Beach Mayor Chuck Hall (left) and Yippie leader Abbie Hoffman are working together to avoid Chicago-style confrontations and turmoil of four years ago.

What Miami Is Doing To Head Off Convention Trouble

by Michael Drosnin

MIAMI BEACH, FLA.

A dapper, silver-haired gentleman strides into the headquarters of the Youth International Party (Yippies). He claps hands, revolutionary style, with Abbie Hoffman and Jerry Rubin and jokes, "What's the matter? I don't smell any pot."

The distinguished visitor is Miami Beach Mayor, Chuck Hall, and the last thing he wants is a replay of Chicago, 1968. At the moment he may feel more like a ringmaster than a mayor. His resort city, usually quiet in the summer off-season, has become a three-ring circus.

Inside the big top, Democrats and Republicans will hold their Presidential nominating conventions.

Scene stealers

But out on the streets an assortment of demonstrators, ranging from welfare mothers to gay activists, will be trying to steal the show just as protesters did in Chicago four years ago.

An advance party of Chicago veterans has been scouting Miami since mid-May. They have made arrangements for ten days of war protests, rock music performances and guerrilla theater productions during the convention double header. They assert there will be 100,000 dissidents on hand to greet the Democrats on July 10.

Miami police, although prepared to step in to maintain order, hope to watch the planned "Celebration of Change" — a combination counterculture world's fair and political rally — from a distance through a closed-circuit television system with zoom lens.

Among the "programs" they may see is a massive "smoke-in." But Mayor Hall says police "will be too busy doing important things to go through the crowds arresting marijuana smokers."

The radicals are distributing a Miami Survival Manual written by Ed Sanders, author of a book on Charles Manson. The guide offers advice on everything from sunburns to jellyfish. One suggestion: "Don't walk barefoot. The streets in Miami are hot enough to toast a bagel."

The focus will be on Vietnam, but marches will also protest taxation, racism, and sexism.

Violence is not on the agenda. "We don't want street riots in Miami," says Abbie Hoffman, whose Yippies mockingly supported a 200-pound pig for president in Chicago. "If we're 500 running through the streets screaming, we'll only hurt McGovern."

"Peaceful direct action beneath the summer sun of blue-watered Miami Beach," proclaims a radical handbill that might have been prepared by the Chamber of Commerce. "Ten Days to Change the World: July 10-14, August 20-24. Come on down!" [Actually, the official Republican Convention dates are Aug. 21-23.]

Campsite ready

In the same spirit, city officials are providing a campsite—in contrast to Chicago, where police battled demonstrators for control of the parks each night—as well as essential sanitation, medical services, food, and water.

"This community has invited two national conventions, and the delegates have all the regular facilities tied up," explains Dade County Manager Ray Goode. "That can't be used as an excuse to deny services to other people who have an equal right to be here.

"Besides," adds Goode, "you can't incite a happy group. Hungry, hot, thirsty people can be turned into a mob."

Police, meanwhile, have been spending more time in group therapy sessions than in riot training. Miami Beach Police Chief Rocky Pomerance hired seven psychologists, a psychiatrist, and a few philosophy professors. They have police participating in "self-awareness" groups, and listening to lectures about "The Historical Background and Ideology of Dissent."

Says one of the psychologists: "I think the police came away with a more realistic perception of these kids. "They now see that force isn't the only answer —that they can just laugh it off when a Jerry Rubin threatens that 10,000 naked hippies will march downtown."

Instead of barbed wire, Miami's sprawling convention hall is protected by what city officials like to call a "trellis"—actually a five-foot-high chain-link fence half hidden by hibiscus plants.

Diversions planned

And no one is more eager to keep the peace than the Democrats, who saw their 1968 conclave torn asunder by the bloody street fighting. Richard J. Murphy, convention manager, has been meeting for months with protest leaders. His party is sponsoring a series of diversions for the street people, including a 24-hour-a-day youth reception center, a free speech area in nearby Flamingo Park, complete with stage and amplification system, and a free country and western music concert.

One imaginative approach, suggested to defuse any disruptions, is the creation of a "convention peace corps" of 100 youths who are "nonaggressive, alert, bright, level-headed, pleasant and somewhat diplomatic."

According to Councilman Leonard Haber, who is also a psychologist, "We want to involve in the corps a lot of young people who might easily establish a dialogue with demonstrators to keep expressions of dissent within legal bounds . . ."

Nevertheless, Miami is in for more than a beach party. As one experienced organizer put it, "Mass demonstrations are like conventional politics—nothing ever happens the way it's planned." And much sought-after harmony between authorities and dissidents may sour if too many protesters stay on in Miami during the five weeks between the conventions.

The Miami Convention Coalition, a confederation of anti-war forces, womens' libbers, gay activists, and other underground factions, has announced plans for civil disobedience at the conventions and delegate hotels.

While they claim these will be nonviolent, their street journal, the "Carpetbag Express," warns, "Nixon and the Republican Party cannot escape a massive confrontation in August."

The Yippies, for their part, say they plan a peaceful "Celebration of Change" on a nearby golf course. "Miami is going to be a cross between Woodstock and Chicago," says Abbie Hoffman. If so, the Democrats are likely to see more of the Woodstock side, while the Republicans may well get a taste of Chicago.

Different goals

"We're here to influence the Democrats and confront the Republicans," confides a Yippie woman with blonde hair falling to her waist.

Adding to the uncertainty are numerous independent groups and nonaligned youths expected in Miami, too. The Black Panthers are organizing a whistle-stop campaign train from Oakland in support of black Presidential hopeful Shirley Chisholm. The National Welfare Rights Organization is planning a massive poor people's march, with members begging "spare change" from convention delegates. Women's liberation militants will picket the Playboy Plaza Hotel. Add Wallace supporters, and antagonized local residents, including volatile Cuban refugees, and the factions could become an explosive mix.

Miami officials, so fearful of threatened hordes that they approved the GOP convention bid by only one vote, are taking no chances.

Riot blueprint

While Mayor Hall says he won't allow his city to be turned into an armed camp, he already has in hand a riot control blueprint that could seal off Miami Beach from the mainland by blocking the bridges.

While Police Chief Pomerance will deploy only 650 uniformed officers - his own 240-man force and reinforcements from the state, county, and neighboring cities—he can call on Florida National Guardsmen put under his command by Gov. Reubin Askew.

In addition, thousands of Federal troops are on standby alert in Miami Stadium, 15 miles across the bay. Police boats will cruise Indian Creek, guards will be posted on rooftops, and every time a candidate leaves his closely guarded hotel suite, a Secret Service helicopter will hover overhead.

The FBI is supplying local police with intelligence reports, and is watching all incoming transportation to keep count of the demonstrators and to survey their activities. In short, Miami will be saturated with agents of every description, including Army bomb-control experts, Bureau of Narcotics and military intelligence officers, all in plainclothes.

Inside the convention hall, about 300 private security guards will check all who pass through the gates. There are reports that the main podium will be armor-plated.

Crowd-control experts have been shipped in from Washington, D.C., Miami police are trained in mass arrest procedures, and the court system is ready to handle a huge caseload if necessary.

No confrontation

"We're going to maintain a low profile," insists Rocky Pomerance. Miami does not want to face down the demonstrators. Chicago tried, and failed.

The number of youths on their way to Miami is impossible to predict. But it is important to remember that there were never more than 2500 from out of town demonstrating in Chicago, and none of them was able to get within miles of the barbed-wire-surrounded convention hall. And yet, when they chanted before the television cameras, "The whole world is watching . . ." they were right.

In addition to riot control, Miami police prepare for the national conventions at behavioral science class. They also attend "self-awareness" group sessions.

Chicago veterans meet at Miami Yippie office to plan their "Celebration of Change"—a combined world's fair and political rally keyed to non-violence.

Whether flying her hot-air balloon or helping scuba divers in Bahamas, Sandy Smith of New York's Chalet Club adds pizzazz to the leisure-time boom in adventurous pursuits and travel to exotic spots.

Girl Guide For Thrill-Seekers

by Josh Eppinger III

Grand Canyon rapids-running turned Sandy Smith into a daring adventurer.

NEW YORK, N.Y.

Sandy Smith sells adventure—up in a balloon, on the rapids of the Colorado River, underwater in the Bahamas, on a horse in Wyoming's Shoshone Wilderness, on a schooner off Martha's Vineyard, and on East African safaris.

She's a new leisure-time purveyor, tapping the American armchair adventurer, who, according to recent statistics, has more personal income, more free time to spend it in, and more equipment to do it with than ever before. In a year in which there's considerable concern about inflation, tax burdens and political scrambling, people are spending their leisure-time dollars to parachute out of airplanes, float down rivers, and travel to obscure and exotic spots. This year, 6.3 million Americans are expected to go abroad, spending $7.5 billion in the process.

Everything is possible. You can trek across the world's highest mountain range, the Himalayas, with Mountain Travel. Or join a field study of the Hambukusku people in Botswana for three weeks, courtesy of Educational Expeditions International. Lindblad Travel will deposit you with prehistoric iguanas on the Galapagos Islands.

Sandy Smith works for the Chalet Club, a New York outfit that provides its 5000 members across the country with "I've got to do that, someday" experiences. Its president, Buddy Bombard—a five-feet-four dynamo who has crewed on four America's Cup defenders—will, at the drop of a hat, give an energetic pitch about his club: "a living National Geographic," "a continual Earth Day," "a cassette vacation for people who don't want to thread the tape themselves."

A different job

Bombard has people like Sandy Smith around to do the threading—young, attractive, energetic, and drawn to their jobs both by Bombard's enthusiasm, and by the opportunity to do "something different." Sandy is one of the few licensed women balloon pilots in the country—not what one would expect of Sandra Prescott Smith, 24, product of a financier father and orchid-raising mother, boarding schools, Briarcliff College and a year abroad at the University of Grenoble in France.

Before she strayed from the predictable path, Sandy was a workaday Manhattan secretary, spending her vacations in the Florida sun with her family. Her most ambitious endeavor had been a summer stint at the age of 18, selling ice cream from an old truck in Nantucket.

What really changed her life was the Grand Canyon. Friends talked her into taking a nine-day, 300-mile raft trip through the Canyon on the Colorado River, shooting the biggest rapids in the country. "That trip opened up a whole new way of life," she says. "I suddenly realized I had been living my life like a 50-year-old woman. There was something almost spiritual about the experience—the excitement and the serenity—that led me to a discovery of myself."

She later wrote to a friend, "The Colorado River trip . . . it's butterflies in your stomach, squeals of delight, or is it terror? . . . it's wondering whether you're really up for this adventure . . . it's becoming speechless with beauty, wild about nature . . . it's a new love . . . it's lying awake under the moon and stars . . . it's falling in love with life again."

Up, up and away

The euphoria soon carried her into the air—in an open cockpit Stearman biplane with the pilot performing loops, snap rolls, and other aerial insanities. "After that number," Sandy says, "I just had to learn how to fly a plane"—and she did, the following weekend.

Skystruck, she abandoned the 9-to-5 routine and struck out in December, 1970, for Aspen, Colo., and the Chalet Club's 75-foot high, 50-foot wide, blue-and-white striped hot-air balloon.

"The first time I saw that balloon inflate, my mouth just watered," she says. "To see it rise, and take shape is terribly exciting."

Balloonists are subject to whim of the winds and can't always get back to where they came from. Here, above Sun Valley, Idaho, Sandy Smith controls hot-air craft.

She spent the next month and a half learning all the rudiments of ballooning including rigging, inflating, lifting off and landing and earning a pilot's license after 12 hours of tethered flight, four hours' free flight, and a three-hour written exam.

Even a monster watch

Meanwhile Chalet, a casual ski-club Bombard inherited in 1964, blossomed into a can-you-top-this venture. In addition to the routine outings, there were balloon trips over the Alps, dog-sled travel in Wyoming, even a Loch Ness monster watch. "We created a vehicle to do everything I ever wanted to do in life," Bombard says. "I get a tremendous satisfaction in taking people who say 'I can't do it' and getting them through it."

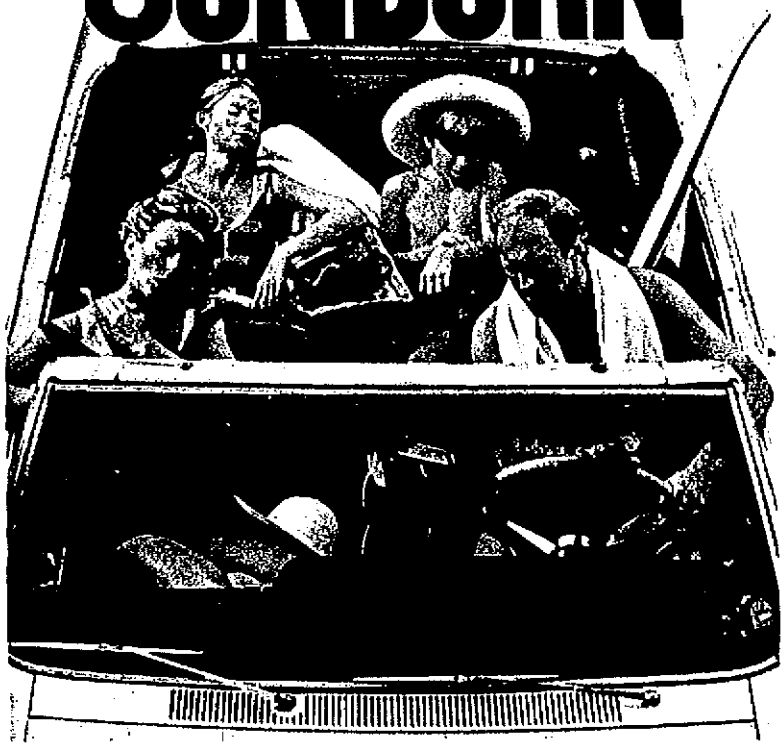

Sandy Smith, when not taking passengers up in the balloon, assists on Colorado River trips, Wyoming pack trips, schooner voyages, canoeing, hiking, scuba diving, and on safaris. "I know my life has changed," she says. "I don't think I could manage a 9-to-5 day, and I couldn't marry a man who'd expect me to sit home. I've got to be doing things."

Her perfect future would be life on a farm with horses, a glider, and plenty of time to float over the countryside in a pink and green balloon with SANDY SMITH embroidered on it.

The Colorado River rapids provide thrills for adventure-seeking people who are, in ever-larger numbers, looking to spend their money on out-of-ordinary recreations.

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

TEEN "FIREFIGHTER" SHOWS CHILDREN HAZARDS OF PLAYING WITH MATCHES.

Teenage Firefighters

The often hostile and violent relationship between a fire department and the inner city neighborhood it serves has been considerably smoothed in Rochester, N.Y., through a program called Firefighters Involving Teenagers.

Thirty inner city youths, ranging from 16-year-olds to college students, are spending this summer working with the Rochester Fire Department doing everything except putting out fires.

The program, in its fourth year, is funded by Xerox Corporation and administered by Rochester Jobs, Inc., a non-profit organization aimed at job development for the disadvantaged.

Rochester Fire Commissioner John F. Hurley says FIT serves as a two-way street. "We want our guys to get to know these kids and the kids to know the firefighters."

Two Puerto Rican teenagers are working as interpreters at the department's dispatch center, and teaching firefighters key Spanish phrases. Four FIT members are patrolling their own neighborhoods with a retired fire captain — following up false alarms, distributing posters, helping on inspections, informing residents of fire hazards. Others ride with battalion chiefs on calls, perform clerical tasks at the Fire Training Academy, fill oxygen tanks, color-code hydrants, service vehicles, prepare building inspection cards and repair small appliances. FIT member Nancy Postwaite coordinates attendance and payroll records.

Commissioner Hurley credits the program with reducing Rochester's false alarm rates and feels the firemen themselves have a changed attitude toward the people they serve. The gap is closing.

Migrant School Van

A 21-foot camper van is cruising around the southern part of Colorado these days carrying a cargo of Spanish and English books, films, tapes, slides, projectors, screens, recorders, and large supplies of insight and expertise.

The van is operated by Southern Colorado State College and is one of three sponsored by the Colorado Department of Education to help public schools with programs for migrant workers' children.

In addition to supplying tests for measuring students' skills and achievements, the van carries screening devices for testing children's eyesight, or detecting hearing problems. The vans operate year round to improve educational opportunities for those migrant children who have unfortunately been neglected by the nation's schools.

Spare That Eagle

As part of the effort to save the vanishing bald eagle, the National Wildlife Federation offers a $500 reward for information leading to the conviction of anyone who shoots a bird.

Recently, 19-year-old Gary Buss of Colfax, Wis., received a reward after witnessing the shooting of a young eagle in a tree near his home. Buss intercepted the rifleman, notified the U.S. Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife, and the defendant was later fined $100 in a Madison Federal Court.

That particular bald eagle fortunately survived the blast, responded to treatment by an ornithologist, and was released two months later near a wildlife refuge.

Experts now estimate that as few as 3000 to 4000 of our national symbols remain because of the continuing decimation by hunters and lethal pesticides.

My Favorite Jokes

by Henny Youngman

EDITOR'S NOTE: In the beginning of his show business career, Henny Youngman was with a band called the Swance Syncopators, playing for dances and weddings. Those were the days when heckling was an expected part of the comedian's routine, and Henny found himself caught up. "Sometimes," he says, "I would stop playing and comment about people in the audience. If some lady had a funny hat on, I would say, 'Is that your hat, lady, or did you just rent a cabana?' Of course, heckling's been out of style for years, but I sometimes find myself doing it. I might say to someone who's troublesome while I'm on stage—'if you have your life to live over again, do it overseas, will you?' "

Youngman's first big break was a three-year stint on the Kate Smith radio show. From there he went on to top clubs and TV shows; tossing out fast one-liners with aplomb. He also carries a fiddle which he sometimes plays. "I play my fiddle two ways—with pleasure or revenge," and he then explains, "Jack Benny and I both studied with Nero."

Youngman will be making regular TV appearances this season on Laugh-In.

Here are some jokes from his stockpile:

A fellow walked up to me and said, "Give me $10 till pay day." I asked, "When's pay day?" He said, "You ought to know. You're the one that's working!"

I worked with a bunch of chorus girls once. I was in one dressing room, they were in the next. There was a little hole in the wall. I let them look.

A fellow's going to the electric chair. The warden says, "You can have anything you want for dinner. What would you like?" The fellow says, "Mushrooms." Warden asks, "Why mushrooms?" The fellow says, "I was always afraid to eat them."

People ask me how I've stayed married for so long—44 years. Here's the secret: My wife and I go to a lovely, romantic restaurant twice a week. A little candlelight, a little wine. She goes Tuesdays, I go Thursdays!

My son is at the awkward stage. He likes to park but he doesn't know why.

Folks, if you must drink while you drive make sure you turn the radio up loud—you won't hear the crash.

Here are some heckles I like: Why don't you freeze your teeth and give your tongue a sleigh ride?

You'll make some money someday—your ignorance is commercial.

The last time I saw you you were in a nightmare.

I bet you have no more friends than an alarm clock?

I hate your face—both of them.

I looked high and low for you. I didn't look low enough.

One fellow meets another and says, "Now I want you to do the following: Take this bag, go into a bank, go up to a teller and tell her this is a holdup. Take all the money and put it in this bag, back out. If anybody goes near you, shoot to kill. When you get out the door give me all the money—I'll be sitting in the car—and remember, I'll be taking all the chances!" The other fellow listens, and then says, "You want me to go into the bank, hold up the teller, put the money in the bag, if anybody gets in the way I shoot—I come out and give the money to you—and you say you're taking all the chances! How?" Answers the other: "I can't drive."

A man won $100,000 in the lottery. He's on his way to his doctor when his wife learns the news. She calls the doctor and says, "Look, when my husband gets there don't spring the news abruptly; it may give him a heart attack. So you tell him in your own gentle way. Well, the doctor said to his patient, "What would you do if you won $100,000?" The man replied, "I'd give you half." So the doctor had the heart attack.

Milton Berle hasn't got one enemy—he's outlived them all.

Georgie Jessel's had a lot of trouble lately. He went out in the rain and his medals rusted.

My wife wanted her face lifted. They couldn't do that. But for $80 they lowered her body.

So you want to know how to beat the first four races at the track? Don't show up till the fifth.

A holdup man comes out of the theater, points a gun at the cashier and says, "I didn't like the picture—give me everybody's money back!"

My wife knows a beauty shop that makes your hair curly for only 49 cents. They stick your finger in the light socket.

To quote the director of the Internal Revenue Service—"Show me a man who can laugh at himself and I'll show you a man with no entertainment expenses."

It's to Laugh

G. DOLE

"Of course I can stop gambling—what odds will you give me?"

"I lost two pounds worrying that my new reducing diet wouldn't work."

TERRY AND THE PIRATES

by GEORGE WUNDER

JENNIE JO IS UNABLE TO TALK THE JAPANESE OUT OF REVIVING HIS PRIVATE WAR WITH HER HUSBAND.

MRS. CHANTRY, IT IS MY SINCERE HOPE TO RECAPTURE MY SWORD IN COMBAT WITHOUT MAKING YOU A WIDOW.

MR. BENODA, IN AN ODD SORT OF WAY, YOU'RE SWEET.

I FEEL HONOR-BOUND TO MAKE NO AGGRESSIVE MOVE UNTIL YOU HAVE INFORMED MR. CHANTRY THAT I AM UNABLE TO ACCEPT HIS OFFER. GOOD DAY, MRS. CHANTRY.

OBOY! HE'S AS BULLHEADED AS SPUR! SERVE THEM RIGHT IF I LET THEM GO TO IT. ONLY I'M SO USED TO BEING IGNORED BY SPUR, I'D FEEL IGNORED IF I WASN'T BEING IGNORED BY SPUR.

GOT TO THINK OF SOMETHING SENSIBLE— HEY! COULD WORK— AND IF IT DID, I'D HAVE SOMETHING TO DEFLATE THE CHANTRY EGO WITH FOR THE REST OF OUR LIVES!

WELL, WELL! IF HERE ISN'T THE LADY PEACE MAKER! GET TIRED OF BARGING AROUND THE BOONDOCKS ON YOUR LONESOME, JENNIE JO?

OH, I RAN INTO MR. BENODA, SPUR. NICE FELLA, BUT HE WON'T BUY YOUR DEAL.

FOR A SUCCESSFUL BUSINESSMAN, HE'S VERY SENTIMENTAL. HUNG UP ON HIS FAMILY'S OLD SAMURAI TRADITION. YOU CAN'T GIVE HIM BACK HIS SWORD, HE'S GOT TO TAKE IT AWAY FROM YOU.

SO THAT'S THE WAY HE WANTS IT, EH? FINE WITH ME! YOU TWO MAKE YOURSELVES COMFORTABLE. THIS MAY TAKE A LITTLE WHILE.

DEAR LADY, I HAVE A FOOLISHLY IDEALISTIC IMPULSE TO FOLLOW THE BOSS, PROTECT HIM. HE HASN'T PAID ME YET.

A NOBLE THOUGHT, FYFFE, BUT I HAVE A BETTER IDEA.

INDEED, JENNIE JO? AND HOW DO WE KEEP SPUR CHANTRY FROM BECOMING THE LAST CASUALTY OF WORLD WAR II?

THERE'S ONLY ONE PRACTICAL WAY, GOLDEN BOY. MR. BENODA HAS GOT TO WIN!
